ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, February 28, 1865.

"THE GROANS OF THE BRITONS."

SINCE the melancholy time when our forefathers so piteously complained that the barbarians drove them to the sea, and that the sea inhospitably drove them back upon the barbarians, no such direful lamentations have been heard to issue from British throats as are now poured forth by the officers of her Majesty's late Indian armies. Day by day petitions are presented to the House of Commons, complaining of a cruel breach of faith, and praying for prompt redress, but it is to be regretted that the petitioners are not more perfectly agreed as to the nature of the grievances from which they collectively suffer. The wrongs upon which they chiefly dwell are those which affect each individual separately, but some of which are an undoubted benefit to a great many of their comrades. This disagreement may, however, be partly due to the circumstance that comparatively few appear to have a very clear idea of what it is they have to complain. In a vague way they tell you that Sir Charles Wood has not kept faith with them, that Parliamentary guarantees have been violated, that old men block up the way to promotion, that young men are popped over their heads, and that the service has gone to the—well, let us say, to the dogs. The editor of the Hurkaru is, therefore, entitled to the gratitude of all who are incapable of discovering, or expressing, their own grievances, for in the handsomest manner in the world he has drawn up a catalogue raisonné of their wrongs, besides prompting them as to what they should ask for, and in what form of words they should set forth their plaint. Of course, the first thing they have to do is to subscribe a good round sum of money to cover expenses, such as fees to eminent counsel and other incidental and accidental charges. And it happens, very unfortunately, that the Bengal officers are singularly backward with their pecuniary subscriptions, as compared with their comrades in the two other armies. Of 142 petitions sent in prior to the present Session only 22 were from Bengal, and while Bombay gave £640 and Madras £831, no more than £569 were obtained from the Northern Presidency. It is true the Bengal army has so far less reason to complain than its suffering sisters, in that the latter have been punished for misdoings of which they were not only not guilty, but which they helped to repress and chastise. And, besides this, quite a Benjamin's share of the loaves and fishes that came to be divided after the mutiny fell to the lot of the very army that had mutinied. For all that our Calcutta contemporary is of opinion that the Bengal officers should do something more than grumble. In short, they must petition, petition, petition, and their petition must embrace the following points:—

THE LOCAL SERVICE.

1st. Substantive Regimental Supercession by the Staff Corps, entailing and comprising "actual" and also "prospective" supercession in Commands of Regiments, Brigades, Divisions, and "off Reconnoing."

2nd. Deprivation of Regimental Employ—such employ also often entailing service under a Regimental Junior.

3rd. Undue, and apparently "illegal advantages secured to Staff Corps Officers, with respect to their Widows' and Orphans' Funds.

4th. Total loss of "Bonus," and also of "paid up subscriptions," invested under the Authoritative Sanctions of the Court of Directors; letters of March 6, 1832, No. 15; of June 14, 1837, No. 31; of Nov. 29, 1837, No. 7; all published in G.G.O.

5th. Unjust retardation of "Cadre" promotion, which promotion, moreover, no longer confers "Military Command."

THE STAFF CORPS.

1st. Enforced election for the Staff Corps, to avoid the supercession above alluded to.

2nd. Enforced deprivation of pension on "Exchange," by orders issued subsequent to Election.

3rd. Total loss of "Bonus," and of "paid up subscriptions" to the same.

4th. Reduction of Pay below that of Local Officers, and Non-Appointment to Staff Employ, the expectation of which originally induced election. Refusal of permission to "revert" to Local Service, even when the G.G.O. of April 10, 1861, under which they elected for the Staff Corps, has been partially "cancelled," as containing infraction of the guarantee.

THE TWELVE NEW GENERAL SERVICE REGIMENTS.

1st. Enforced election for General Service, to escape supercession.

2nd. Enforced Deprivation of Pension on exchange by the order of 9th May, 1864, issued subsequent to election for General Service. Officers of the Twelfth New Regiments (though such exchanges have also been sanctioned without entailing loss of pension) can now only exchange with each other under this severe penalty; and many, both "Married" and "Single," whose means preclude service out of India, are thus to be deprived of the pensions for which they have served for years in the "Tropics," and in a "Seniority Service."

3rd. Enforcement of New Furlough Rules, subsequent to election for the General Service.

4th. Exclusion from the "Brevet;" and also from the Substantive Rank, guaranteed to the Staff Corps, and also to the Local Service, prior to, and also subsequent to, the report of the Royal Commission.

5th. Undue and apparently illegal advantages secured to the Staff Corps in the Widows' and Orphans' Fund. This point might perhaps serve to test the legality of Staff Corps promotion at Common Law.

6th. Loss of Bonus and of paid-up subscriptions.

7th. Prohibition to "revert" to the Local Service. Various officers, on finding their pensions endangered, and that the General Order on which they elected has been to a great extent cancelled, are desirous of being permitted also to cancel their election for General Service. To a few individuals only was this privilege lately accorded, the applications of the majority to "revert" being rejected.

In truth, a goodly list of grievances, and it cannot be denied that they are in many respects well founded, though it is not so easy to see how they are to be remedied. In every great change, such as the fusion of two large and perfectly distinct armies, it is inevitable that many individuals should be prejudiced. The real question is whether such private wrongs outweigh the public benefit thus wrought out, and it must not be forgotten that for many years previous to the mutiny, the officers of her Majesty's Native Regiments had been clamorous for an amalgamation with the royal troops, and for the formation of a Staff Corps. But, according to the Hurkaru, it is precisely the formation of these corps that "whilst conferring considerable benefit on some officers, (has) caused serious injury to the prospects of from a thousand to fifteen hundred captains and senior lieutenants." In which case we can only say with the old Roman satirist,

Di faciles.*

And admitting the existence of many just grievances, it remains to be considered how they are to be redressed. On this point neither the petitioners themselves nor their "officious" adviser attempt to throw any light, but content themselves with referring the matter to the wisdom, justice, and liberality of the British Parliament. If that, however, is all they have to rely upon, we fear they are leaning on a broken reed, for, if ever their case comes on for a Parliamentary hearing, it is tolerably certain that not twenty members will attend in their places. The petitioners have fallen upon evil times, and must do their best to endure patiently the evils time alone can remove or mitigate.

A YEAR'S ADMINISTRATION OF THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.

AN Indian prætor need well be a man of varied accomplishments, large experience, and indefatigable industry. With the sole exception of military matters, there is no one point connected with the welfare and progress of the people of his province that does not come under his own immediate and personal cognisance. And it is no trifling merit of the old civilian system, which it is now the fashion to decry, that before a man can attain the summit of the ladder he must have set his foot on each separate rung. Step by step he slowly rises to eminence, and thus becomes familiarly acquainted with every department of the public service. While yet a young district officer he learns to make roads, build bridges, map out the country, conserve forests, survey mines, report on the capabilities of the soil, assess the revenue, manage a jail, conduct a post-office, regulate the police, and administer justice. As the natural result of this long and arduous training he is enabled, when visited with the supervision of a province more extensive than his native country, to form a just judgment as to the manner in which his subordinates discharge their respective duties, and, therefore, to dispense praise, or blame, according to the merits of each. Neither is he liable to fall into the hands of a clique, for in the course of his varied service he has become more or less intimately acquainted with nearly every one of his brother officials, and has gauged their individual characters and capacities. This in itself is no ordinary advantage, and it is one that could not possibly be enjoyed by a Lieutenant-governor sent out direct from England. As a fair example of the nature and amount of work such an officer is expected to get through in the course of the twelve months, let us take the Report of the Administration of the North-West Provinces for the year 1863-64.

Commencing with the section headed "Civil Justice," we find that in 1863 there were 57,925 regular suits instituted, of which only 7,685 were pending at the close of the year—49,457 being decided on trial, and 58,413 finally disposed of. Of these last, 50 per cent. were decided on their merits. These figures, however, by no means indicate the whole extent of litigation in the N.W. Provinces during a single year. To obtain the full measure, we have to add 9,758 suits instituted in the Small Cause Courts, and no fewer than 117,235 cases classed under the unsatisfactory heading of "Miscellaneous." The average duration of suits in the Judges' Courts exceeds six months, but in the lower courts greater expedition appears to be the rule. The State revenue, of course, benefits by the litigiousness of its subjects through the sale of stamps, of which 631,385 rupees' worth was filed in the year under notice—the amount refunded being only Rs. 11,102. The aggregate value of the cases disposed of was Rs. 30,721,313, while the costs were about 6 per cent. So heavy was the accumulation of arrears in the Sudder Court that it was found necessary to appoint four extra judges to clear them off. It must be understood that the preceding figures do not include the Kumaon or Ajmere divisions, nor yet Mhairwarrah or the Terai district, nor even the Small Cause Courts at Agra, Allahabad, and Benares.

Passing on to Criminal Justice we are startled at observing the large number of 81,601 offenders, showing an increase of 7,501 over the preceding year. This alarming increase of crime is attributed to the growing propensity to gambling, the parent of many social disorders. Of the above grand total, 79,951 were "disposed of by the magisterial agency," and of these 45,471 were convicted, or committed to the sessions, and 34,480 acquitted or discharged for want of sufficient proof. In the Magisterial Courts 53,829 cases were disposed of, against 43,921 in 1862, and in the miscellaneous department 162,276, against 127,959. The nature of the penalties inflicted in these courts is characterised as follows:—10,586 persons sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for various periods not exceeding two years, 817 to simple imprisonment, 6,676 to imprisonment with fine, and 24,302 to pay fines not exceeding Rs. 1,000, but amounting in the aggregate to Rs. 317,531, not a moiety of which was realised. Of the 2,234 appeals, 648 were rejected, 964 confirmed, and 469 modified. It is creditable to the committing officers that 74 per cent. of prisoners sent up to the sessions were convicted. It is also satisfactory to learn that of the 221,528 witnesses called upon to give evidence in court, 95 per cent. were detained for only one day, and no more than 684 persons beyond three days. On the other hand, we are told that the average duration of each criminal trial in the magisterial courts was thirteen days, so that each magistrate could have disposed, on the average, of no more than twenty-four cases in the whole year, if he sat in court every day except Sunday. The Sessions Judges, by the way, devoted 1,570 days to criminal work in 1863, but the number of the Judges so employed is not given—an omission that deprives these figures of all significance. It is difficult, too, to form any very exact estimate of the value of the assistance afforded by the assessors, when we find that every fourth case was decided by the Judge contrary to the opinion of his assessors, who are supposed to discharge, in a mild form, the functions of a British Jury. Possibly—indeed, most probably—this difference of opinion arose from the ignorance and obstinacy of the assessors, for we observe that 1,083 out of 2,982 were cultivators of the soil, 808 mahajuns, or money-lenders, 469 pleaders, 182 "employed in service" (whatever that may mean), and 21 of the sacerdotal order. The question, therefore, arises, are these assessors of any real service to the cause of justice, or do they not rather hamper than assist the judge? Seventy-seven cases alone were referred to the Nizamut Adawlut for confirmation of sentence, and of these 63 involved capital punishment. The penalties imposed by that High Court were as follows:—Death, 60; transportation for life, 17; transportation from 7 to 14 years, 12; imprisonment for life, 0; ditto above 12, and not exceeding 21 years, 0; ditto above 5, and not exceeding 10 years, 13; ditto not exceeding 5 years, 60; in all, 162. The returns from the Ajmere and Mhairwarrah Districts are not included in the foregoing statistics.

The section headed Police furnishes matter for unfavourable comment. Though 232 murders were committed, in only 195 cases were arrests made, and even then, of the 621 individuals committed for trial, no more than 323 were convicted. Dacoities and robberies were largely in excess of those reported during the previous year. As many as 342 cases were entered in the police registers, but in only 96 were arrests made, and of the 614 individuals sent for trial, 242 alone were condemned. Again, there was an enormous increase in cases of lurking, house trespass, and theft; in the former from 9,241 to 12,002, and in the latter from 18,805 to 25,994. The value of property stolen also rose from Rs. 768,146 to Rs. 975,981. This very unsatisfactory state of things is attributed to the high price and scarcity of food, the habit of remitting large sums in cash from Calcutta to pay for cotton and other up-country produce, and to the general prevalence of gambling; but a little further on it is incidentally admitted that something may be due to the new organisation of the police force. The Lullutpore district is especially mentioned as the haunt of regular bands of outlaws, who oppose arms to arms, and keep the country in a state of permanent disorder. In the Kumaon division there were 141 cases of accidental death, 38 by falls down precipices, 26 by wild animals, and 13 by snake-bites. In addition to the causes of the increase of crime enumerated above, it may perhaps be fair to state that a reduction had been made in the numbers of the police force, apparently with a view to augment the pay of the officers, and yet at the same time effect a reduction in the total expenditure. The result scarcely sanctions such empirical economy.

The report on jails is quite as unsatisfactory as that on the police. We read that the number of admissions was 2,294 more than in 1862, but that the daily average number of prisoners was less by 216, "indicating a general shortening of the sentences awarded by committing officers." In the face of a large increase of crime such leniency was, to say the least of it, misplaced, and illustrates the too general proneness to sacrifice every other consideration to retrenchment of expenditure. The cost of each prisoner was, after all, greater than in 1862, owing to the steady rise in the price of every necessary of life. Too much stress, also, is laid upon the amount earned by prison labour, and space is found to make mention even of the vegetables grown and consumed by the convicts. Such calculations as these may be a suitable pastime for amateur political economists, but they are altogether beside the true point of prison discipline. Some credit is claimed for the diminution of mortality in jails, the average rate being 7·2 per cent. Typhoid fever, however, appeared in six jails, and epidemic cholera in nine, which says but little for the sanitary arrangements; and of 319 cases of cholera in an average population of 8,969 per diem, 152, or 47·6, proved fatal. It is not denied that the jails are overcrowded, but we are assured that this is of the less consequence, because the wards of native jails “rather resemble open cages than confined rooms, are supplied with ventilators, and have tiled roofs pervious to the air.” The Lieutenant-governor is further of opinion that “four feet of lateral space to each prisoner will be found sufficient,” because of the loftiness of the wards, but his Honour appears to forget that if brought into such close juxtaposition, the prisoners will inhale each other's breath and the foul air that is given off from their bodies, a lateral space of four feet to each allowing an interval of only two feet between any two prisoners. It is pleasant, however, to observe that the system of selecting prisoners to perform the duties of an intramural guard has been found to work well. The prisoners thus employed are described as “the most ready willing (sic) workers, besides being the neatest and cleanest, and the best drilled portion of the contingent guard.” To impart a sense of responsibility to a prisoner is the surest means of developing his self-respect, and the best way of making a man worthy of confidence is to place confidence in him. Of the 22,550 prisoners received into jail, 21,261 had never been convicted, 771 had been twice, 321 thrice, and 197 frequently convicted. As for education, it is only in central jails that much can be done, and it is stated that of 19,873 prisoners, 14,608 were entirely uneducated, while of the remaining 5,265, “no less than 4,370 had received their whole education in jail.” The system of managing district jails by means of civil assistant surgeons is spoken of in favourable terms, the reason assigned for such praise being a large reduction in the cost of maintenance—but do the prisoners retain their health and strength under their reduced diet?

But whatever may have been the condition of the convict population, the revenue returns bear witness to the general prosperity of the agricultural community. The land revenue realised amounted to 98·47 per cent. of the total demand, in addition to which eight lakhs of arrears were collected. At the close of the year, however, the outstanding balances were equal to half-a-million sterling. Of this upwards of £200,000 were subsequently remitted in the Rohilkund Division, and we gladly recognise the liberality and sagacity of the remark that “there cannot be a more baneful incubus upon the energies of landlords and tenants than heavy and long-standing arrears of revenue.” Under the head of Excise there was a slight falling off, in consequence of the abolition of the old system of farming out the abkaree duties, and the establishment of Sudder Distilleries, “within which alone parties duly licensed are permitted to erect stills and manufacture liquor, which they can sell only to licensed vendors, or to persons who pay a still-head duty.” No one will regret to learn that the consumption of spirituous liquors has considerably declined, or that the number of spirit-shops was reduced from 5,481 to 3,189. The total receipts from the various sources of revenue are thus stated:—

Land revenue, current ...	Rs. 3,80,72,935
“ “ arrears ...	7,99,837
“ “ not on rent roll ...	11,11,636
Surplus Tulubana ...	32,538
Abkaree ...	22,85,074
Stamp ...	20,26,341
Sayer ...	91,451
Sale of confiscated lands ...	5,79,252
Customs ...	48,22,878
Income tax ...	81,10,456

Grand total for 1862-63 ... Rs. 5,29,32,398

To the above, however, must be added the sum of Rs. 7,09,675, collected from the Ajmere and Mhairwarrah districts.

There yet remains very much that is worthy of notice in this record of a year's administration, but any further remarks on the subject we reserve for our next issue.

MADRAS IRRIGATION COMPANY.

Mr. SMOLLETT asked the Secretary for India what was the present position of the Madras Irrigation Company, and what was the amount expended in irrigation works up to the last account received from India; and whether any prospect existed of the repayment of the interest guaranteed upon the capital of the company, or of a participation by Government in the enormous profits which it was said that works undertaken by the State invariably produced in every district of the Madras Presidency.

Sir C. WOOD said with regard to the position of the company, they were carrying on their works. The sum which they had raised was about £790,000, and the sum spent about £717,000. About the month of July next there would be 10,000 acres under irrigation. Though he had never entertained any extravagant expectations with regard to the matter, he believed there was every prospect that the Government would be repaid the money which they had advanced.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 24.

Petitions praying for the redress of grievances arising out of the amalgamation of the Royal and Indian armies were presented by Colonel SYKES, from Captain Edward N. Norton, of the late 18th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; Lieut. F. E. West, of the 38th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; and Lieut. G. THE GODAVERY.

In reply to Mr. SMOLLETT, Sir C. WOOD said that two despatches on the subject of the Godavery works had been received last year, both of which had been laid upon the table upon the motion of the hon. gentleman. Four steamers were now employed for the purpose of carrying stores and materials up and down the Godavery. He believed that orders had been given for the execution of the works at the first barrier.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY, BASINGHALL-STREET.—Feb. 24.

(Before Mr. Commissioner Holroyd.)
IN RE THOMAS SMALES.

Captain Thomas Smales was described as formerly paymaster of the 1st Dragoon Guards and other regiments of cavalry, and serving at Lucknow and elsewhere in India; now of Clapton-square, Hackney, paymaster on half-pay. The bankrupt presented his petition to this Court on the 15th of April last, and on the 24th of the following month he filed his accounts, disclosing unsecured debts to the extent of £3,343, with no assets whatever. At an examination meeting held on the 8th of June the bankrupt was ordered to prepare a cash account, and this having been rendered he, on the 4th of November last, passed his examination, the question of discharge being postponed until this day in order that certain creditors resident in India might have an opportunity of proving their debts.

Mr. Bagley, who appeared for creditors, said that since the last meeting further proofs had been received, some of which were perfectly regular, and were vouched by dishonoured checks, while others were made in respect of moneys due from the bankrupt to certain recognised associations connected with the regiments, such as the officers' mess and the sergeants' mess; and there was a further proof on account of moneys received by the bankrupt for transmission to the Soldiers' Orphan Institute. Of the eight debts represented by the regular proofs, six were altogether excluded from the accounts. With respect to the other proofs a difficulty arose as to who would be the proper deponent.

Mr. Commissioner Holroyd: I think the acting paymaster may prove.

Mr. Bagley: Perhaps that may be so.

Upon the bankrupt being called, no answer was given.

Mr. Bagley said he was not at all surprised at the bankrupt's absence. He proposed that the present meeting should be adjourned sine die, and he asked that notice should be given to his clients of any further sitting.

Mr. Sykes, on behalf of the official assignee, undertook to give the necessary notice, and

The Court adjourned the further hearing sine die.

Mr. Bagley: My clients will take such steps in this matter as they may be advised.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE VISCOUNT COMBERMERE.—With a characteristic and kindly regard for the sorrows of others, her Majesty the Queen, during the last illness of Field-Marshal Combermere, caused frequent inquiries to be made by telegraph as to the condition of his lordship; and shortly after his decease, Lady Combermere received from her Majesty a letter of condolence, written by the Queen herself—a mark of attention, it may be said, deeply appreciated by the afflicted lady. The funeral of the late veteran soldier is appointed to take place on Thursday next, in the family mausoleum of the Cottons at Wrenbury, in the county of Chester.

THE MAILS, &c.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Nyanza, Captain Weeks, sailed from Southampton yesterday (Monday) afternoon with the mails for Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, Egypt, Aden, and Bombay, together with 35 first and 33 second-class passengers, and a freight of 290 boxes of specie for Bombay, value £97,900, of which amount is bar gold, £12,500, bar silver, £78,800, gold coin, £5,500, gold and silver thread, watches, &c., £1,100.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts on this company's south-west line for the half-year ending the 31st of December last amounted, on 447 miles open, to £155,572, or £325 per mile, against £121,089, on 407 miles open, or £297 per mile, for the corresponding period of 1863. On the company's north-west line the receipts for the six months have been £12,229, on 60 miles open, or £204 per mile, against £6,616, on 41 miles open, or £161 per mile, for the same period of the previous year. On the two lines together the increase for the six months has been £40,096, or 31½ per cent. in receipts, and 59 miles, or 13 per cent. in length of way open.

THE MAURITIUS GOVERNMENT 6 PER CENT. LOAN of £300,000, for which the Crown Agents for the Colonies invited tenders on the 23rd inst., was not all taken up. The total applied for was £330,100, but the minimum was fixed at 103, at and above which debentures to the extent of only £118,800, and registered stock to the extent of only £31,600, were disposed of, at an average of £104. 15s. 4d.

ORIENTAL COMMERCIAL COMPANY.—The general meeting took place on Wednesday, Admiral Burney in the chair, when a resolution was agreed to, adopting the minute of the 26th January last, and authorising the increase of the capital to £3,000,000; and that the constitution of the company be modified, as expressed in that of the Oriental Commercial Bank (Limited), under the name, powers, and privileges of which the business of the company shall be henceforward carried on, and also authorising the directors to take such proceedings as shall appear to them requisite or expedient in furtherance of the object of the resolution.

LABUAN COAL COMPANY.—An extraordinary meeting was held on Friday, when the proposed transfer of the property to the China Steamship and Labuan Coal Company was approved.

CHINA AND JAPAN (COAST AND RIVER) STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—At an extraordinary meeting of the China and Japan (Coast and River) Steam Navigation Company, held on Thursday, the agreement entered into with the China Steamship and Labuan Coal Company, founded upon the resolutions embodied in the circular issued to the shareholders, was carried unanimously. A liquidator was appointed.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE are in receipt of letters and papers from Calcutta to the 6th, and from Bombay to the 14th of February.

The news from Bhootan is so far unfavourable that it announces a renewal of hostilities on the part of the enemy. It may be, indeed, that the Bhootiahs have now made their last despairing effort to repel the invaders, and that they will now be content to leave the task of vengeance to the armies of ghosts, with whose wrath they had previously menaced the British Government. Be this as it may, it is stated by a correspondent of the Englishman, that the enemy attacked Dewangiri, in force, on the 29th January, but were repulsed with considerable loss. It is evident, however, that they must have displayed unusual courage and pertinacity, for the British loss amounted to Lieut. Urquhart, of the Engineers, and five sepoy killed, and Lieutenant Story and thirty-eight sepoys wounded. The last-named officer was wounded in the stomach by an arrow. This untoward affair may possibly necessitate the further advance of the invading force, as it will never do to leave small detached garrisons exposed to sudden onslaughts from neighbours whose treachery in peace is more to be feared than their open hostility. Besides, it is reported that the Dhurm Rajah proposes to seek for a compensation for his recent reverses, at the hands of the Sikkim Rajah, but the British Government will scarcely permit the nearer approach of the Bhootiahs to the station of Darjeeling. Verily, the beginning of strife is like unto the letting out of water.

The adoption of the Port Canning scheme by the Bombay capitalists has turned the heads of the usually timid speculators of Calcutta. The shares at their very allotment opened at a premium of Rs. 4,000, which subsequently ran up to Rs. 9,000, and after dropping to Rs. 5,000, again rose to Rs. 7,000. The scene at the office of Messrs. Borradaile, Schiller, and Co., is described as recalling the sad memories of the Rue Quincampoix during the Mississippi Mania, and of our own Exchange at the time of the South Sea Bubble. It is to be hoped that the collapse will not be so sudden or so complete as in those parallel cases.

The financial prospects of India are represented under the gloomiest colours. Sir Charles Trevelyan has proved himself to be what the disinterested spectators of his career had long suspected. He has shown himself to be a faithful, strict, intermeddling head clerk—and nothing more. His knowledge of finance has never risen beyond the elementary rules of arithmetic, while his idea of retrenchment has exemplified itself in abolishing a few small charges, and creating a host of large ones. His own department he has gone on augmenting until, like Aaron's rod, it has swallowed up all the others, and now overshadows the very Government itself. That there is a serious deficit to be made good no one seems to question,—the only difference of opinion relates to the mode of accomplishing that feat, for as the days of antique heroism are supposed to have long since departed, it is idle to expect that Sir Charles will throw himself into the yawning gulf; and if he did, it would not avail much. It is feared that Sir Charles has been guilty of the folly of prematurely diverting a large portion of the cash balances to the extinction of Government securities; and it is certain that he greatly overestimated the revenue from opium. The price per chest, instead of continuing at Rs. 1,000, has fallen to little more than Rs. 800, and the consequent loss to the Indian revenue is computed at one and a-half million sterling. In addition to all this, there is only too much reason to apprehend that Sir Charles Trevelyan is bent upon the abolition of the income-tax in July next, at whatever inconvenience to the State. That tax is naturally an unpopular one, but the natives have become as much reconciled to it as to any other form of taxation, and the Bombay Native Association has even petitioned for its continuance. Nor is this surprising, when it is known that the substitute Sir Charles is expected to recommend takes the form of a police-tax of nearly double the amount of that derived from incomes, and which will be levied upon every house, hut, and hovel throughout British India. Neither is it at all wonderful that Sir Charles's health should have so completely broken down under the sense of failure, that he will probably be compelled to take his departure from India before the time arrives for making his annual Financial Statement.

Small-pox has broken out rather severely in Calcutta and its suburbs, and has attacked Europeans as well as natives. A suddenly improvised hospital at Chitpore received almost immediately upwards of seventy patients of both races. Thirteen special stations have been appointed, at nine of which vaccination is performed gratuitously and at the other four for a trifling fee. The Gas Company, too, have given up their house in Halliday-street for the reception of European patients in a position to pay for the accommodation, and the greatest praise is given to Dr. Charles, Superintendent of Vaccination, for the devoted and self-denying energy he has displayed in opposing the progress of this horrible disease.

Another fire has occurred among the shipping in the port of Calcutta. The City of Benares, loaded with jute and timber, has been burnt to the water's edge, but nothing is known as to the cause of the fire.

A terrible railway accident has been providentially escaped on the Great India Peninsula line. Not only was a loaded rail placed across the tramway, but at intervals heavy iron posts were arranged so as to reduce the chance of escape to a minimum. The train was partially upset, but, almost by a miracle, no lives were lost or any very severe personal injuries sustained. As this is not the first attempt of the kind, it is possible that fanaticism may be at the bottom of this diabolical act, though the sufferers would have been nearly all natives.

The opening of the Indo-European Telegraph Line is one of the most remarkable events of the past week. It does not appear, however, to have been productive of unmitigated good. The news flashed to Bombay and Calcutta of the Peace Conference in Hampton Roads naturally caused a heavy decline in the price of piece goods, and produced something like a panic, which would, however, have been speedily relieved had telegraphic communication been continued. But, unfortunately, as in the case of the Atlantic cable, the wires became deranged at the very outset, and we must hope that this great triumph of science over time and space has not been permanently suspended, after being only temporarily successful.

The Viceroy and Council were expected to leave Calcutta for Simla early in the present month. Mr. Beadon, we rejoice to learn, has so far recovered his health that he has abandoned all intention of quitting his post, and it is the Hon. Mr. Grey who takes leave of absence, though only to the Hills. In our miscellaneous columns will be found a long list of prospective changes and promotions in official life.

H.R.H. the Duke of Brabant has completed his tour of the North-West Provinces, and will proceed from Calcutta to China. The natives are said to have been much perplexed by the Prince's simple costume being no way distinguishable from that of any other gentleman.

AGRA AND MASTERMAN'S BANK.—The report of the Agra and Masterman's Bank, to be presented on Saturday, shows that the profits for the year ended the 31st December were £263,120, out of which distributions have been made equal to 20 per cent. per annum, leaving £16,321 to be carried forward. The reserve fund now stands at £500,000. The paid-up capital is £1,500,000, the deposits are £5,977,756, the acceptances £4,408,860, and the liabilities on exchange accounts, &c., £4,859,120.

BENGAL.

BHOOTAN AND THE BHOOTIAHS.

The Hon. Mr. Eden has been writing a most graphic and interesting report upon what cannot but be looked upon as an exceedingly dry and uninteresting subject, the revenue and judicial systems, and the general condition of the people of Bhootan. We have no doubt but that everything connected with that place, its savage and oppressed people, and its selfish and merciless chiefs, is repellent to the general reader; yet, we think, that as many of the former will soon be fellow-subjects with us, and a large portion of the country will, in all likelihood, be occupied by those who know how to take advantage of the favours which a grateful soil pours forth, a little attention to the subjects touched upon in this report will not be thrown away. To know how these queer people have hitherto lived and moved, and had their being, their social rites and customs, their laws and usages, their religious views and creeds, is not altogether devoid of interest. It is only necessary to glance at the report before us, to see that many of the ideas which we, in common with the public, have hitherto cherished on some of these points are altogether erroneous. For instance, we have always imagined that the Bhootanese lived in dreary little hovels, made up of twigs and earth roughly put together anyhow, without any particular regard to appearances. We fancied we saw them crawl in and out of vile and smoky cribs, something like those which the fishermen of the Sunderbuns inhabit. Our astonishment was therefore the greater on learning from so unquestionably reliable a source as the late envoy to Bhootan that so far from this being a correct conception of the actual state of affairs, the Bhootanese live in houses really better than many small farm-houses in England, and that the buildings are composed either of rubble stone and clay or empisé clay. Under the latter process, clay mixed with small stone is placed in a wooden frame, and trodden down until it is consolidated into a block which quickly hardens, and in course of years acquires nearly the solidity of stone. Mr. Eden says that it lasts for many years, and that he saw "old ruins made of this composite, which must have been built more than a hundred years ago, the walls of which were like concrete." As if all this were not strange enough, we learn a little further on that the houses are built of three and four stories; that all the floors are neatly boarded with deal, and that on two sides of the house is a very pretty verandah, ornamented with carved and painted deal. These houses, the appearance of which is said to be precisely that of Swiss chalets, are not only singularly picturesque and comfortable, but are generally scrupulously clean and free from vermin. Each house has a good farmyard and farm out-houses. To add to the beauty of this picture, we have the fact that the Bhooteah cultivator lays out his land in a series of really beautiful terraces levelled from the side of the Hill, each terrace being reveted and supported with stone embankments sometimes twenty feet high. Every field is carefully fenced with pine branches, or protected by a stone wall; and a complete system of irrigation permeates through the whole cultivated part of a village, the water being often brought from a long distance through stone aqueducts. If this description of the status of a Bhooteah cultivator does not astonish our readers, then we must suspect that their acquaintance with the occupant of the Swiss cottage with deal doors is of longer standing than ours has been. That a Bhooteah should live cleanly, and eschew vermin, produce turnips as good as English ones, plough terraces 7,000 and 8,000 feet above the level of the sea, and should take a pride in adorning his house and making it as picturesque as possible, is indeed amazing.

What a pity it is that all this rural industry and quiet should be marred by the short-sighted and merciless selfishness of ignorant superiors! The only limit, we are told, on the revenue demand on the Bhooteah is the natural limit of the power of the official to extort more. Nothing that a Bhooteah possesses is his own, for he is at all times liable to lose it, if it attract the cupidity of anyone more powerful than himself. In fact, the lower classes are nothing better than slaves. They have no rights of property, simply because there never was a country in which "might" is more entirely "right" than in Bhootan. No official, says Mr. Eden, receives a salary; he has certain districts made over to him, and he may get what he can out of them; a certain portion of his gains he has to send to the Durbar, and the more he extorts, and the more he sends to his superior, the longer his tenure of office is likely to be. But this tyranny, we naturally suppose, produces a corresponding dishonesty and craftiness on the part of the Bhooteahs, and it is not unfrequently that the cunning of the latter achieves a victory over the brute force of his superior. Affecting to cultivate a certain extent of land supposed to produce a certain quantity and no more, the Bhooteah devotes his whole energies to making it produce twice as much. The surplus he conceals in the forest till he has an opportunity of disposing of it to some adventurous friend, who is secretly engaged in trade with the surrounding countries. The prices realised more than compensate for the risk incurred in this system of smuggling. Of course in a country where might is right, there can be no judicial system and no police. The powers which the Jungpens possess are only exercised for the purpose of extortion. Where the goods, chattels and effects of any of these officials are robbed, capital punishment is inflicted. This is done by placing the delinquent on a drop projecting over the river; he is allowed here any indulgence he wishes, however immoral it may be, and the indulgence which is customary on the occasion, remarks Mr. Eden, is of the most indecent description. His hands and feet are then tied, and he is dropped into the river. We now take leave of this very interesting report. It is a pity that it has not been published, for however uninviting its titles may be, its pages are full of reading of a very pleasant, and curious, and novel character.—Hurkaru.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE DUKE OF BRABANT AT LUCKNOW.—H.R.H. the Duke of Brabant and suite arrived at Lucknow on the afternoon of the 21st January. For the last few miles of his journey H.R.H. was escorted by a detachment of the 8th Bengal Cavalry, and at the Alum Bagh he was met by the Chief Commissioner and the Major-general commanding the division. After visiting Havelock's tomb, the party entered the Chief Commissioner's carriage, and were driven into the station. The roads leading to Mr. Wingfield's house were lined with troops, and at the entrance gate the officers of the staff were assembled to receive his Royal Highness. As the carriage drove up to the house, a Royal salute was fired, and the guard of honour, which had been drawn up before the door, presented arms, while the band played the National Anthem. On the morning of the 22nd H.R.H. visited the Kaisur Bagh Palace, where he was received by the Commissioner, and a deputation from the landed aristocracy of the Province. The Prince then went to the Residency, where he met Sir George Couper, who pointed out the most interesting spots. In the afternoon, the illustrious visitor, with his host, drove round the Dilkoosha Cantonments, paid a short visit to the Martiniere, and after strolling through the Wingfield-park, crossed by the Secundra Bagh, and drove round by the Stone Bridge. On Monday the Muchee Bhawun was visited by the Duke, and there the General and his staff were ready to receive him. After going through Asufdowla's Emambarra, H.R.H. ascended to the roof, where he remained some time, and apparently enjoyed the view of the city and surrounding country. The next visit was to the Hossanabad Emambarra, where Nawabs Moosum-ood-dowla Bahadoor and Moontuz-o Dod-oolah Bahadoor, the trustees, were present to do the honours of the place. On Tuesday H.R.H. very graciously accepted the invitation of the Talookdars to witness the illumination of the Kaiser Bagh Palace, and a display of fireworks. At about 9 P.M. H.R.H. and suite, accompanied by the Chief Commissioner, arrived at the south-eastern entrance of the Patherwalla Baradwari, Kaiser Bagh. The Maharajah of Bulrampore, Maharajah Maun Sing, and Baboo Dakhinarunjan Mookerjee, received him at the bottom of the staircase. When they had traversed the splendid hall and taken their seats on the northern platform, the display of fireworks was begun, and it was continued for nearly an hour. H.R.H. repeatedly expressed his satisfaction with the entertainment. The illumination, though got up at a very short notice, was really brilliant; Kaiser Bagh was one sheet of light. The southern range of buildings presented a magnificent spectacle. The two houses with inverted roofs, with an arch between, decorated with thousands of glittering lights, had a marvellous effect. The pyrotechnic exhibition was indeed a grand one. The Duke, accustomed as he must be to displays of this kind in Europe, was, notwithstanding, extremely gratified with it.—Oudh Gazette.

THE DUKE OF BRABANT AT AGRA.—His Royal Highness the Duc de Brabant arrived in Agra on the 26th January. A guard of honour, consisting of a hundred rank and file, with the colours and band from H.M.'s 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers, under the command of a field officer, received H.R.H. on the railway station platform. The guard presented arms, the band playing the National Anthem. His Royal Highness, in company with Brigadier General Harris, walked passed the guard, and returning left the station in a carriage and four, the company present and the band following immediately after. A royal salute was fired from the Shah Burj of the fort as H.R.H. and party stepped on the Pontoon Bridge. The chief military and civil officers of the station were in attendance. A detachment of the 12th B.C., consisting of two duffa lars and twenty sowars, under the command of a Ressaldar, will form His Royal Highness's escort during his stay in Agra.

FINANCE AND ACCOUNT DEPARTMENT.—The following changes in the department of Finance and Account are to take place immediately. Mr. E. F. Harrison, Deputy Auditor, Accountant General and Civil Pay Master of British Burmah, is to come down to the Presidency with the least possible delay, and assist Mr. Foster, the Finance Commissioner, in carrying out the English system of payment, examination and adjustment of charges, Civil and Military. Mr. H. A. Mangles, Civil Paymaster of the Bombay Presidency, to succeed Mr. Harrison in the appointment in British Burmah. Mr. Kiernauder, Chief Assistant to Mr. Harrison, to be ad interim Deputy Auditor and Accountant General and Civil Paymaster, British Burmah, until relieved by Mr. Mangles.

MR. MAC NAGHTEN, the late magistrate and collector of Balasore, made a representation of the facts of the case against him to the Lieutenant Governor, and requested that the matter might be laid before the Supreme Government, instead of being sent on to the Secretary of State. This request has been complied with. On dit that Mr. Mac Naghten will be allowed another chance of redeeming the good opinion of his superiors.—Hurkaru, Feb. 3.

REVIEW OF THE BUDGETS.—The Lieutenant-governor has desired that the plan proposed by the commissioners for the review of the Budgets of 1865-66 shall be adopted. The plan is that his Honour, in conjunction with the Accountant-general, Bengal, a member of the Board of Revenue and the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, are to meet together, and conjointly submit the estimates to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Financial Department, so that one return, without any modification or alteration, may be before Government. The advantage will be that the Supreme Government can at once know the wants of each presidency or Government, without being perplexed by the different figures shown by the various heads of departments, the Accountant-general, or the Bengal Secretary. This plan is certainly the simplest that could have been adopted, and we have no doubt, if followed throughout India, will much simplify the work of the Financial Minister in allotting the grants to the different presidencies and governments. In accordance with this plan his Honour has directed the various functionaries to assemble at Belvidere with the Budgets when the amounts to be asked for are to be settled.—Hurkaru.

ADMINISTRATION OF FORESTS.—Dr. T. Anderson, as Conservator of Forests in the Lower Provinces, has the administration of three forests: one in Sikkim, another in Bhootan, and the third in Assam. The last was previously under the management of the Deputy-Commissioner at Nowgong. For the expenses of management and superintendence, he has asked about one and a half lac of rupees. This sum includes his own and the subordinate officers' salaries, establishments, contingencies and expenditure for preserving timber, planting of nurseries, &c. The receipts have been estimated at between sixteen and twenty thousand rupees. But this sum is exclusive of the amounts received at the various local treasuries. The total sum will not be less than half a lack of rupees. This is the first year that the forest expenditure has been directly brought under proper control. In fact, the first year that that department is separately organised. Hence the outlay at the beginning compromises much that will not be incurred in subsequent years; and we have no doubt that in future the receipts will more than cover the disbursements.—Hurkaru.

NEW STATION IN THE COSSYAH HILLS.—The Lieutenant-Governor has sanctioned the formation of a new station at Yeoloe, to which the head-quarters of Cossyah and Jynteah Hills have been removed from Cherra Poonjee. The new station is considered healthy; and as the public buildings sanctioned for the new station are being very slowly built, from the difficulty of obtaining labour, his Honour has directed the Inspector of Jails, Lower Provinces, to remove the prisoners in jail at Cherra Poonjee and employ them in building the new jail. An expenditure of Rs. 200 has been authorised for the temporary accommodation of the prisoners.

APPREHENSION OF REBELS.—A correspondent of one of the up-country papers writes of two men being brought into Moradabad (Rohilcund) from Rampore, arrested on a charge of having been the principal instigators in the murder of several European fugitives from Bareilly, when that station was besieged by the rebels in 1857. They were the heads of a village in the Bareilly district, through which their victims had to pass, and are brothers. When the country began to be a little quieted, strong suspicion as to the murders having rested on this village, a party was sent out against it, when one and all of the inhabitants decamped; some, however, were caught and punished, but the ringleaders succeeded in escaping to Rampore, but have now been apprehended on information gained from a man named Gopaul, who has turned Queen's evidence.

SMALL-POX HOSPITAL IN CALCUTTA.—The agent of the Oriental Gas Company has most liberally offered to place at the disposal of Government the house in Halliday-street, lately occupied by their overseers, to be used temporarily as a reception house for European ladies and gentlemen who may be unfortunate enough to be attacked with small-pox, and may desire to separate themselves from the other inmates of their houses. The Government has thankfully accepted the offer, and instructions have been issued to the several departments to make immediate arrangements for the reception, treatment and victualling of the patients; and it is hoped that the hospital will be opened by the 1st February. The situation is an excellent one, the house being in a large compound, with ample ventilation, and within three minutes' walk of the Medical College. Those who should unfortunately have to avail themselves of this reception house should bring with them their bedding and the most necessary articles of furniture. There will be made a charge of two rupees per day for each patient, to pay for the establishment, treatment, and victualling expenses.

NATIVE PROGRESS.—A society for the diffusion of useful knowledge through the medium of the vernaculars, and for the revival of Oriental learning, to which is attached a free public library for the city of Lahore, has been started by the principal of the Lahore College, in conjunction with Pundit Munphool, Divan Beij Nath, Fakir Shums-ud-din Khan, Hursookh Rai, and several others. On the 21st January a number of native gentlemen attended at the Sikia Saba (the building of the Female Education Committee), in order to hear Pundit Munphool and Dr. Leitner explain the objects of the society. These were stated to be (1) the publication of papers on literary, educational, and social questions; (2) the consideration and (wherever practicable) the carrying into effect all suggestions for the amelioration of the condition of the people; (3) the opening of a free public library and reading-room at the Sikia Saba. The meeting unanimously pronounced itself in favour of the objects of the society. Several of those present offered to place their libraries at the disposal of the society, and to assist it by every other means in their power.

THE NAWAB OF BAHAWALPORE has sent in an explanation of the delay which took place in the surrender of the widow of the late Bhawul Singh. According to the Nawab's story, this lady manifested a strong and most reprehensible turn for politics and intriguing, and was guilty of keeping up a communication with the Bahawalpore refugees, who had escaped to Mooltan. The Nawab expressed himself rather ungallantly as being only too glad to get rid of the lady in question, provided her correspondents were removed to Lahore. The Government complied with his request, and the fair cause of all the turmoil was at once surrendered to the British. The widow, however, being in safety, thought with the natural compassion and pity of woman of the melancholy state of those still in the clutches of the vigorous Chieftain of Bahawalpore; she accordingly represented the case to Government, but without effect.

TWENTY-FOUR SENIOR SCHOLARSHIPS have been awarded during the current year, and will be held in the following institutions:—Presidency College, 9; Doveton College, 1; Hooghly College, 3; Kishnaghur College, 3; Berhampore College, 4; Dacca College, 4; total, 24. Of these only one is to be held by a Christian—viz., Master G. W. de Rhe' Philipe, of the Doveton College. Nine are of the first grade, and fifteen of the second. The greater portion of the first grade are tenable at the Presidency College.

TROOP-SHIPS FOR ENGLAND.—The Red Rose and Sultana have been taken up by Government for the conveyance of troops to England at Rs. 235 and 236 respectively.

THE CALCUTTA JAIL.—The honorary magistrates of Calcutta some time back visited the Calcutta Great Jail, and reported the result of their inspection to the local Government. When the magistrates visited the jail there were 128 persons confined within its walls:—17 debtors under process of the High Court, 21 debtors under decrees of the Small Cause Court, 31 sentenced by the High Court to penal servitude; 1 sentenced by the High Court to rigorous imprisonment, 4 sentenced by courts-martial to penal servitude, 1 sentenced to transportation, 4 were under remand, 4 were committed for misdemeanours, 1 confined for want of sureties, 44 were awaiting trial; total, 128. All the native debtors, 33 in number, appeared to the magistrates to be in good health, notwithstanding the indifferent accommodation provided for them, the bedding especially being very dirty and open to fault-finding. One of them made a complaint of the absence of a lamp at night in the urinal attached to their quarters. The jailor promised to remedy this matter; the magistrates, however, were there to personify benevolence as well as examination, and they therefore recommended that the present lavatories should be superseded by proper erections of this kind, those now used being in their opinion prejudicial to the health of the native debtors. There were only five European debtors, and these had ample accommodation, and had no complaints to make. The convicts under the heavier sentences of penal servitude and imprisonment did not make any complaints; the magistrates, however, regretted to see that nothing had yet been done to supply them with a uniform description of prison clothing. This matter had been once before brought to the notice of the authorities, and the magistrates hoped it would not be lost sight of. A German named Baker, however, represented that when his sentence shall have expired, he will be turned into the streets perfectly destitute, without clothing, and without the means of procuring subsistence, and that in all probability he might be driven to the commission of crime to secure the means of existence. The magistrates remarked on this representation that they believed there were two funds dormant under the management of the High Court; the Barretto Fund, and the Martin Fund, and they thought these two might be utilized in providing a few necessities for prisoners situated as Baker represented himself to be. The Magistrates threw out the suggestion that the sheriff should take the opinion of the law officers of the Crown on the subject. They, moreover, suggested the advisability of establishing a library of English and Oriental works, to be supported by public and private contributions, and offered to take the initiative by procuring contributions of serials and other similar works. The magistrates condemned the present system of mixing up in the remand ward all prisoners awaiting trial. Europeans and natives should be kept separate, and they hoped, before their next visit, this would be attended to. They also noticed that twenty-three new cells on the north-west of the gaol required but little to make them serviceable, and they trusted the executive engineer would be instructed to complete them with as little delay as possible. This would, to a great extent, remedy the present indiscriminate packing of the prisoners in the remand ward. The female ward also required alteration, and lastly, the justices discovered two deserters from the ship Hornet, who have been illegally kept in the remand ward for seven months. The Government are bound to forward these men to the ship at the expense of the State. Attention has been called to this, and it will no doubt be remedied. On the whole, the state of the jail was satisfactory.—Hurkaru.

DUTY ON SALT.—BURMAH.—The rate of duty on salt imported into British Burmah has been fixed at three annas per maund.

BRIGADIER TOMBS AND H.M.'S 81ST.—The following well-deserved tribute is paid by Brigadier-general Tombs, C.B. and V.C. to the gallant 81st, on the eve of returning home:—"Her Majesty's 81st Regiment will commence its march towards the Presidency en route to England on Friday next, the 26th Jan., at such hour as the officer commanding may appoint. In bidding farewell to this regiment, which has served for the last two years in the Gwalior district, the Brigadier-general commanding desires to place on record the soldier-like and orderly behaviour which has characterised its ranks; conduct so orderly and so soldier-like as that of the 81st Regiment ensures its own reward, and the Brigadier-general has only to point out to them the good health they have enjoyed, the small morality, infrequency of courts-martial, and punishment, as the result of their good conduct. The Brigadier-general will always remember with infinite satisfaction his connection, short though it has been, with this distinguished regiment, and he begs Major Gildea, his officers, and men, will rest assured that they carry with them his best wishes for their future prosperity and welfare, and a safe and happy return to their native land."

REGISTRAR-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.—The Governor-General in Council has been pleased to sanction to the Registrar-General in Bengal under Act XVI. of 1864 a progressive salary, commencing at Rs. 1,200, and rising by annual increases of Rs. 50 to Rs. 1,500 per mensem, and as an experimental measure, subject to report at the end of one year, to fix Rs. 300 per mensem as the limit to the cost of that officer's establishment. To the district registrar of Calcutta, a salary of Rs. 600 per mensem for the conjoint duties of that post and the office of registrar of joint stock companies under Act XIX. of 1857 has been granted. The deputy registrars of subdivisions are not to receive any special allowance until the number of deeds brought for registry is sufficient to justify such an allowance. For the deputy registrars at Sudder stations, an allowance of Rs. 75 a month has been authorised; until the total fees in Bengal under the Act for the registration of assurances (XVI. of 1864)—compared with the total charges—warrant the payment of Rs. 100 monthly, when that sum will be allowed. Mr. Heeley, who, as our readers are already aware, is the present Registrar-General, has already received an advance of Rs. 10,000, for the purchase of iron safes for the custody of documents sent to him for registry and deposit.

A HORNED TIGER.—The curator of the Central Museum at Nagpore has been subjected to a merciless hoax. Some one sent him a tiger's skin, which was described as having a genuine horn on the forehead, and report went far and abroad that his collection of curiosities contained a perfect marvel in Nature. Among others who went to see was the editor of the Central India Times, and he demolishes the beautiful fable to pieces. He says that the horn is that of a goat or an antelope, reduced somewhat, and rendered considerably more tapering than it had been originally, and then ingeniously inserted in an opening made for its reception in the skin. Indubitably the curator's vision was none of the clearest, when he admitted this tiger with the spurious horn into his catalogue of curiosities, and unless he is desirous of becoming the standing jest of the station, to which this imposition on his credulity affords a fund of merriment, he will summarily evict the tiger's skin, horn and all, from the Central Museum.

AGENT FOR GOVERNMENT CONSIGNMENTS.—The salary of the Agent for the Government consignments has been reduced by the Government of India in the Financial Department from Rs. 250 to 200 per mensem. As the same officer is also third assistant to the Master Attendant, he, nevertheless, will receive a consolidated allowance of Rs. 500 per month.

BENGAL CIVIL AND ANNUITY FUNDS.—The Government of India has requested the Managers of the Bengal Civil and Annuity Funds to direct their constituents to note on their pay bills the deductions from their salaries on account of their subscriptions to those funds. His Excellency the Governor-General in Council considers it inexpedient to throw upon Treasury Officers the responsibility of initiating and making the proper deductions from pay bills; the duty should legitimately be performed by the subscribers themselves, just as Uncovenanted Servants are obliged to do in regard to their subscriptions to the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund. His Excellency further remarks, that to enable a subscriber to know the amount he should deduct, when any change occurs in his family, the Secretary should be directed to inform the subscriber how his subscriptions are affected by the change; that is, how much they are to be increased or decreased. Moreover, when a subscriber is transferred from one district to another, he should take with him to the new Station a last pay certificate, which should show the whole of the deductions in all their details.

MYNPOORIE AGRICULTURAL EXHIBITION.—We learn from the Delhi Gazette that the Mynpoorie Agricultural Show, which took place on the 19th, 20th, and 21st January, has been a success. On the last date the Commissioner, Mr. Batten, arrived from Agra, and was in time to distribute the several prizes, and to thank the native gentlemen on the committee for their labours and for the assistance they had afforded to the local authorities. As there was a large mob assembled merely for the tamasha, who took no interest in mares, oxen, sheep, and cereals of all descriptions, some amusements were got up for them in the shape of elephant, camel, horse, pony, and coolie races. In the evening the Rajah of Mynpoorie had a display of fireworks, after which the great gathering dispersed.

SMALL POX STATIONS IN CALCUTTA.—There are thirteen stations in all, and we believe these will be increased if there be any necessity. Of the thirteen nine are gratis, and are intended for the use of the natives and the poorer classes of Eurasians. At the other four, namely, at Messrs. Scott, Thomson, Bathgate, and the late Messrs. Smith and Stanistreet's medical depots, and at the Presidency Medical Hall in Cornwallis-street, a fee of one rupee will be charged. Great efforts have been made by Dr. Charles to organise the vaccine department, and to make it meet an emergency which threatened to grow into a panic. He has himself vaccinated the pupils of the large schools, and hundreds of others, and he has, by unremitting labour of the most wearisome and thankless kind, got together a staff of operators, whose efforts, if well met, would soon place the danger of an epidemic out of the question.

CHANGES EFFECTED BY RAILWAY.—It has been determined by Government that, on the opening of the line of railway to Nagpore, the garrisons of Nagpore and Kamptee shall draw all their supplies of ordnance, and other stores, from Bombay instead of from Madras. This will effect a considerable saving in the cost of conveyance, and also prevent the accumulation of superfluous munitions of war in the local magazines, since under the contemplated arrangement only what the exigencies of the service absolutely require will from time to time be indented for. That in military matters Nagpore will eventually be administered from the capital of Western India is certain, and the change adverted to is only preparatory to that desirable consummation.

WEDDING GIFTS.—In addition to the wedding gifts of the Punjabees, Sir Robert Montgomery was asked by Maharajah Rumbheer Sing of Jummoo to take charge of some right royal presents for their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales.

POWER OF THE BAGPIPE.—A news-writer, gifted with a more than average strength of imagination, relates an instance of the effects of bagpiping in Allahabad, which is amusing if not instructive. He says that some Highlanders belonging to the 71st were playing the bagpipes, when to their astonishment a number of snakes came out of their subterraneous abodes and listened attentively to the sweet music the bagpipes discoursed. One mendacious Sandy went so far as to declare that they danced an unexceptionable reel in true Highland style. However, the laddies fell to hunting the poor snakes—which was a great shame, and slew them—which was a still greater shame.—Hurkaru.

DEATHS ON THE CASHMERE FRONTIERS.—Some time since Lieutenant Birch was deputed to examine into the cause of several deaths on the Cashmere Frontiers, the circumstances connected with them seeming to call for inquiry. We now hear that after a full investigation the mysterious part of the business has been exploded, and the officers of the Rajah of Jummo cleared of all blame. It is somewhat singular to remark how all the late investigations into matters concerning native chiefs or their officers seem to have come to nothing. It is very illustrative of the elements of native society.

DELHI GARRISON.—According to the Hurkaru, there is a revival of the rumour that Delhi is to be abandoned as a station for European troops, with the addition that Sir Hugh Rose encourages the idea. Considering the sufferings of the regiments quartered there for the past six months, and the annually recurring maladies to which they are subject, nothing could be more desirable from a personal point of view. To leave Delhi, however, garrisoned by a purely native force, would be the maddest folly of the day, which it is utterly impossible to conceive could be allowed by men who have lived through the mutiny.

DIFFUSION OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.—The wise rule promulgated by the Viceroy, requiring all correspondence with native princes to be in English, is bearing fruits in a manner somewhat unexpected. The Maharajah of Rewah has come to the conclusion that a knowledge of English is to be highly desired, and has, with a view to its being properly acquired by his chiefs and sirdars, established an English school at his capital. In connection with this laudable work he has also determined upon founding a scholarship at the College at Benares.

RAILWAY THROUGH RAJPOOTANA.—The scheme for constructing a line of railway through Rajpootana seems to have met with unexpected favour at the hands of the native chiefs of that district. The Rajahs of Ruthan, Sittana, Seeta Mhow, and the Nawab of Jowra have come forward with offers of land for the proposed railway from Baroda to Indore, which we presume will now be pushed on fast. Indore must always be a point of very great importance, and a railway from Baroda will open up the valley of the Nerbudda, besides acting as a work of considerable political and strategic importance.

CALCUTTA IMPROVEMENTS.—Lieut. Dundas, of the Royal Engineers, has been selected by the Government of Bengal to improve the condition of the Strand Bank of that hitherto neglected town. The gallant officer has been directed to hold his office in Writers' Buildings, and to perform his duties in subordination to Mr. V. H. Schaleh, the Chairman of the Justices and Commissioner of Police. A small staff of clerks has also been allowed to Lieut. Dundas, for the purpose of correspondence and other minor details.

COLONEL BRUCE, who has been appointed Inspector-General of Police, Lower Provinces, has been allowed by the Government of India a personal allowance of Rs. 200 per mensem, in addition to his salary of Rs. 2,500.

LOSS OF THE "CITY OF BENARES" BY FIRE.—On the afternoon of the 28th January the City of Benares, Captain Black, belonging to Messrs. S. Smith and Company, of Glasgow, loading with jute for London, was perceived to be on fire. Mr. Baring, assistant harbour-master, was soon on board, and the Howrah ferry boat promptly took the unfortunate vessel in tow. She was towed on shore opposite Messrs. Rawlinson's yard, at Ramkistopore, and just above where the Cama Family is lying high and dry. Notwithstanding that every effort was made to extinguish the fire, at daylight on the following morning she was found burnt to the water's edge.

SMALL-POX IN NEPAUL.—We regret to learn from Nepaul that small-pox has made its appearance there among the refugees from British territories. It is stated that one of the widows of the late Bajee Rao has fallen a victim to the disease. The Nepalese Durbar seem fully alive to the character of the visitation, and have resolved upon taking whatever measures will tend to check it. With this view two native doctors have been sent to the Residency, with a request that they may be taught to vaccinate.

INCREASE OF WHARFAGE DUTIES—CALCUTTA.—It will probably interest our mercantile readers to learn that on the representation of his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, the Governor-general has sanctioned an increase of the wharf establishment, by the employment of supernumeraries. This will raise the total expenditure on this account to about Rs. 6,000 per mensem, to meet which it is proposed to slightly increase the present rate of wharfage duties.

GRANTS IN AID.—We are given to understand that the Director of Public Instruction has asked for the sum of Rs. 3,75,000 for grants-in-aid to schools for the ensuing year, 1865-66. The amount for the current year is Rs. 2,50,000. The increase, as explained, is owing to the greater extension of the grant-in-aid system. It is proposed to extend it as much as possible throughout the Lower Provinces. In Calcutta the Boys' School, Free School, and Benevolent Institution have been or will be brought under its rules, as far as their circumstances will allow. The Director has further asked for a lac of rupees for elementary vernacular education in the Mofussil.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.—The heavy showers of rain which have fallen during the last fortnight in January from Lahore to Calcutta have somewhat abated the heat, which has prevented Northern India from enjoying its usual cold season. But we fear the rain has fallen too late to save the crops, which, even in such districts as those of Goruckpore and Benares, have failed to a greater extent than since the last famine. Even in Bengal the rice harvest will be short. On the whole, the crops all over the country are likely to yield less than the average, and prices will doubtless be high.

N.W.P. HIGH COURT.—The Delhi Gazette has good authority for stating that the Honourable Justice Norman will be the First Judge of the new High Court for these provinces; and that Baboo Jugadanund Mookerjee, junior Government pleader in the Calcutta Court, will be the first native judge. The nomination of Justice Norman will be accepted with pleasure. The native judge is said to be a clever lawyer. He was for a length of time presiding over a Mofussil Court, and has for some years held his present position with much credit.

MAJOR W. H. STUBBS.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has appointed Captain and Brevet Major W. H. Stubbs, of the Staff Corps, and heretofore Garrison Quartermaster in Fort William, to be second in command of the 4th Regiment N.I., at Jhansi. The 4th N.I. is the old 33rd N.I., in which Major Stubbs rose.

MR. CHARLES U. AITCHISON, Under-Secretary in the Foreign Department, has resigned that appointment for a Deputy Commissionership in the Punjab. Mr. Aitchison had not been three years in that province when his great abilities, manifested especially as Assistant to the Judicial Commissioner, led to his selection, unasked, by Lord Canning's Government, as the successor of Mr. Simson in the Foreign Office. For the last five and a half years, under Mr. Beadon, during the short tenure of office by Messrs. Barnes, A. Young and Bayley, and under Colonel Durand, Mr. Aitchison has been identified with Lord Canning's successful foreign policy. For a considerable time he acted as Foreign Secretary, and discharged the duties of the most responsible office in India so well that, in a formal minute, Lord Canning declared his standing in the service alone disqualified him from permanently filling the appointment. His "Collection of Treaties," about to be completed by the publication of the seventh volume, has given the public as high an idea of his ability as Government had been led to form. The slightest self-assertion might have made Mr. Aitchison Secretary to the Punjab Government, but a few years' experience of district duties will, doubtless, be more beneficial to his future career. Seldom has a young civilian given such promise of a brilliant future as the retiring under-secretary. Mr. Aitchison is heartily acknowledged as facile princeps by his contemporaries, and is a striking illustration of the advantages of the competitive system as it was in the first few years of its existence, when cramming was unknown, because it was impossible.—Friend of India.

THE PORT CANNING SHARES were allotted on Monday, January 30th, and the market opened at 4,000 Rupees Premium, and have been as high as 9,000 Rupees, receding to 5,000 and again touching 7,000 premium. The excitement regarding the shares of this company during the week has been considerable, whilst the anxiety on the subject of the allotment was extraordinary. In fact, the scene at Messrs. Borradaile, Schiller, and Co.'s office on last Monday afternoon was something new to the calm immobile citizens of Calcutta. At two o'clock in the afternoon there was an assemblage of bankers, merchants, civilians, and military-men, and we dare say the enunciation might have been wound-up, as the boys reckon their prospects on their buttons. The allotment of the Mutlah shares was in progress, and happy was he who found that it was all right. An excellent method was adopted for the sake of order, the entry to the office was made by one door, and the exit by another, so that order was well-maintained, and the countenance of the disappointed was not exposed to the scrutiny of the pressing crowd. The police were in attendance, and all went off without accident or confusion.—Englishman.

MR. LILLIE, Judge of Burdwan, intends taking his furlough immediately, and will be succeeded by Mr. Bright. The offices of collector and magistrate of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs are to be united, as in every other district in the country, and a medical officer has been placed in charge of the Alipore Jail, relieving the magistrate now burdened with the duties of the collectorate. Mr. Lance, at present magistrate and collector of Monghyr, is appointed additional Judge of Backergunge.

UNCOVENANTED SERVICE ABSENTEE PAY.—The Governor-General in Council has resolved that, as an Uncovenanted Officer, who obtains leave on private affairs under Section 14 of the Leave Rules of the 13th April, 1864, is allowed to draw his absentee pay, monthly, during such absence, the mere circumstance of his resigning his appointment without return to duty would not render him liable to a refund of that absentee pay.

THE PUNJAB COMMISSION.—There are evidently great changes approaching in the Punjab Commission. Sir Herbert Edwards resigns the service; Colonel G. W. Hamilton will go out under the terms of the Thirty-five years Order; Colonel Lake is appointed Financial Commissioner; Mr. Cust is in Council, but will resign soon; Major James is dead, and Messrs. Melvill and Forsyth have gone to England on furlough. The vacancies created by the death of Major James and the promotion of Colonel Lake have been filled up by Mr. Ford and Mr. F. H. Cooper. The three senior Deputy Commissioners who ought, by right, to be appointed to the other vacancies, are Messrs. Egerton and Farington and Colonel Voyle; but rumour says that the former does not want to leave Kangra, and that the second and third are likely to be passed over. The two Uncovenanted are General Van Cortland and Mr. Oliver, but as the former is already drawing Rs. 2,500 a month, he is not likely to wish for so much extra responsibility, accompanied only by an extra Rs. 250. Mr. Oliver, it is said, has been so very lucky hitherto in promotion, that he may be now passed over, but though this may be a very convenient theory to go upon, it is certainly not a just one. Mr. Prinsep, the next in rank, is Settlement Commissioner, and Mr. Cooper, the next again, has been already promoted. The other names are Nasmyth, Bush, Pollock, Cracroft, McNeile, Brandreth, Graham and Cripps. The betting at Lahore, to use a sporting phrase, is in favour of Pollock and Cracroft, and Nasmyth and MacNeile. The death of Major Adams will make a vacancy among the Deputy Commissioners, and an officiating Deputy will be wanted at Simla to succeed Colonel Lawrence, transferred to Nepal.—Englishman.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—The Government of India is about to lose the services of Mr. Cust. Even the warmest admirers of Colonel Lake would have liked to see Mr. Cust once more in the Punjab Financial Commissioner's office, which he did so much to reorganise. But the necessity for visiting England has led him to forego the almost certainty of an appointment to higher offices in Calcutta than any the Punjab could offer. Should Mr. Temple not be allured to Calcutta by the Foreign Office, it is his intention to seek three months' rest in England during the hot season. Mr. George Campbell will take his place. We believe that ill-health will shortly lead Colonel Elliot to resign his position as Governor General's Agent in Rajpootana. It will probably be as difficult to find a successor for him as for Colonel Durand in the Foreign Office. We do not remember, during the past twelve years, that so many high appointments have been vacant at a time when it was so difficult to name men worthy of filling them.—Friend of India.

DEATH OF MR. STEVENS.—A gloom has just been cast over Lahore society, more especially that portion of it connected with the Punjab Railway Company, by the receipt of a telegram announcing the death, at Kurriachee, on Saturday, the 28th January, of Mr. Richard White Stevens, the respected Agent of the Punjab and Delhi Railways, who had reached that port on his way to England, on medical leave of absence, but was destined to proceed no further on his way. Mr. Stevens had an attack of paralysis last September, at Murree, depriving him of the use of his left side, and from which attack he never recovered; his medical advisers considering the only chance of his ultimate restoration to health being his quitting India before the approaching hot weather.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.—The Government of India in the Financial Department has sanctioned an establishment of Rs. 1,512 per month to carry out the scheme of Audit and Account for the Marine Department, recommended by Messrs. Foster and Whiffin.

LIEUTENANT RAIKES, who was killed the other day by a fall from his horse, was a young officer of considerable promise. He had just been transferred to the Staff Corps, having exchanged from the 93rd Highlanders to the 107th Regiment for that purpose. He served for some time on the personal staff of Sir Robert Montgomery, and was afterwards appointed Assistant Commissioner of Goojranwallah, which office he was holding at the time of his death.

BANKING IN OUDE.—At a recent meeting of the shareholders of the Oudh and United Service Bank, the following results were exhibited:—The gross profits realised during the past half-year amounted to Rs. 4,638, expenses of management to Rs. 1,315, and interest on fixed deposits to Rs. 515, which left a surplus of Rs. 2,807. On this a dividend was declared of Rs. 6 per cent., or Rs. 0-14-4 per share; Rs. 1,200 was carried to the credit of the reserve fund.

THE CINCHONA PLANTATION at Darjeeling is flourishing. A greater number of plants have been propagated, inasmuch that it has become necessary to spread the garden over a larger extent of ground. The superintendent is now under the necessity of laying down roads to connect the different parts of the plantation, and an assistant gardener has been appointed.

BABOO HEMMUT BAHADOOR.—The Government of Bengal has sanctioned the payment of Rs. 800 for the purchase of a gold watch and chain to be presented to Baboo Hemmut Bahadoor of Patna, as compensation for the loss of an elephant lent by him to Government during the mutiny in 1857.

COMPLIMENT TO SIR R. MONTGOMERY.—The residents of Goojaira have requested the Supreme Government to name the new station there Montgomery, in honour of Sir Robert, and in gratitude for the many benefits which have accrued to them from his administration.

PROHIBITION OF FLOGGING IN CACHAR.—Some time since a Mr. Gardner, of Cachar, was mixed up in a case of culpable homicide. The case attracted the attention of the Government, and we now learn that orders have been issued prohibiting the flogging of coolies by the planters.

Lawrence, C.B., as Deputy Commissioner and Superintendent of Hill States, Simla; and Lieutenant-Colonel S. Blane, H.M.'s 52nd L.I., who has been so popular as Military Secretary to previous Viceroys, succeeds Major Impey.

CENTRAL DISTILLERY SYSTEM.—The decrease in the excise revenue during the current year, owing to the recent extension in the Lower Provinces of the Central Distillery system, has been estimated by the Board of Revenue to be about a lac and a half.

BREVET MAJOR A. S. ALLEN, of the Staff Corps, and of the late 34th N. I., has been appointed a wing officer of the 5th Regiment N. I. at Dacca, in succession to Captain Stone, deceased.

TOBACCO ON THE NEILGHERRIES.—It has been found that this plant will grow in Ootacamund to the greatest perfection. A few specimens are described as 'great bushes, with leaves of gigantic size. The wild variety is said to be seen everywhere in the neighbourhood, springing up in profusion, and suggesting what enterprise might effect for the supply of the local markets, which are thrown entirely on Manila and Burmah for their wants.

RAILWAY TO COCHIN.—Messrs. Scott, Brothers, and Co. have proposed the construction of a junction line from the Madras Railway Station at Shoranoor to Narakal and Cochin, in the territory of the Rajah of Cochin. His Highness supports the proposition, and is prepared to grant considerable concessions, in the shape of land required for the terminus, &c., on condition that the Government will give a guarantee against competition.

A TALE OF A TUB.—According to a Madras contemporary, the Government of that presidency has sanctioned the substitution of ale and porter casks in lieu of bathing tubs, in the proportion of two of the former (cut in two) to one of the latter. The inspector-general of ordnance and magazines has accordingly notified to officers concerned, that when bathing tubs require replacement, the course above-mentioned may be adopted, and officers commanding divisions are requested to report at the end of twelve months from date hereof, for information of Government, as to the suitability or otherwise of the porter or ale casks for ablutionary purposes.

CINCHONA ON THE NEILGHERRIES.—From an official report of the Superintendent of the Government Cinchona Plantations on the Hills, it appears that the number of plants permanently planted out during the month of December remain the same as in the previous month, namely 1,65,351. The increase by propagation is 24,006, being 3,024 plants above the average of the last six months, making the total number of plants at the end of the month, 499,452. The average growth of eleven plants of Cinchona succirubra planted out by his Excellency the Governor and other gentlemen at Neldivut-tum on the 30th August, 1862, during the month is $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch, being 2 inches under the growth of last month. One of the two plants cut down on the 20th of March, 1863, for bark submitted to Mr. Howard for analysis has made strong shoots of 53 inches in height, giving the growth of 1 inch during the month. The twelve plants of Cinchona Officialis (a shrubby species) on the Doda-betta plantation, gives average growth of 2 5-6th inches, or 1-6th of an inch below the growth of last month. The number of plants issued to the public is 200, making the total number of plants distributed 52,357.

THE WAGHURS.—It is stated by a vernacular contemporary that the Waghurs have plundered two villages somewhere near Katty-war.

DIABOLICAL ATTEMPT TO UPSET A RAILWAY TRAIN.—One of the most nefarious and carefully planned acts of villany which it has of late been our duty to record occurred on Saturday night, February 11th, in an attempt to upset a passenger train on the Great Indian Peninsular Railway. The train was the up passenger train, leaving Sheegaum at an early hour on Saturday morning for Bombay. It was due at Niphar, on the north-eastern extension of the railway, about eight o'clock on Saturday evening, and departed from Niphar in regular course for Bombay. When about three and a half miles on its way, however, it rushed upon a "loaded" rail, which had been laid across the line, with the evident purpose of upsetting it or throwing it off the rails. A "loaded" rail consists in one rail being laid across the line, and another rail being laid across each end of that rail to hold it down. The result was that the engine was thrown from the line, and it dashed over the embankment and through the fence wall, dragging the tender with it, which was overturned. The break-van was smashed to pieces, and six of the carriages rushed to one side of the rails, and two to the other. As we have said, no one was injured, although every one, more or less, experienced the concussion, and all were in a state of great alarm, the darkness not being calculated to diminish their terrors. It is supposed that the break-van, on which the shock of the accident and burden of the damage fell, was the means of preventing any loss of life or injury to person, and this cannot but be regarded as a very providential circumstance, seeing that the train was bearing along with it several hundred passengers. When the passengers succeeded in leaving the carriages the cause of the accident was at once ascertained; but they discovered another circumstance which added to their alarm and indignation. In the event of the loaded rail failing to throw the train from the line, they found that the most effectual means had been taken, at a little distance beyond, to ensure that result. There were no fewer than three other obstructions, consisting of iron fence posts grouped and pinned into lots, as it were, from 200 to 300 yards apart, so that it would have been utterly impossible for the train to make its way over all these impediments, even supposing the loaded rail had been jolted or moved from its position by the rapid motion of the train. It was at once apparent that all this had been the work of a considerable number of hands, and of hands which had been promptly and concertedly at work. About an hour before the train reached Niphar it was crossed by a down train going in the opposite direction, and the line must have been then clear to have allowed that train to pass. The obstructions must have been laid therefore during that hour; but as the rails and iron posts are very heavy, requiring about eight or ten men to lift them, there must have been a numerous gang of conspirators at work to lay them in position. No trace of them has yet been discovered. — Bombay Gazette.

NATIVE PORTRAIT GALLERY.—The arrangement regarding the projected Portrait Gallery of distinguished natives of India progresses, we understand, most satisfactorily. Subscribers are hoped for from every part of England, and Mr. Sorabjee Jehangier Paruck has it in contemplation to visit England to secure the services of first-class artists, so that the work may be worthy of the patronage bestowed on it.

ROYAL BANK OF INDIA.—A native contemporary states that the Directors of the Royal Bank of India have accepted the resignation by Mr. J. Gordon of the office of Manager of the Bank.

THE REV. R. F. COLVIN, late Senior Chaplain, Church of Scotland, in Bombay, retired from the service, from the 21st November last.

AMALGAMATION OF SINDE WITH THE PUNJAB.—The Sindian has been long advocating this idea, and now puts it forth in the only light it fancies its advantages will be recognised by the members of the present Government—which is, that it will effect a large saving of expenditure. It says:—In the first place the Commissioner's salary amounts to Rs. 4,416-10-8, and this large sum he receives to administer the affairs of a tract of country containing about 60,000 square miles, with between 19 and 20,00,000 inhabitants, whilst the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, receiving Rs. 8,744-5-4, or barely double our Commissioner's, rules over a territory of about 130,000 square miles, and a population of probably not less than 16,000,000 souls. The revenue he has to administer amounts to Rs. 340,26,619, whilst that of Sind is only Rs. 60,52,891. The establishment about the Commissioner's person to assist in managing the affairs of the province, receive salaries to the amount of Rs. 3,550 per mensem, making a total sum of Rs. 7,716-10-8 paid monthly for what we may call the general government of Sind. If to this amount we add the salaries of the Collectors, their Deputies, &c., say Rs. 17,627, we shall have a total expenditure under the head of administration alone of Rs. 25,343. And to this result we arrive without taking into consideration any retrenchment that might be made in the Frontier, Customs, Police, Revenue Survey, Settlement, Forest, and Public Works Departments. Now, if we take the Trans-Indus provinces of the Punjab, which are more populous than Sind, we find that the total cost of government there amounts to less than Rs. 20,000 per mensem. We have made no mention of the cost of our judiciary, which amounts to nearly Rs. 6,000, whilst that of the Trans-Indus districts reaches Rs. 1,000 only for the maintenance of a judge of the Small Cause Court at Peshawar. We would point out also that a separate Chief Engineer on nearly Rs. 2,000 would be no longer required in Sind, nor a Deputy-Consulting Engineer for Railways, on Rs. 865.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—There are likely to be, relatively, as many official changes in Bombay his hot season as in Calcutta. Sir Bartle Frere's advisers, Messrs. Frere and Inverarity, will leave India, to be succeeded, we believe, by Mr. C. Erskine and Mr. Anderson, should Mr. Mansfield prefer to remain as Commissioner of Sind. In the event of Mr. Anderson entering the executive council, Bombay will be represented in the Imperial Legislature by one who has the reputation of being the ablest member of his service, Mr. Ellis, at present revenue commissioner of the Northern Division. Mr. Ellis is a Jew, and if he takes his seat in the Viceroy's Council we shall have a motley collection of the representatives of creeds and Christian sects (Hindoos, Mahomedans, Jews, Episcopalians, and Presbyterians) discussing such topics as the meaning of the words of our Lord and his Apostle, and the grounds of Parsee and Christian divorce and marriage.

GUZERAT FINANCIAL ASSOCIATION.—The joint-stock mania is not confined to the city of Bombay, though most of the capital made from cotton centres there. The leading English and native residents of Ahmedabad have established the Guzerat Financial Association to supersede existing banks, and ultimately, as one Parsee speaker said at the inaugural meeting, to rival Bombay. The chief promoters of the association are two Shets, or private bankers—Nurotundass and Jummadass. In Bombay the Shets and Parsees beat the English capitalists; in Northern and Eastern India the branches of the Bank of Bengal have beaten the native bankers.

MR. JAMES SEWELL WHITE, Legal Remembrancer, has been nominated to be an additional member of the Bombay Legislative Council, in the room of Mr. A. D. Robertson resigned.

MEDICAL STATISTICS.—At a recent meeting of the Medical and Physical Society of Bombay, Dr. Coles submitted some statistics he had compiled from the year 1829 to the present time, relative to the medical charge of troop ships from England to Bombay. From these we glean a few facts of interest to the general public. The total number of persons brought to Bombay in 226 ships was 55,360, or about 245 on board of each ship. The total consisted of 1,010 officers, 40,688 soldiers, 2,573 women, and 2,216 children. The number of cases of sickness recorded on the voyages was 19,885. Of these 18,109 recovered, 255 died, and 721 were transferred sick on shore. Of the number of persons who died, there was one officer, 144 soldiers, 17 women, and 93 children; besides 18 instances of accidental death from drowning. There were 104 ships in which no casualty of any description whatever occurred on the voyages. The highest number of deaths which happened on board of any vessel was 17, and that arose from cholera in the summer of 1854, before the vessel finally left the shores of England. In one ship 8 casualties occurred. There were two ships which lost 7 men each, eight ships with four deaths each, and nineteen ships with three casualties each. The fatal diseases amongst the men were in the following order of numbers:—Phthisis 30, fever 20, cholera 14, bronchitis 9, secondary syphilis 9, pneumonia 8, apoplexy 5, pleuritis 5, hepatitis 4. The remaining number of fatal cases were from all other diseases, making up a total of 145. Amongst the women the fatal cases arose from fever 4, phthisis 3, debility 2, cholera 2, other diseases 8, total 17. Amongst the children 15 casualties happened from mesenteric disease, 14 from marasmus, 13 from convulsions, 10 from fever, 6 from diarrhoea; whilst dentition, measles, and other diseases made up the total to 93 casualties. Dr. Coles stated that in the earlier years ships usually left England at the beginning of the year, so as to reach Bombay in the hot weather, the probable reason being that the ship was destined for China, and hence her departure from England was regulated more with a view to the requirements of the China trade than to the health and comfort of the troops embarked; but of late years the vessels have for the most part reached Bombay at the beginning of the cold season.

EVIL PROPHECIES IN CANARA.—The Belgam Samachar, a native paper, translates some letters which are circulating absurd predictions throughout Canara. They say that from the 21st of April next one Virvasant Roy will be lord paramount of the "ocean-bounded earth." There will be a sort of millennial bliss till October, when a great deluge will destroy all but a handful of human beings, over whom Virvasant Roy will reign happily for a century. "Then it will be possible for a hundred persons to live on a rupee. Men will be religious and charitable, women will be free from widowhood, there will be no danger from thieves and serpents, and human life will be prolonged to a hundred years." Caste, however, is to continue. All who purchase a copy of these letters are to be saved. This nonsense seems to have no political meaning.

THE BOMBAY HOUSE OF CORRECTION.—During the past year there has been a large profit derived from the labour of the prisoners in this institution, out of which no less a sum than Rs. 10,000 has been placed to the credit of Government. The whole net profits from this source since the opening of the prison in 1827 only amounted to Rs. 6,000 up to the end of 1863; the greatest amount in any one year being Rs. 3,000. There has also been a saving of Rs. 12,000—just a thousand a month—in the provision department of the establishment, and this in spite of the fact that during the past year provisions were dearer than at any period during its existence.

SUPERANNUATION PENSION.—The following case of superannuation pension, which has lately been decided by the supreme government, may be found interesting to uncovenanted officers. A Principal Sudder Ameen at Poonah, in the Presidency of Bombay served Government for about 38 years. He was promoted to the first grade, and was in receipt of rupees 600 a month within the last two years only. The Bombay Government, however, compelled him to retire on a pension. He thereupon prayed for an extension of the period of his service for three years more, to enable him to retire on a pension amounting to one-half of his present salary, viz. 300 rupees. As he had served Government faithfully for an unusually long period, the Government of India made his case a special one, and recommended to the Secretary of State that a pension of rupees 300 per mensem, being one-half of his present salary, be allowed to him.

SPIRITUAL DESTITUTION.—The scandal caused in so many districts of Northern and Eastern India by the absence of all provision for the spiritual needs of scattered English residents, is felt also in Bombay. In a letter apologising for inability to attend a public meeting of the Gospel Propagation Society, Sir Bartle Frere writes:—"I trust that the Society will not rest till it has provided the means of regular public worship, and some system of regular periodical pastoral visiting, and of instruction for children, as well as for adults, who wish to be instructed, at every station where our countrymen are permanently stationed, and where there is as yet no regular provision for public worship or Christian schools, including, as such a scheme must, all the stations on our railways at which Europeans are habitually resident, and many large quarters of our towns and cantonments where pensioners and others reside beyond the chaplain's reach." His Excellency adds:—"Government will gladly aid in a matter of such vital importance to the temporal and spiritual welfare of some of its most valued servants." The churches at home are beginning to be thoroughly roused on this pressing question. But although Lord Canning did a little to assist in the way of schools for poor Christians, neither Government nor the railway companies hold out adequate encouragement to greater efforts. Travelling English and Presbyterian ministers are sadly wanted.

NATIVE APPRECIATION OF MEDICAL SCIENCE.—When presiding at the recent examination of the Grant Medical College in Bombay, Sir Bartle Frere said "there was no feature connected with native society in Bombay which gave him greater confidence in its solid progress in enlightenment and intelligence than the fact that medical men, trained as the best and most distinguished pupils of that institution had been, were appreciated and trusted in the native community in the same manner as the medical practitioners who enjoy the respect and confidence of the most enlightened classes of civilised Europe. This fact would no doubt in time operate as in Europe to draw recruits to the ranks of an honoured profession." In Calcutta this has for years been the case. Dr. Peet, who as Principal has done so much for medical science in Bombay, is to be succeeded as Principal, we believe, by Dr. Giraud.

MESSRS. ROGERS AND CO.—An offer of Rs. 16,50,000 has been made for the purchase of the good-will and stock in trade of Messrs. Rogers and Co., chemists, by gentlemen who are sanguine of prospective profits fully equal to those realised by the rival establishment of Messrs. Treacher and Co.

MR. D. J. KENNELLY, of the Dock Yard, has been appointed Secretary to the United Victoria and Colaba Reclamation and Pier Company, on a salary of Rs. 2,000 a month.

THE THULL GHAT INCLINE.—This portion of the great Indian Peninsula Railway was opened for passenger traffic on the 1st February.

AUDIT AND ACCOUNT DEPARTMENT.—Mr. J. L. Lushington has been appointed Deputy Auditor and Accountant-general, Bombay, vice Mr. S. G. Birch, who retires from the service. Mr. Lushington delivered charge of the office of the Accountant-general, Bengal, to Mr. H. D. Sandeman, late Civil Paymaster, more than a week ago. Mr. Lushington has been associated with the Commissioners sent out from England to examine into the Indian system of audit and account, with the view of initiating himself into the new system, which the Commissioners have been directed to introduce experimentally in Bengal. The new system, as far as it has worked, appears to have given satisfaction to the superior authorities, for it appears to have been resolved upon to extend it gradually into the other presidencies; and hence Mr. Lushington was directed to place himself under the Commissioners. Mr. Lushington is well acquainted with the present system, and his knowledge and experience will be of very great use in introducing into Bombay the changes which the Commissioners have already begun in Bengal.—Hurkaru, Jan. 20.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

FRIDAY, March 10, 1865.

BRITISH RULE IN THE PUNJAB.

ONE of the most distinguished scholars in the great Punjab school of Indian statesmen has lately quitted his sphere of long usefulness to enjoy, at least for a time, a refined and lettered repose in his native land. When on the very point of resigning the reins of office to his successor, Sir Robert Montgomery resolved, in a happy moment, to draw up a brief record of the salient points of his six years' successful administration. The area of the province subject to his sway is estimated at about 10,000 square miles, and its population at fifteen millions, or one-half of that of the British Isles, and this without including several independent States in close political relationship with that satrapy. The loyalty of the Punjabees during the Sepoy War is matter of history; but what most sorely tried their attachment to the British Government was not so much the defection of our native army as their own discharge on the restoration of tranquillity. But even through that ordeal they passed to the perfect satisfaction of their rulers, no doubt, as Sir Robert frankly admits, in consequence of the liberal treatment then meted out to them—a gratuity of three to twelve months' pay, according to length of service, being given to the privates, while small allotments of land were bestowed upon their native officers. And the number of men trained to war who had to return to the monotonous pursuits of an agricultural life was really very considerable. In 1857 the native force in the Punjab was 58,870 strong, but by 1863 it had been reduced to 25,088. For all that, the internal tranquillity of the province has never for a moment been disturbed, while against the barbarians beyond the frontier the Sikh soldiery have ever acquitted themselves in a manner worthy of their martial renown. On the Derajat border the regular force has been supplemented by a body of militia mustering 217 bayonets and 403 sabres, and much benefit has been derived from their intimate knowledge of the adjacent hill country and the passes that lead into it.

The Pathan tribes inhabiting the Peshawur and Kohat Valleys are described as enjoying a large measure of material prosperity, and it is regretted that there are no adequate funds for constructing roads and works of irrigation in the Trans-Indus districts. So sensible are the people themselves of the value of such improvements, that in the lower Derajat some of the Belooch chiefs entertain a desire to make canals at their own expense.

The revenue for 1863-64 shows an increase of nearly half a million sterling over that of 1858-59, and amounted to £3,093,238. This grand total was made up as follows:—

Spirits, drugs, and opium ...	54,338
Salt and Customs	748,300
Canal revenue	85,467
Assessed taxes	51,653
Stamps	103,349
	£3,093,238

And not only has there been a steady increase of revenue, but it has taken place in a manner that indicates improvement in the material comforts of the inhabitants. The land-tax, for instance, in 1863-64 yielded £120,000 more than it did in 1858-59, while salt and Customs exhibited an increase of a quarter of a million, and the canal revenue of £46,500. On the other hand, the expenditure amounted to £1,638,150, exclusive of military charges other than for buildings. Law and, as a rule, justice, are proverbially cheap and expeditious in the Punjab. The procedure under the Civil Code has hitherto been as simple as possible, but Sir Robert Montgomery is of opinion that "the time has now come for the gradual introduction of a more precise procedure and a more elaborate judicial system." He therefore recommends the appointment of an English barrister to the post of second Judicial Commissioner, with power to try and punish European British subjects. This object, however, is likely to be better attained by the establishment of a branch of the High Court, as moved in the Viceroy's Council by the Hon. Mr. Cust. Within the last few years Small Cause Courts have been introduced into the Punjab with very beneficial effects, and in the towns of Lahore and Umritsur the Honorary Native Magistrates are said to have rendered great assistance to the regular Stipendiary Magistrates. The appointment of a Municipal Committee in each considerable town has been found to work exceedingly well, and as an example of native spirit and energy, Sir Robert cites the conversion, in the space of one year, into spacious public gardens, of the unsightly moat that girdled the city of Lahore. But far beyond all such exceptional efforts, Sir Robert wisely looks for "the real and stable benefits of the measure in the gradual training of the wealthier citizens to the transaction of business apart from their own private interests, and in the greater public spirit which this must engender."

The Police charges have been reduced from £446,100 in 1859, to £260,000, chiefly, through the abolition of the Military Police, and without in any way impairing the efficiency of the force. On the contrary, the native gentlemen frankly admit that the executive police are not only less oppressive, but also more efficient than was formerly the case. There is now, a closer and more frequent European supervision, so that cases of torture or extortion have become almost impossible. As a detective police, the present force are quite equal to their predecessors, and if inferior in any point it is only from a military point of view; but for all civil purposes they are sufficiently well drilled and disciplined, and instead of being a danger, are a real assistance to the Government.

The operations of the Educational Department were first extended to the Punjab in 1856-57, since when the annual expenditure has increased from less than £13,000 to upwards of £59,000, and the number of schools from 565 to 2,733, and of scholars from 6,177 to 86,292. And a particularly hopeful feature of this movement, is the fact that there are now 522 female schools, containing 10,058 girls, of which 313 schools, with 5,499 female pupils, are managed by native gentlemen. There cannot be two opinions as to the immense good likely to arise if women be permitted to take their proper place in the social system, but Sir Robert Montgomery wisely cautions his late subordinates from too great eagerness in forcing on this innovation. "The reformation," he writes, "is one so wrapped up with domestic interests that I would willingly see it unfold itself, even with some slowness, so that it may at last grow into the full proportions of a permanent and national institution."

The independent or quasi-independent States with whom the Government of the Punjab holds direct political communication are those of Afghanistan, Jummoo, Cashmere, Bhawalpoor, Putiala, Jheend, Nabha, and Kupoorthulla. Diplomatic relations with these princes are entirely conducted by means of native agents, who discharge their duties with zeal, fidelity, and intelligence, and at an aggregate annual cost of less than £8,000.

On the construction of roads and canals the late Lieutenant-governor dwells with justifiable complacency. The completion of the Baree Doab Canal, after an expenditure of well-nigh one million sterling, and of the Grand Trunk Road from Delhi to Peshawur, a distance of 582 miles; the opening of the Lahore and Umritsur Railway; and the approximate opening of the line to Mooltan; the commencement of a tunnel under the Indus, and the general improvement of all existing roads and means of transport; the development of tea-planting in the Kangra Valley; the encouragement given to sericulture at Peshawur, to flax-growing at Sealkote, to the breeding of horses, and to agriculture in general—are public works of the greatest importance, and of the highest value to the State, and over all these objects Sir Robert Montgomery has directed an enlightened and unflagging supervision. Neither has he laboured among an ungrateful people. While the industrial classes regard him as one of their truest benefactors, the chiefs and gentry at large regret the departure of a generous and large-hearted ruler, who pitied their past misfortunes, and not only treated them with unvarying courtesy and consideration, but availed himself of every opportunity to assist them in recovering something of their former rank and influence.

The Route of the Indus, and the Advance of Russia towards India. A Letter to W. P. Andrew, Esq. By an Officer of Thirteen Years' Service in the Punjab. W. H. Allen and Co.

The necessity of completing the great chain of communication between Calcutta and Kurrachee is so obvious that it seems almost a work of supererogation to write a single line in its favour. The East India Railway will at no distant period connect Calcutta with Delhi, without a single break. From the Imperial City a line has already been commenced, to run by way of Meerut, Moozuffernugger, Saharunpore, Umballa, Loodianah, and Jullunder to Umritsir, a distance of 310 miles. Between the last-named city and Lahore a short line, 32 miles in length, was opened for traffic at the end of 1862, and it is expected that in the course of the present month a continuous railway communication will exist between Lahore and Mooltan, a further distance of 220 miles. At this point, however, there occurs a break of 570 miles, in which the absence of an iron road is indifferently supplied by the Indus Steam Flotilla. Not that there is any fault to be found with the vessels employed by that company, except that they are inadequate to meet the vast requirements of the rapidly-increasing traffic between Mooltan and Kotree, the upper terminus of the Scinde Railway. The object, then, of the letter before us is to enlist the powerful influence and unconquerable energies of the chairman of the Scinde and Euphrates Valley Railways, so that no time be lost in forging the "missing link" to complete the iron road of 2,200 miles that will one day unite the Bay of Bengal with the Arabian Sea. The writer, who is evidently well acquainted with the subject he has taken in hand, proposes that a bridge be thrown across the Indus opposite Kotree, and that the line be carried up the left bank of the river, crossing the Sutlej above its confluence with the Chenab at Jelalpore. "This line," he says, "would be the shortest, the cheapest for construction, and would present the fewest engineering difficulties. This line, too, would provide for the traffic of which Hyderabad is the emporium, and would afford facilities for subsequently connecting Kurrachee and Bombay by a railway via Omercote and Deesa. Moreover, this line would be the safest, protected by the river from any depredations from border tribes on the opposite side." These are, undoubtedly, strong recommendations, and must carry great weight with the enterprising capitalists who may be induced to accomplish this certainly useful, and probably remunerative, undertaking. There can be no question, however, as to the propriety and wisdom of the course adopted by the advocate of this line, in endeavouring to obtain the support of one of the most zealous and successful promoters of Indian railways. If Mr. Andrew can be prevailed upon to give his aid to the completion of railway communication between Kurrachee and Calcutta, the question may be looked upon as already settled.

INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. A. MILLS gave notice that this day month (March 28) he should call attention to the existing regulations for competitive examinations for the Civil Service in India.

INDIAN STAFF APPOINTMENT.

Mr. TORRENS begged to ask the noble lord the Under Secretary for War the question standing in his name upon the paper. The terms of the question were "whether the noble lord would lay up the table a list of officers who had been seconded or made supernumerary in the Indian Artillery because of employment in miscellaneous staff appointments, in conformity with the despatch of the Secretary of State for India, No. 61, dated February 29, 1864, which was concurred in by the Secretary of State for War and his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief; and, in the event of the instructions therein contained not having been carried into effect, would he give the reasons for delay in obeying them?"

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said the papers referred to would appear in the Gazette in a few days, and, therefore, he did not think it would be necessary to lay them upon the table. The change which had taken place was consequent upon a long correspondence between the Home Government and the Government of India.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 6.

Petitions from officers of the Indian army, complaining of grievances, and praying for redress, were presented by Mr. W. MILLER, from Captain John Allen, late 9th Regiment; Captain Gordon Cavenagh, late 39th Regiment; and Captain H. A. Cockburn, 53rd Regiment Bengal Native Infantry; by Mr. CARGILL, from Major-general T. F. Fleming, Bengal Army; by Mr. CRUM-EWING, from Brevet-Major R. H. Price, 12th Bengal, and Captain M. J. Larpent, late 21st Bengal Native Infantry; by Mr. FARRER, from Captain R. Farrer, of the Indian Army; and by Colonel SYKES, from Major-general T. B. Boileau, late Bengal Artillery; Brevet-Captain T. N. Baker, late 31st Bengal, and Captain F. T. Bainbridge, late 64th Bengal Native Infantry.

NATIVE ARTILLERY IN INDIA.

Mr. VANSITTART asked the Secretary of State for India when it was determined to re-employ native artillery in India, which, by a return just issued, amounted to 2,052 men; how many of the 68,336 European troops in India were artillery; and whether he proposed to maintain the disproportionate strength of 68,336 Europeans as against 274,713 native troops, native police, and other native organised levies?

Sir C. WOOD said his hon. friend seemed to be under some misapprehension as to the re-employment of native artillery in India. Certain portions of the native artillery had never been discontinued.

Mr. VANSITTART: Not since the mutiny?

Sir C. WOOD: No. The commission which sat in this country recommended that the artillery attached to the army in India should consist of Europeans; exceptions, however, being made in the case of particular stations where it was inexpedient to employ Europeans. Hence, as a rule, wherever troops were quartered the artillery consisted of Europeans; but in places where exposure to a very hot sun rendered it dangerous for white troops to be placed the duty was discharged by a native force. Those Indian artillerymen, however, were only in charge of two or three guns at any one point, and were scattered about in very small numbers all over the country. The course adopted with regard to them was, therefore, entirely in accordance with the recommendations of the Indian Commission, which determined that a large special force of native artillery should no longer be maintained. The European artillery at present in India numbered between 12,000 and 13,000 men. The hon. member appeared to think the aggregate European force disproportioned to the native levies. The fact was that it was larger in proportion than at any previous period. Before the mutiny the army consisted of 232,000 men, after the mutiny it was 265,000, and it had since been reduced to 114,000 men. So far from the officers on the spot considering that too large a force, the Commander-in-Chief in India lately reported that the native army in Bengal was overworked, and that he would rather increase than diminish its numbers. The police, also, had not been increased to any very great extent, remembering that in old days about 40,000 of them armed exactly like soldiers, whereas in future they were to be a purely civil force. Orders had been issued as to the arms they were to possess, and the muskets which some of them carried were to be withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 7.

Petitions from Indian officers, praying for redress, were presented by Mr. HANKEY, from Brevet-Colonel J. C. Innes, 17th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry; Lieutenant-Colonel J. Liptrott, 4th Bengal Native Infantry; Major F. C. Innes, of the 60th Bengal Native Infantry; Major F. V. R. Jervis, 42nd Bengal Native Infantry; by Sir J. HAY, from Major F. W. Bean, Captain G. J. Dalrymple Hay, Captain T. M. Mackenzie, and Major E. W. E. Howard, of the Bengal Staff Corps; by Mr. VANSITTART, from Lieutenant-Colonel Blackett Revell, on the retired list of the Madras army; by Mr. LOCKE KING, from Major Peter Drummond, Captain Digby Compton, and Lieutenant Edward Bell Cox, of the Indian army.

India Office (Site and Approaches) Bill was brought in and read a first time.

BOLDERO v. THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Feb. 28.

The noble and learned lords present this morning were the Lord Chancellor, Lord Cranworth, and Lord Chelmsford.

This was an appeal from a decision of the Lord Chancellor, affirming a judgment of the Master of the Rolls in favour of the respondents.

Sir F. Kelly, Sir H. Cairns, and Mr. Joseph Chitty appeared for the appellant; Mr. Forsyth, Mr. Giffard, and Mr. Melville represented the respondents.

The question in this appeal was whether the appellant, as the executrix of her late husband, John Stephen Boldero, formerly a civil servant of the East India Company in Bengal, was entitled to the refund of the accumulated amount of his subscriptions to the Bengal Civil Service Annuity Fund in excess of half the value of the annuity of £1,000, which was payable to him out of the fund, and was received by him from the time of his retirement from the Civil Service in 1852 up to the day of his death. The suit was virtually instituted on behalf not only of the appellant, but of the other subscribers to the fund who were similarly situated. The Annuity Fund was established in 1825, and the question turns mainly upon two points—first, upon the construction of the lengthy documents establishing the fund; and, secondly, upon the subsequent despatches and conduct of the East India Company, as well in relation to that fund as to other annuity funds established in India upon the same principles by the Company. It appears that the civil servants of the Bengal establishment agreed to pay 4 per cent. on their official incomes towards the fund in question, the East India Company contributing a like sum annually towards the same object. The income derived from these sources far exceeded the charges upon the fund, and in April, 1850, there was in the hands of the company to the credit of the fund an unappropriated balance amounting to £600,000, and after paying the whole of the charges upon it there would at that time have remained £108,000 of disposable balance. The way the Company proposed then to deal with the fund was to convert to their own use the whole of the principal of the fund, and to pay the annual charges upon it out of their revenue. The appellant and other subscribers to the fund, however, objected to such an arrangement until they had been repaid out of the fund the amount they had contributed in excess of half the value of their annuities, the proportion the Company fixed for them to contribute.

IN RE W. P. WAUGH.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY, BASINGHALL-STREET.
—March 2.

(Before Mr. Commissioner Goulburn.)

This was an adjourned examination meeting under the failure of Colonel William Petrie Waugh, formerly a director of the London and Eastern Banking Corporation. The bankrupt was described in the proceedings against him as of Branksea Island, Dorset, and of Little Abingdon-street, Westminster, trading under the style or firm of the Branksea Clay and Pottery Company, brick and tile maker. Commencing on the 1st of October, 1852, with a surplus of £8,577, the accounts disclose the following items:—Unsecured creditors, £58,257; creditors holding security, £260,343; and creditors to be paid in full, £31; against—debtors, good, £1,165; and property in the hands of creditors, £185,281. The profits from October, 1852, to April, 1857, were returned at £5,967; and trade expenses, £4,123; farm expenses, £11,536; losses, £24,095; sundries, including legal and professional expenses, commission, interest, discounts, gifts, donations, &c., £51,069; Mrs. Waugh's jointure account, £3,594; and church account (subscriptions, &c.), £7,256; domestic and personal expenses, £44,555. The report of the official assignee upon the whole case has already been substantially given.

Mr. Linklater, who appeared on behalf of the creditors' assignees, said: The adjournment which your Honour was good enough to direct on the last occasion has resulted in the completion of an arrangement between the official managers of the London and Eastern Bank and the assignees. The Court will remember that two proofs were sought to be made by the representatives of the London and Eastern Bank, the one for £136,000 and the other for £36,000. Mr. Lewis and I have now signed a memorandum, embodying the terms of the arrangement as follows:—

“By consent and with the sanction of the Court proof admitted for £100,000, the official managers of the London and Eastern Bank retaining the securities they hold, subject as hereinafter mentioned; the official managers hereby agreeing that such proof shall rank for dividend in competition with the bankrupt's other creditors, in respect only of the net amount now in the hands of the assignees or to the credit of the estate, the whole of which, after payment of expenses and just allowances shall be divided forthwith, and that such proof shall after division of such net assets be expunged, and that no further proof or claim shall be made by the official managers on any account, in order that the assets hereafter to be realised may be divided among the other creditors; the assignees on their part agreeing (with the leave of the Court, which is hereby granted), at the expense of the official managers to aid them in realising the securities held by the London and Eastern Bank, and the official managers also agreeing to pay to the assignees, for distribution among the bankrupt's other creditors a moiety of the net proceeds to be received by virtue of such securities. Such further deeds as may be necessary for carrying out this arrangement to be executed, and the form settled, in case of difference, by counsel to be named by this Court.”

Mr. Commissioner Goulburn: Can I assent to this arrangement in the absence of creditors?

Mr. C. E. Lewis: Of its expediency there can be no doubt.

Mr. Linklater: We only desire to have your Honour's sanction to the admission of the proof.

Mr. Commissioner Goulburn: That I am willing to give.

Mr. Linklater: Then, in reference to the bankrupt's application to pass his examination, we have no opposition to offer. The accounts have been prepared by Mr. Brown, and we are disposed to accept them as satisfactory. Probably it may save time if I say now that, so far as the assignees are concerned, they will not object to the bankrupt's application for a certificate. Colonel Waugh has doubtless suffered very severely, the lapse of time since the bankruptcy has been long, and, having regard to decisions of the appellate tribunal, the assignees have arrived at the conclusion that he has been sufficiently punished. I make this statement, not only for the convenience of the Court, but also for the information of creditors, who may possibly take a different view, and the assignees will be able at a future time to justify the course which they have adopted.

Mr. Lewis: The gentlemen I represent will leave the question of the bankrupt's conduct entirely in the hands of the assignees. We have made the arrangement to which my friend Mr. Linklater has referred in deference to the opinion of the Court.

Mr. Commissioner Goulburn: Then the bankrupt will now pass his examination; and I am bound to say that Mr. Linklater has conducted this case with the greatest possible ability and fairness.

Mr. Sargood, who appeared for Colonel Waugh, said: I have now only to ask that an early day be appointed for the certificate sitting.

His Honour then named a day.

Mr. Bagley and Mr. Reed appeared for creditors seeking to establish proofs against the estate.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The specie taken by the India and China mail steamer Ellora amounts to £139,562, comprising only £866 in gold for Madras, the bulk being silver, of which £10,000 is for Calcutta, and £128,696 for China and the Straits.

THE CELEBRATED SANCI DIAMOND has been purchased by Messrs. Garrard, of the Haymarket, for Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, of Bombay, for £20,000. The historical interest attached to this stone is remarkable, and quite authentic. It formerly belonged to Charles the Bold, of Burgundy, then passed into the possession of the Sanci family, from whence it took its name, ultimately became one of the Crown jewels of France, was worn at the coronations of Louis XIV. and XV., and was stolen at the sack of the Tuileries in 1789; it then passed to the Queen of Ferdinand VII., of Spain, who gave it to Godoy, Prince de la Paix, and from him was transferred to the Demidoff family, its last possessors.

ARMY AND POLICE IN INDIA.—A return made up at the India-office states that there are in India 68,336 European troops—that is, non-commissioned officers and men; 114,833 native troops—namely, 17,490 cavalry, 2,052 artillery, and 95,291 infantry; 154,435 native police, 5,445 other native organized levies, and 14,347 contingents of native princes. The totals are 68,336 European troops, and 289,060 native troops and police.

FUNERAL OF LORD COMBERMERE.—On March 1st the funeral of Field-Marshal Lord Combermere took place at the old church of Wrenbury, the burial-place of the Combermere family, situate about five miles from the town of Nantwich. At noon the mourners proceeded to the Wrenbury station, where they were joined by a numerous body of the tenantry. In the mourning coaches were the Marquis of Devonshire, Sir Henry Mainwaring, the Hon. Colonel Cotton (now Viscount Combermere), Mr. J. C. Hunter, Admiral F. V. Cotton, the Rev. Dr. Cotton, Mr. C. Cotton, Captain H. Cotton, Captain L. Cotton, Mr. R. Cotton, and others. In the carriage which followed were the Earl Shrewsbury, Lord Hill, Mr. E. H. Trevor, Lord Kenyon, Sir J. Hanmer, M.P., Sir W. W. Wynne, Colonel Hon. de Ros, the Hon. E. Kenyon, Mr. J. Tollemache, M.P., Mr. P. Humberstone, M.P., &c. At the church the body was received by the Rev. Mr. Aldis, and the funeral service having been read, the coffin, with the coronet of the deceased, was lowered into the family vault amid the most profound silence.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.—Mr. C. T. Bright has addressed a letter to the morning papers, stating that a telegram was received in London on the morning of the 1st of March direct from Kurrachee, by way of the Persian Gulf. The time occupied in its transmission was only eight hours and a-half. The service on the line of the Indian Government between Fao, at the head of the Gulf and Kurrachee, is performed by the best English signallers, and is excellent, but it will probably be some time before the administration of the Turkish line can be so organised as to render the communication equally reliable. The International and Electric Telegraph Company have published their tariff for messages by the Indo-European line. To Bushire the charge for 20 words, including address and signature, is £2. 10s. 6d.; to Kurrachee, £4. 10s. 6d.; to Ceylon, £5. 8s.; to British Burmah, £5. 5s.; and to the three Presidencies, Bombay, Calcutta, and Madras, £5. 1s. For each additional ten words or fraction of ten words one-half of these rates must be added.

MALTA AND ALEXANDRIA TELEGRAPH.

There is as yet no satisfactory news to report of the Malta and Alexandria telegraph, which, in all probability, will continue out of working order for some time. The Fanny Lambert returned to Valetta on the morning of the 18th February, from Benghazi, for the purpose of refitting and recoaling, after having experienced, with little intermission since the 10th of January, perhaps the most stormy weather that has been felt on the coast of Barbary for nearly thirty years. Notwithstanding the utmost exertions used by the repairing staff, few opportunities were afforded for touching the cable, which was found to be very weak near the fault—that is, about thirty miles to the eastward of Benghazi. One of the ends was attached to a buoy, but it has since been broken away by the high waves. The Fanny Lambert, having been made ready for sea, will again leave as soon as the weather moderates, in order to repair a slight interruption near Tripoli, on the Benghazi side. The only section now remaining perfect is that between Tripoli and Malta. If successful she will resume operations on the Benghazi and Alexandria section; but new cable will be required from England to re-establish telegraphic communication with Alexandria.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for £300,000 in bills on India took place on the 28th February at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were—to Calcutta, £172,600; to Bombay, £120,000; and to Madras, £7,400. The minimum price was as before—1s. 11½d. on Calcutta and Madras, and 1s. 11½d. on Bombay. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 17 per cent., and on Bombay at 1s. 11½d., about 41 per cent.; above these prices in full. These results show some revival in the demand for means of remittance.

MURDER OF AN ENGLISH MERCHANT IN PERSIA.—Sir F. Crossley, M.P., has received the following letter relative to the murder in Persia of a Huddersfield merchant, from W. Hammond, and dated "Foreign-office, Feb. 10, 1865.—Sir,—I am directed by Earl Russell to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 8th inst., enclosing a letter from Mr. Edward Langfield upon the subject of the circumstances under which his brother, Mr. Benjamin Langfield, had been murdered by some Persian soldiers, near Shahrood, in July last, and I am to inform you, in reply, that her Majesty's Government has already received from her Majesty's Minister at Teheran the particulars of this melancholy occurrence, from which it appears that Mr. Benjamin Langfield, accompanied by his brother Abraham, passed through Teheran in February last on their way to Shahrood, with a view of speculating in cotton, and that they were duly warned by her Majesty's Secretary of Legation of the extreme risk they incurred by travelling in Persia without proper escort with large sums of money in their possession. It appears that on the 22nd of July, as Mr. Langfield and his servant were proceeding from the port of Gey to Shahrood, on entering the district of Bostam, they were attacked by some cavalry belonging to the Persian army, who, after having shot both master and man, robbed the dead body of Mr. Langfield of all the money he had in his possession, and decamped. Their bodies were subsequently recovered by a Christian resident of Shahrood, who had them removed to that place and buried there; their clothes and other articles found on them were placed in a room, where they are now locked up. Mr. Allison at once took measures to endeavour to trace the murderers and recover the stolen property, and with this view obtained the necessary order from the Shah to the Governor of Shahrood and to the Persian Commander-in-Chief for the discovery and arrest of the criminals. It does not appear, however, that those measures have as yet been attended with success; but instructions will be sent to Mr. Allison to make further inquiry into the matter, and strong representations to the Persian Government. Mr. Allison speaks in high terms of the assistance rendered by the Russian Minister at Teheran, and by the Russian Consul at Astorabad, in the steps taken for the apprehension of the murderers."

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF CEYLON.—(Downing-street, March 6.)—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Sir Hercules George Robert Robinson, Knt., to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Island of Ceylon and its dependencies.

APPOINTMENT.—(India-office, Feb. 20.)—Her Majesty has been pleased to appoint the Right Hon. William Nathaniel Massey to be an ordinary Member of the Council of the Governor-General of India.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—Bad legs, wounds, ulcers, and all descriptions of sores are cured by the proper and diligent use of this inimitable preparation. To attempt to cure bad legs by plastering the edges of the wound together is a folly, for should the skin unite, a boggy diseased condition remains underneath, to break out with tenfold fury in a few days. The only rational and successful treatment, as indicated by nature, is to reduce the inflammation in and about the wound, to soothe the neighbouring nerves, to cool the heated blood as it courses along its vessels, and so render the thin, watery, ichorous discharge consistent and healthy. Holloway's Pills should be taken at the same time to purify the blood and expel the obnoxious humours from the system.

They are self-adhesive, render support to the adjoining teeth, are fitted on a perfectly painless principle, and supplied at charges within the reach of all.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS,

Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 22s, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; post ge, 1s. 5d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d. postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Spoons, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d. JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

Earl Russell sent to the College of Physicians a communication received by him from Manila (where Cholera had been raging fearfully), to the effect, that, of all remedies tried, Chlorodyne was the most effective.—See Brit. Med. J., Dec. 31, 1864.

CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S). Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cramp, Ague, Consumption, Asthma, Cough, Colds, Bronchitis, Sea Sickness, &c., immediately relieved by a dose of TOWLE'S CHLORODYNE, which is admitted to be a most wonderful and valuable medicine, and preferred by the profession for its known composition and moderate price.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.

Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.
Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay, and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marseilles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

(Signed) GEORGE ALLEN, Chief Officer.

J. C. CONGDON, Master.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTH-

ING SYRUP, FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR

TEETH.—This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, FARRINGTON-STREET, LONDON (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle. Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

Price one guinea; half bottles, 10s. 6d. Testimonials from artists of the highest order and from individuals of undoubted respectability may be inspected on application.

Messrs. J. GOSNELL and Co. have been appointed Perfumers to H.R.H. the Princess of Wales.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and, combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and we adapted it for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Sedlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Sedlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinidine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for it taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THOUGH the news received from Calcutta by this mail is only two days later than that which reached us a week ago by way of Bombay, it possesses unusual interest and importance. It is now only too evident that the Bhootiahs have as yet by no means made up their minds to submit without a further struggle. Undismayed by the overwhelming superiority of the British Government, they appear resolved upon a further appeal to arms. Some thousand feet above the bed of the Toorsa river there is a stockade, difficult of access when approached from the plains, but easily taken in reverse from the higher ground in its rear. This fort, known as the Bala Stockade, was captured some time in December last by the Left Centre Column, and has since been occupied by a small and inadequate garrison. Before dawn on the morning of the 27th January the Bhootiahs suddenly rushed upon the sentries, drove them within the works, and attempted to force their way in at the same time. Fortunately the garrison was speedily alert, and succeeded in securing the gate before the enemy could effect an entrance. The Bhootiahs then laboured hard to cut it down with their sharp crooked knives, though exposed at close quarters to a sharp musketry fire. As daylight, however, broke, they retired into the jungle, after maintaining the unequal struggle for an hour and a-half. In this smart affair the British loss consisted of one sepoy killed and five wounded—the side of the stockade exposed to the attack being described as resembling a "fretful porcupine," so closely was it stuck over with arrows. Two days later, news was brought in that the enemy was constructing a stockade on the neighbouring heights, and a detachment was sent out to ascertain the fact. It had not marched far before its progress was opposed by a barricade, which was carried by assault. But a little further on a second barricade was met with, far stronger than the former one, and the assailants were repulsed with considerable loss. Two officers and six men were wounded, and one sepoy killed. To avenge this disaster, Colonel Watson on the 4th of February despatched as large a force as he could spare from his small command to drive the enemy from the stockade they had held so well. This enterprise also failed of success. The Bhootiahs fought gallantly from behind their stoneworks, though armed only with bows and arrows and crooked knives, and the result was that Lieutenant Millett, of the 11th N.I., was killed, and Lieutenant Cameron, of the Royal Artillery, and twelve or fifteen sepoys wounded. Two mountain guns were about to be forwarded to strengthen Colonel Watson's hands, and it is strange that an advanced post within sight of the enemy should have been suffered to remain thus unprotected. But English generals ever require to be cuffed and kicked at least half-a-dozen times before they will rouse themselves to give their enemy a hearty and decisive thrashing. As the rains are not likely to set in for some months to come, it is expected that an advance will now be made into the interior of the country, and perhaps peace dictated in the enemy's capital.

Small-pox was still prevalent in Calcutta and its suburbs. Indeed, owing to the unusually high temperature of the season, sickness of one kind or another was generally complained of among both natives and Europeans.

The Bheels and Meenas appear to be giving some trouble in Rajpootana, but rather in the character of marauders than of rebels. There have been disturbances, too, at Loharoo, but which were speedily suppressed.

Last night the annual motion relative to the Nawab of the Carnatic was made in the House of Commons. Sir Fitzroy Kelly made the most of his brief, but the House decided by a majority of 53 to 38 against granting even a committee of inquiry.

BENGAL.

A LADAK AGENCY.

Captain Lees is the chief, if not the sole, proprietor of the Nassau Tea Company at Holta. His manager there received an offer from some Cashmere traders for the coarser sort of leaves simply dried. The offer was an advantageous one, but for some reason or other did not take effect. It was immediately seen that if such leaves were manufactured into bricks, and a market found for the commodity in Central Asia, great profits would result. As a first step Captain Lees procured a specimen brick at Lahore or Umritsur at a high price. The manager prepared some bricks on this model, while a party proceeding into Central Asia promised to take them there, and see if the tea was marketable. These are the bricks on the prices of which Sir Robert Montgomery commented in his Kangra minute, but they were never sent. This is the history of Indian brick tea up to the present time. And it is therefore that the question of a British agent at Ladak has been raised by tea planters.

There cannot be the least doubt that if Indian brick tea can once find a market in Central Asia the profits of the Kangra Tea Gardens would be great. The consumption of the coarser sorts of bricks is very great. In Cashmere itself, and the border provinces of Lahoul and Spiti, it is not so large, but in Ladak, Great Thibet, and Toorkistan, tea forms a principal ingredient of every meal, whether of rich or poor, and it is the coarser kinds which are consumed. The greatest part of the refuse of the Chinese Tea Gardens traverses nearly the entire length of the continent of Asia to find a market in East and West Toorkistan, and the gains are still very great. If, therefore, Indian brick tea could once find an entrance in the markets of Central Asia there would be no limit either to the demand or the profit. The great question is whether the tea could find an entrance. We believe it could. The real difficulty is the successful manufacture of the bricks. The brick teas made at first at the Nassau estate quickly became mouldy, and were not well cemented. Some suggestions offered by the party who proposed to find a market for the bricks made them better; but still there was room for great improvement. The secret has yet to be learnt how to cement and harden the bricks. The taste of the decoction made from Indian brick tea is quite different from the flavour of China bricks—both are of a very coarse description, but while the former is enough to sicken the stomach, the latter is partially agreeable to the taste. There is either some ingredient put into the China tea, or the Kangra tea is not sufficiently manipulated and the acrid juice pressed out. It is just possible that the China bricks are made up out of the soaked and rejected stuff drunk in China, and the well known feature in the Chinese character of making everything useful would give countenance to this conjecture. We do not refer to the fine varieties of the China brick. If this is the case, what a large quantity of bricks might be made up of the soaked tea leaves which are thrown away every day throughout India, or are utilised by dealers without a conscience in England. Time no doubt will clear up the mystery involved in the manufacture of China brick tea, and the appointment of an agent at Ladak will help tea-growers in the matter. Captain Lees could not do better than desire some friend in China to send him the secret of the manufacture. Seeing, then, the prospect of a wider intercourse in trade with Central Asia, the Kangra tea planters have done wisely in bringing the subject before the Punjab Government.

But, independently of tea, there are strong reasons why an agency should be established at Ladak. The trade between East Toorkistan, including the rich and fertile provinces of Yarkund and Khoten, and the Punjab, all of which must necessarily pass through Ladak, is annually increasing, and the late concessions obtained from the Maharajah of Cashmere with reference to the duties leviable on goods must tend still more to increase it. Yet there is no one at Ladak to represent British trading interests. The Ladak Thannadar, who has the practical control of everything in Little Thibet, is known to be a grinding despot. Yarkundi, Cashmere, and Punjabi traders all alike fear to come into his hands. We know of British subjects who have ventured once into Ladak, but will not go there a second time. There is no one to save them from an unscrupulous native, who uses his power to wring out as much as he can in every possible way. The Lahore Government was obliged privately to depute a Thibetan subject only the other day to watch if the Thannadar was in any way impeding the late concessions. An agent therefore is much needed, if only as a counterpoise to the Thannadar's arbitrary proceedings, and to protect and foster trade with the Punjab. But the appointment of an intelligent agent who would take a deep interest in the expansion of the trade would lead to the happiest results. The Toorkistan traders require simply to receive bare protection—that is, justice—and to be gently invited, and have commercial matters explained to them, to make Ladak a great Central Asian mart. In spite of the present hindrances from the Ladak authority, and the execrable state of the roads, their native energy leads numbers to engage in the Punjab and Cashmere traffic. If they had some one to tell them the British Government was favourable to them, and would see they received justice, and if the roads were thoroughly repaired, it would be to the Maharajah's own benefit, and the Punjab would profit much by it. And need we say that such an agent would assist us in getting some knowledge of how things are going on in Central Asia? Our present information is entirely untrustworthy, the person employed for that purpose at Ladak being, for anything we know to the contrary, in Russian pay as well as in ours.

Such an agency, which would not only protect the interests of Punjab trade, but keep a good eye on Central Asian movements, was recommended last year to a high Punjab official; but Yarkund was the point selected. It is possible that, had the advice been acted on, we should be somewhat better informed than we are at present of the revolutions going on in East and West Toorkistan. The point, however, was considered too remote, although the general plan met with approval. There is a disinclination in the Punjab Government to interfere in any way in Central Asia, on account of the uncertainty of the momentous issues that may be brought about. Now, however, even if the Punjab Government felt inclined, no trading agent could be appointed to Yarkund. The country is being revolutionised, and there is too much risk; but there can be no possible objection, even at this, the eleventh hour, to the appointment of one at Ladak. Sir Robert Montgomery said, the proposal "will receive due consideration; and measures will be taken to ascertain whether British interests at Ladak are sufficiently important, and stand in such need of protection as to require the special interference of Government." We have shown that British interests at Ladak, in reference to the trade of the Punjab with Central Asia, are "sufficiently important," and "do stand in need of protection." Half of the entire Ladak trade may be called British. There would be no "special" interference at all in the matter. The interests of British trade simply are to be represented. But the late Lieutenant-Governor was always very yielding in matters where Cashmere was concerned. We cannot think, from our knowledge of all the facts of the case, that there has been much wisdom in this course. Let the promised "measures" for ascertaining the amount of British trade at Ladak, however, not be done in a way to frighten Oriental susceptibility.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PORT CANNING.—It is not without a certain kind of pleasure that we reflect that the Government will be compelled to join, in an indirect way, in the Great Port Canning undertaking, and to an extent which will cost no trifling expense. The dangers and difficulties of the river Hooghly, the pilotage being in our own hands, and other causes which we need not mention, have made us in Calcutta and the Government, look upon the city, protected also by Fort William, as beyond the danger of any hostile attack from the sea. Port Canning will, it is obvious, have to be put as nearly as possible in the same condition, not only on account of its own growing importance, and the serious interests that will be represented there, but because the Mutlah is the easiest approach to Calcutta from the sea; and Port Canning once occupied by an enemy, the capital of India is naked and defenceless on the Eastern side. It is obvious, then, that either forts or other such defensive works must be constructed to command the Mutlah from the sea to Port Canning, or that floating batteries must be employed; and it is certain also that, before many years more, it will be necessary to have barracks at Port Canning for European troops. All this cannot be done for nothing; and yet nothing is more certain than that, eventually, it must be done, if the new port, in the first instance, and the capital of India, secondarily, are to be protected from the risk of probable destruction and pillage by an enemy, in case of a naval war between England and any of the great maritime powers. The Government cannot leave the new port unprotected against attacks from the sea.—Englishman.

PLANTERS AND NAGAS.—At the Calcutta Criminal Sessions a Mr. H. J. Patten has just been acquitted on a charge of "causing mischief by fire." Mr. Patten is a Cachar tea-planter. He was charged by six savage Nagas with having, on 15th December last, burned down five houses, to induce their occupants to work in his garden. The witnesses could not be understood except by a Naga, turned Mahomedan, who acted as interpreter. The form of oath consisted in the witnesses putting ashes in their mouths, biting at a horn and then at a "dhao" or cleaver. More than one deposed to the presence of a second European and two Chuprassees on the occasion, but they were not to be found. The evidence was so unsatisfactory that the prisoner was discharged. Mr. Bell, in defending the accused, said he had often the unpleasant duty of defending prisoners sent down to the Court from tea and indigo plantations. At first sight the case appears a very probable one, and in which the prisoners have very little chance of escape, but when the evidence on behalf of the prosecution comes to be tested by cross-examination, the prosecution in nine cases out of ten entirely breaks down.

GIRLS' SCHOOL AT DHURMSALA.—A good school for girls of European parentage is to be opened at the Punjab hill-station of Dhurmsala on the 1st of May, 1866, under the rules of the Calcutta Diocesan Board of Education. Already the sum of Rs. 8,511 has been raised for the object, and this will be doubled by the State.

MINISTERS' PENSIONS.—The Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, on the application of the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, strongly supported by his Excellency the Viceroy, has sanctioned the sum of £2,000 towards the fund formed for the pension of ministers belonging to the Additional Clergy Society.

LIONS NEAR GWALIOR.—A very fine lion was bagged within sight of the fort of Gwalior, and not beyond fifteen miles from the station of Morar, on Friday, the 27th Jan., by a party of sportsmen. There were three lions seen. The one killed was a fine male, measuring eight feet five and a half inches from nose to tail, and with a noble head, the cheeks and breast covered with hair three or four inches long. He received a shot as he was in the act of charging at the beaters, one of whom he seized by the arm, but fortunately the wound was slight. The animal was sent into the station of Morar, where he was inspected by most of the garrison, and caused no little sensation, as the proximity of such noble game was unknown there. In a letter to hand this morning the same writer says:—"I wrote yesterday, mentioning a party of shikaries having killed a fine lion on the 27th, and having seen two others, one of which was wounded. The one then wounded has just been brought in dead; of course his skin is spoilt from being out for four days, but he appears even larger than the one brought in at first. I fancy killing two lions within fifteen miles of Gwalior is an extraordinary circumstance, and I should like you to mention that such had been done."—Delhi Gazette.

PAPER CURRENCY.—Official papers in the Calcutta Gazette estimate the circulation of the currency at a million sterling in Bengal proper. This is not a seventh of the whole circulation in India. The balance of remittance is from the Mofussil to Calcutta. Last year the paper currency enabled Government to receive in Calcutta a remittance of thirty-four lakhs in notes, which otherwise must have been brought down in specie or cleared from the local treasuries by means of bills. Notes of the higher denominations are used chiefly for remittance. In districts like Shahabad the cultivation of opium causes a demand for silver and the circulation is slight, but in the eastern districts of Bengal where silver abounds the demand for notes is large. The Government of India has directed that notes may be used for remittance, provided officers in charge of treasuries confine themselves to receiving notes in payment of revenue and to paying them in exchange for silver or in liquidation of claims upon Government.

TAXATION IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The result of a special enquiry shows that the cost of their police is borne by all the municipalities in the Central Provinces, to the number of 89 towns and 3 cantonments. Of the local taxes town duties are the least unpopular and most common, but goods in transit are exempted. When fairs are held even town duties are not levied. Last year the value of articles exposed for sale at fairs amounted to Rs. 58,85,570, the value of articles sold to Rs. 36,96,880. The whole municipal income of the provinces amounted to Rs. 3,70,336 last year, and will be Rs. 4,40,000 this year. In Nagpore and Sumbulpore there is a trades and professions tax called "Pandree." It has existed from ancient times, is not complained of, and yields Rs. 2,25,000 a-year to the imperial treasury. In Seonee market dues are paid by traders, and it is proposed to extend this tax to other places. Similar enquiries have been made in Bengal and other provinces, with a view to substituting for the income-tax the cost of the police, but no other reports have been published as yet.

MAKING IT UP.—The ball given by the United Service Club in Calcutta was a graceful tribute to the noble and kindly qualities of their departing chief; and his Excellency's cordial acceptance of the invitation did him honour; it is an odd, as well as pleasant incident, however, to those who remember the state of feeling which prevailed between the high conflicting parties in the autumn of 1862. The Priestley difference is now evidently forgiven, and therefore at last may be forgotten.—Pioneer.

H.M.'s 71st.—Subjoined is the farewell order of Sir Hugh Rose to the gallant 71st:—"By the Commander-in-Chief.—Headquarters, Calcutta, Jan. 27, 1865.—The services of the 71st Highland Light Infantry in India entitle them, on their departure for England, to honourable mention in general orders. A wing of the regiment on their arrival in India in 1858 joined the Central India Field Force, and his Excellency, therefore, is enabled to bear testimony to the good services which they performed, and the excellent spirit which they displayed during that campaign. The regiment more recently distinguished itself under their commanding officer, Colonel Hope, C.B., in the late operations on the frontier. Sir Hugh Rose cannot, in justice to military merit, speak of the 71st in a general order without reverting to an earlier period, when in two great campaigns in Europe they won a reputation which has earned them an honoured page in history. Sir Hugh Rose's best wishes attend this distinguished regiment on their leaving his command for home. By order of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.—E. HAYTHORNE, Colonel, Adjutant-general."

EARTHQUAKE AT PESHAWUR.—At twenty minutes past eight o'clock on Sunday evening, the 22nd Jan., an earthquake of unusual violence took place. It consisted of three distinct shocks. The first and second were rather gentle, being sufficient only to shake the doors and windows, and cause the houses slightly to tremble. The third, however, was very violent, and though we have not heard of the actual falling of any buildings, it caused a general alarm. Many people ran out of their houses in order to escape being buried in the ruins. Hindoos were calling upon Ram to save them, whilst the Mussulmans were crying to Mahomed for help. The total duration of the earthquake was about seventy seconds.

ASSAM AND CACHAR.—It is stated that the crop of tea from Assam and Cachar this year will be 3,000,000 lbs. In a statement of waste land in Bengal available for Europeans 4 districts alone of Assam are returned as containing 6,000,000 acres. Two districts of Arracan contain 2,500,000 acres; Chota Nagpore "an immense tract;" Sylhet 200,000 acres of available land, and some thousands of miles of mountain and plain covered with forest. Chittagong is reported as containing space enough to accommodate any number of Europeans. Tea-cultivation has now been fairly naturalised in Chittagong, and promises to be almost as successful there as in Assam.

CALCUTTA BOTANICAL GARDENS.—In the annual report of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, it is stated that the society's gardens were injured by the cyclone to such an extent that it has been necessary almost entirely to suspend the distribution of plants. The Government of Bengal has sanctioned an annual subscription, including contingencies of Rs. 2,300 for the seed department. The duties of the establishment will be to collect seed, and preserve them for distribution and propagation in the garden. A project has been formed of making a public garden on the Calcutta side of the river, in the Kidderpore Military Orphan Asylum's grounds.

VICAR APOSTOLIC OF WESTERN BENGAL.—The Hurkaru mentions the appointment of the Right Rev. Augustin Van Heule, D.D., "Bishop of Amida in Mesopotamia," as Vicar Apostolic of Western Bengal. The Pope has given great offence to Portugal by continuing to appoint priests to India direct, notwithstanding the recent Concordat which vests the supervision of the papal church in India in the Archbishop of Goa.

FOREST CONSERVANCY.—It is reported that the Commissioner of Meerut, Mr. Fleetwood Williams, is shortly to be appointed Conservator of Forests, a duty for which he is eminently qualified by long experience and untiring zeal.

MAHOMEDAN PROGRESS.—At the last meeting of the Mahomedan Literary Society in Calcutta, Moulvie Obydoollah read an account in Persian of the origin and formation of the Romna Empire, and Moulvie Abdoor Rowoof a continuation of his Topographical Account of the City of London. Nawab Mehdee Kooly Khan stated that the latter paper contained "a faithful description of the greatest city in the world, which corresponded exactly with what he had himself seen." Both in Persian and English there are several works written by Mussulman gentlemen, describing their impressions derived from travel in Europe.

DIVISIONAL COMMANDS.—It is settled that Major-general Becher, C.B., succeeds Major-general Lord George Paget, on the departure of this officer for England, in the command of the Sirhind division, and will himself be succeeded in the command of the Oudh division by Brigadier Italy, C.B., from the Punjab, provided that no general officer is sent out from England. It will be remembered that Brigadier Haly was first elected by the Commander-in-Chief for the Oudh command, and that his claims were set aside in favour of those of General Becher by the Governor-general.

CURIOSITIES OF AMALGAMATION.—The Lahore Chronicle notices one of the most curious of the results of the amalgamation of the armies. The 18th Bengal Native Infantry is commanded by Winson, a Lieutenant in the cadre of the 45th N.I., while his subordinate officers are Larkins, Regimental Major in the cadre of the 49th; Miles, Major in the Staff Corps, and Allen, Regimental Captain in the late 42nd; Lieutenant Winson, the Commandant, entered the army in 1850; Major Larkins, the second in command, in 1840, and Major Miles, Wing Officer, in 1843.

GOVERNMENT TEA PLANTATIONS.—The tea-plantations in the Kangra and Holta valleys are to receive a further trial. Our readers will remember that the Government expressed an intention of disposing of its gardens. We now learn that this intention has been abandoned for the present, and the sale has been postponed to March 1866, when the whole of the tea plantations belonging to the State in the Punjab and the N. W. P. will come to the hammer.

A CORRECTION.—The Englishman of the 3rd Feb. spoke of Major E. C. Impey, A. D. C. to the Viceroy, as the successor to Lieutenant-Colonel R. Lawrence, at Simla, forgetting, apparently, that the appointment is one in the gift of the Punjab Government, and that Captain Impey has never belonged to the Punjab Commission. Mr. J. W. MacNabb, C. S., officiating deputy commissioner of Rawul Pindee, will officiate for Colonel Lawrence during his absence in Nepal.—Hurkaru.

OFFICIAL OUTFIT.—The Government of India has sanctioned the disbursement of about Rs. 50,000 for the purchase of household furniture, dinner service, state carriages and horses for the use of the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab. All the splendid dinner service belonging to Sir Robert Montgomery, the late Lieutenant-governor, have been purchased by the Punjab Government at a cost of about Rs. 17,000, to be paid for from the above-mentioned authorised amount.

NATIVE LINES AT MEERUT.—The Native lines in the Cantonment of Meerut will shortly be abandoned. Government is, very properly, averse to Native troops being located in proximity to the line of railway. That part of the cantonment now occupied by the Native forces will be made over to the civil authorities; the Native regiments will in future occupy a new site, probably to the right-front of the European lines.

SALE OF THE "BENTINCK."—The wreck of the quondam P. & O. and more recently Government Hospital ship Bentinck has been sold for Rs. 32,000 to native speculators, who hope to make a fortune out of her copper.

MR. ANDERSON'S PARSEE MARRIAGE BILL.—Mr. Anderson has proposed in Council "A Bill to define and amend the law relating to marriage and divorce among the Parsees," consisting of thirty clauses. At the foot of these a "statement of objects and reasons" is given, which is as follows:—"The object of the present measure is to enforce among the Parsee community the duties and obligations arising out of the marriage union. By a decision of her Majesty's Privy Council in 1856, it was ruled that the Supreme Court of Bombay, on its ecclesiastical side, had no jurisdiction to entertain suits instituted by a Parsee wife for restitution of conjugal rights or for maintenance. It has been represented by a large number of Parsees, who, from character and social position, are regarded as leaders by their co-religionists, that bigamy has been introduced into their community, because, since the decision of the Privy Council, there has been no tribunal to vindicate the obligations of marriage, and none with authority to dissolve marriages on adequate cause being shown. Urgent petitions have therefore been addressed to the Government of India and to H.M.'s Secretary of State for India, praying that, with respect to this most important relation of life, the Parsees may receive the sanction and protection of a legislative enactment. The present measure renders bigamy by Parsees an offence, and subjects it to the penalties prescribed in the Penal Code. On the other hand, it declares the grounds on which divorces may be granted. It gives jurisdiction for the vindication of obligations and duties arising out of marriages, and for the dissolution of marriages, to the ancient institution of the Parsee Panchayat. Appeal from the decision of the Panchayats is allowed within a stated time to the High Courts of the respective Presidencies. The measure has in substance been prepared by representatives of the Parsee community."

THE BEHAR MOUNTED RIFLES have had a shooting match at Mozufferpore, at which Mr. M. Lloyd won the silver cup offered by Mr. Beadon. On the 21st inst. the Lieutenant-Governor reviewed the volunteers, eulogising their patriotic spirit and usefulness. When we remember 1857 and the advisers who surrounded Lord Canning then, it is pleasant to read such statements as these:—"The existence of such a body as the Behar Mounted Rifles is a most valuable and complete security for the peace of this district; if the necessities of the State were to require that the regiment of irregular cavalry should be withdrawn from Segowlee, you could hold the frontier against any hostile attack until regular troops were sent to your support." "When I see judges and magistrates serving in the ranks with gentlemen engaged in Indigo planting and other private occupations, under officers chosen by the corps not for their official position, but for their fitness for command, I feel a conviction that affairs are conducted in accordance with the wishes of the public, and that there is very little room for apprehending mis-government or wrong." His Honour distributed the prizes to the successful competitors at the exhibition, and recommended the establishment of a Behar Agricultural Society. The exhibition has been self-supporting, and the Government grant is likely to be returned.

TIME-EXPIRED SOLDIERS.—The number of invalids going home from all the British regiments in the Bengal Presidency this year is eight hundred, about the usual average; and making up, with the time-expired soldiers also bound to England, a total diminution of only two thousand five hundred men from the British force stationed in Bengal. Of course this loss has been made good by recruits from England.—Englishman.

MAJOR REID, Superintendent of Chumba, has been appointed a deputy-commissioner, first class, at Darjeeling. Captain Forbes will, we believe, succeed Major Reid at Chumba.

CALCUTTA IMPROVEMENTS.—The committee appointed to report on providing facilities for the trade of Calcutta has held two sittings, and wisely resolved to make its proceedings public. Besides the president, Mr. G. N. Taylor, the members are Messrs. D. Cowie, Bullen, Ross, and Schalch, Colonels Stretchey and Beadle, and Captain Reddie. The general conclusion at which the committee have arrived will be satisfactory to the public, if a road is added to the proposed railway bridge, as in the case of the new Blackfriars and Charing-cross bridges over the Thames:—

I. That a road-bridge across the Hooghly is not necessary for the ordinary traffic between Calcutta and Howrah.

II. That a bridge over the Hooghly is necessary, in connection with the railway traffic, and that, irrespective of the difficulties and objections attending the construction of a road-bridge in a convenient locality, it is better to bring the railway into Calcutta to the traffic, by constructing a railway-bridge, than to take the traffic to the railway by constructing a road-bridge.

III. That a railway-bridge over the Hooghly should not be constructed below Cossipoor, but that the actual site, at or above Cossipoor, must be determined after the consideration of various points of detail, such as the breadth and character of the river and its bed, the cost of the approaches, the limit of the dangerous effects of the late cyclone.

IV. That it seems probable that under any arrangement the best point for the junction of the East Indian and Eastern Bengal Railways would be at or near the termini of the Eastern Bengal and Calcutta and South-Eastern lines at Sealdah; but that there will then be urgent necessity for the construction of a short line, to bring the passenger traffic of the three lines from Sealdah to a point in the heart of the town, near Tank-square.

FATAL RAILWAY ACCIDENT AT ALLAHABAD.

—The Pioneer of the 3rd February records a railway accident which took place at Allahabad on the 1st, a wood train having run into the regular afternoon mail. Little injury was caused to the wood train, but the mail train suffered severely. Next to the tender was a carriage containing the clothing and accoutrements of a detachment of the 21st Native Infantry; after this came the travelling post-office, and then an ammunition waggon built of iron. The last was of considerable weight, and the result of the concussion was to throw it upon the post-office van, with such force that the latter was literally reduced to shivers. Not a vestige of its former shape remained. One Baboo, who was engaged in sorting the letters, was killed on the spot, and nine or ten persons have been more or less injured, of whom only one is a European, a stoker, whose arm has been broken. Fortunately the scene of the accident was near the rifle butts, and as there is a surgeon always in attendance, help was at once afforded to the sufferers. Our contemporary speaks in high terms of the conduct of those men of the 107th Regiment who came to the rescue. An enquiry will be held into the matter. The loss to the company is said to be about Rs. 50,000.

THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL'S OFFICE at the Presidency is to be done away with, as unnecessary and expensive. The work of the office, which is little more than one of a transmissive nature, will, in future, be carried on in the Presidency Office of the Advocate General of the army. Copies of all Court-martial proceedings carried on throughout this Presidency are sent home to England, and their transmission was the principal work of the office now about to be abolished, for the charge of which the officer holding the appointment of Deputy Judge Advocate of the Presidency division received a monthly allowance of Rs. 150, which will now, of course, cease to be drawn.

SMALL CAUSE COURTS.—Mr. Ephraim Da Costa, Officiating Fourth Judge of the Presidency Court of Small Causes, and Mr. J. S. Bell, officiating Judge of the Suburban and Howrah Small Cause Court, have been confirmed in their acting appointments.

NEW SANITARIA.—The Government Gazette of the 25th January contains an account of the proposed new Stations and Sanitaria of Yeodo and Shillong, and a set of rules under which land will be granted there to private persons, for building and other purposes. These stations are situated in the Cossyah Hills, at a distance of about twenty-eight and thirty-two miles, respectively, from Cherra Poonjee. The country is characterised by vast expanses of undulating plain, and accessible rounded hills; and the mountain tops for miles around form an extensive plateau, interspersed with shallow valleys and easy elevations, the whole being covered with a luxuriant coarse grass, capable of much improvement. The subsoil is of red and black stiff clay, resting upon sandstone strata of different textures. Millet, maize, rice, and other edible grains and potatoes constitute the staple crops of the villagers. The neighbourhood of the proposed station is free from dense forest, and there is abundance of pure water. No accurate meteorological register for the year has been made, but the highest temperature noted in 1864 in the shade was 81 degs. Fahr. at Yeodo, which is a thousand feet lower than Shillong. The climate is described as genial, and particularly free from fogs; and the soil is rich, and capable of producing excellent vegetables. Near Shillong slate strata are found well adapted for roofing. It has been decided to make Yeodo the civil, and Shillong the military station, and the quantity of land taken up by the Government at the latter place is extensive.

DISTRICT SUBDIVISIONS IN BENGAL.—It is reported that the Viceroy disapproves of the number of subdivisions of districts in Bengal, and proposes to reduce them as expensive to the State, and tending to promote litigation. It will be borne in mind that, before the creation of these subdivisions, landholders had their cutcherries, and decided both civil and criminal cases, and the excuse for their exercising self-constituted judicial powers was the distance of the regular courts, their difficulty of access, and the expense to which suitors were put. The creation of subdivisions did away with these excuses. Again, both in civil and criminal courts, where there were no subdivisions, suitors and prosecutors were subjected to much personal inconvenience, owing to the distance of the courts from their homes. Witnesses were unwilling to appear and give evidence for the same reason, and thus the rich and influential class had an advantage over the poor, and oppression and injustice were often perpetrated with impunity. We may also add, that the decrease of affrays and riots all over Bengal is to be attributed mainly to the creation of subdivisions. To abolish these subdivisions will be to throw Bengal back into anarchy and confusion. We trust, therefore, there is no truth in the report that Sir John Lawrence inclines to the abolition of sub-divisions of districts. So long as there are disputes and conflicting interests, so long it is the duty of the Government to have a sufficient number of Courts in the country easy of access both to rich and poor. On the same grounds we object to the decrease of assistant superintendents of police in the several subdivisions. This decrease will prove as mischievous as the proposed abolition of subdivisional officers. If we are to have a saving of money let a saving be made, but not at the expense of efficiency.—Englishman.

THE DELHI BANK has declared a dividend on the operations of the last six months of last year at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum on the paid up capital of 20 lakhs. The head-office of the bank is to be removed to London, and branches are to be opened at Bombay and Jubbulpore.

MR. W. A. BYRNE, attached to the office of the Accountant-general, Bengal, has received an appointment at Ghazepore on 500 rupees per month.

AGRICULTURAL EXHIBITION AT AGRA.—The Delhi Gazette has a report of the opening of the Divisional Agricultural Show at Agra by Mr. Batten, the Commissioner, on the 1st of February. The company, consisting of the principal civil and military portion of the community, a large number of ladies, and several native gentlemen, gathered round the flag staff at about nine o'clock, whither they were preceded by the band of H.M.'s 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers. Mr. Batten, in his opening address, alluded to the fact that the exhibition was a strictly local one, and that the occurrence of other district shows had somewhat affected the number of articles exhibited. He hoped, however, that hereafter the local exhibitions would come up to the divisional shows. He reminded his audience that, as in Bengal, Mr. Beadon, the Lieutenant-governor, had first introduced agricultural shows, so they were indebted to Mr. Fleetwood Williams, the Commissioner of Meerut, Dr. Murray Thomson, and Major Medley for their initiation in the North-West Provinces by the exhibition at Roorkee. The exhibition was purely an agricultural one, the only abnormal article present being a hyena, whereas the district shows had been of a most miscellaneous character. Mr. Batten then dwelt, with much eloquence, upon the advantages of agricultural shows, and the particular necessity that existed for them in India, observing that the natives of the country had great capacity for "art," and that what they wanted was "science," and a desire for improvement. One great benefit of such shows was, that they brought natives and Europeans together; another was exemplified in the fact of their secretary, Captain Harward, forsaking his cannon balls and magazines, to discriminate curiously in plough-shares, and be nicely critical on ghee. Sudder Judges, too, were going in for butter. He concluded by expressing his confidence in the impartiality of the judges of prizes in the several departments. The secretary to the Victoria College addressed the native gentry in Hindoostanee, to similar purpose. The commissioner then declared the show opened; the Union Jack was hoisted, the band played the National Anthem, and a Royal salute thundered forth from the battery.

NATIVE CHIEFS ON THEIR TRAVELS.—When native visitors of rank pay a flying visit to British territories, under present circumstances, they occasion no slight degree of flutter and bother to the officials of the district they deign to honour. Commissioners issue nervous orders to the officers in charge of the artillery, and hold themselves in readiness for the due performance of State visits. This occasions a great deal of unnecessary trouble to all concerned. The native chief is made to feel his rank, an inconvenience of considerable magnitude, and the officers are compelled to leave their duties on occasions which are really trivial. To remedy this matter it has been ruled that when native princes visit British territories for their own pleasure, or on private affairs, all ceremonies shall be waived, but that when they come on business they are to receive all the respect due to their rank and position.

MARRIAGE IN HIGH LIFE.—The Oorodo Guide mentions that the second son of the Nawab Nazim of Bengal is to "form an alliance"—to be married, we presume—with the daughter of a grandson of Tipoo Sultan. The mumquee, or betrothal ceremony, has been completed, and the marriage will take place in the ensuing Ramzan, before the youth goes to England.

H.M.'s 71st L.I.—The head-quarters and right wing of H.M.'s 71st Highland Light Infantry left Calcutta on the 4th February, on board the screw steamer Mauritius, for England. The other wing, going home in the Albert Victor, will get away about the middle of the month.

ATTACK ON THE BALA STOCKADE.—Since our last advices from the Frontier we have received the particulars of the late attack of the Bhooteahs on the stockade at Bala. This, our readers will remember, is one of the posts which was taken up in December last by the left centre column. It is situated about 1,000 feet above the Toorsa, and is particularly strong and difficult of approach from the plain, as the Toorsa, a very rapid and unfordable stream, cuts off all communication with them for the greater part of the year, and the road leading up the hill is remarkably steep and rough. But it would seem, in taking up our position there, we lose these advantages, for the unfordable Toorsa is now in our rear, and the stockade is commanded by the higher part of the ridge. On the morning of January 27, just before day broke, the sentries round the stockade were suddenly attacked and driven in, the Bhooteahs following close on their heels, and endeavouring to enter the position with them before the gate could be shut. Luckily, however, the garrison sprang to their feet, and succeeded in shutting it. The Bhooteahs, frustrated in this bold attempt, then tried in a very plucky and determined manner to cut it down with their knives, but being deterred from this by the heavy fire which was directed on them, they retired a short distance, and kept up a continuous flight of arrows on the stockade; but at last, finding the garrison firm and day fast approaching, they retired, after having persisted in their attack for an hour and a half. Our loss is one man killed and five wounded, and the side of the stockade on which the attack was made is represented as being stuck over with arrows to such an extent as to give it the appearance of a hedgehog's back. Further particulars of this will be given as received. On the 29th January a reconnaissance of sixty men was sent to ascertain the truth of a report that the Bhooteahs were stockading themselves on the heights at hand, and they had not proceeded far before they found it to be quite true, and though they carried the first barricade they were brought up by a second and stronger one, and obliged to look to their own safety. Of course when this occurred the Bhooteahs came round in swarms, howling out their peculiar jackal cry, and ere the party could reach the protection of the stockade, Morrison, of the Ghoorkhas, and Bushby, of the 11th, were wounded; one man was killed and six wounded. It is said that Colonel Watson proposes going out with a party to destroy these stockades shortly.—Hurkaru.

PAPER CURRENCY.—Official papers in the Calcutta Gazette estimate the circulation of the currency at a million sterling in Bengal proper. This is not a seventh of the whole circulation in India. The balance of remittance is from the Mofassil to Calcutta. Last year the paper currency enabled Government to receive in Calcutta a remittance of thirty-four lakhs in notes, which otherwise must have been brought down in specie or cleared from the local treasuries by means of bills. Notes of the higher denominations are used chiefly for remittance. In districts like Shahabad the cultivation of opium causes a demand for silver, and the circulation is slight, but in the eastern districts of Bengal, where silver abounds, the demand for notes is large. The Government of India has directed that notes may be used for remittance, provided officers in charge of treasuries confine themselves to receiving notes in payment of revenue, and to paying them in exchange for silver, or in liquidation of claims upon Government. What a pity it is that Sir C. Wood has burdened Government with the management of currency details, which only the banks can properly attend to.

THE REV. J. COLE, Principal of the Lawrence Military Asylum at Sanawar, has been vested with magisterial powers by the Government of the Punjab.

LOSS OF MCCOLLUM'S STUD.—The friends of Mr. Thomas McCollum, of the American Circus, will regret to learn he has lost nearly all his beautiful stud of horses, valued at Rs. 20,000. He first shipped them on board the barque Prata, from Samarang, on the 28th September last, which vessel, after trying for seven weeks to get to Hong Kong, had to put back into Singapore in a leaky condition. Here they were transhipped into the P. and O. Company's steamer Carnatic, which, after being out five days, experienced a cyclone, during which all his horses but three, besides a very handsome white bull, were washed overboard. Among these were the famous "Alma," and one of the famous black ponies which Victor Emanuel gave to Ella. Mr. McCollum landed in Hong Kong with only one horse and two ponies.

JOHN LAWRENCE HALL.—A subscription is on foot in the Punjab for getting out a portrait of the Viceroy, to be hung up in the building which goes by his Excellency's name in the capital of the province. Subscriptions are limited to ten rupees per head. After this project shall have been carried out it is proposed that likenesses of Punjab celebrities who have died in harness, or left the province, should be also hung in the same building, those of elevated rank being painted of life size, and the others of what is technically termed kitcat dimensions, or half the figure. The men whose names naturally occur to the public are Sir Henry Lawrence, Sir Robert Montgomery, Nicholson, Broadfoot, Mackeson, Vans Agnew and Anderson, on the same canvas; Sir H. Edwards; and then there are Barnes, Hugh James, and many others who did good service to the State.

RAIN IN THE PUNJAB.—We (Hurkaru) are glad to learn from Umritsur that the country around had been blessed with rain, calculated at between one and a-half to two inches. The result, as the news-writer says, will be most beneficial, though the fall is so much later than usual at this time of the year. So impressed were the dealers in grain with the uncertainty of an approaching famine-like scarcity, that they entered into large contracts for grain at Rs. 1-7 per maund for delivery in April, by which purchasers will lose largely. We are also informed that there has been much rain lately at Lahore, and in the whole country between Delhi and Rawul Pindee.

THE MAHARAJAH OF GWALIOR held a Durbar on the 22nd January. After it was over, his Highness sent word to his officers, civil and military, to come to him again at night. They waited on him, when they were directed to approach and be sworn. They had then and there the oath administered to them, the Hindoos on the Toolsee and Ganges water, the Mahomedans on the Koran. They were allowed to proceed home near midnight. The cause of this strange proceeding has not transpired.

H.M.'S 10TH REGT.—The B. and B. S.S. Co.'s Steamer Koona, Capt. Trott, left Calcutta for Madras direct on the 4th February, with a detachment of H.M.'s 10th Europeans, Major C. Barlow, commanding, Capt. R. Davies, Capt. C. R. Johnson, Lieut. C. W. Newbolt, Lieut. C. W. Carter, Lieut. G. P. Townshead, Ensign J. K. Kennedy, Ensign E. G. Green, 257 N.C. officers and men, 26 women, and 46 children; Assist. Surg. R. Dunlop in medical charge. Passengers for Bombay, F. F. Wills, Esq., and 10 natives for Madras.

EXPIRATION OF INDIAN MUTINY ACT.—It is formally announced in general orders that the Act commonly called "the Indian Mutiny Act" has ceased to be in force. The Imperial Mutiny Act, as passed on the 18th. of March, 1864, is now in force in India as well as elsewhere. This cannot, however, affect the Indian articles of war for the native army.

MR. E. C. BAYLEY, having returned to the presidency, has resumed charge of the Home Department from Mr. Cust.

CASHMERE.—The opening up of Cashmere appears to be attended with a series of contretemps which irritate the Government, and certainly do not go towards disposing the Maharajah to cultivate a more extended acquaintance with his restless neighbours to the south. The last misadventure reported was that of Lieut. Traill. It would appear that this officer, whilst on a tour in Cashmere, was visited by some of the light-fingered gentry, so numerous on the borders, and robbed of some of his personal effects. The loss roused the lieutenant's ire, and he determined that if the local authorities could afford no security to travellers they should be made to feel that a British officer was a person not to be trifled with, and one who would not be robbed with impunity. He, therefore, recovered the value of the stolen property from the Thannadar of the district in which the theft occurred. The Government, however, have signally failed to appreciate the rough-and-ready way of doing justice to himself shown by Lieut. Traill, no doubt because the matter occurred in foreign territory, and concerned the officers of a foreign prince. Orders have been issued by which the lieutenant has been told the Commander-in-Chief views his conduct with displeasure and considers it "unbecoming." He has also been made to refund the fine he imposed, and finally has been prohibited from again entering Cashmere. The Government are quite right in seeing that officers and visitors to the territories of our neighbours do not take the law into their own hands and supersede the native authorities, but we think the native chiefs should be made to understand that they have duties to perform towards their guests, one of the chief of which is to secure them as far as possible from the thievish propensities of nearly all the clans along the Punjab frontier. Lieut. Traill has been very properly rebuked, but if Maharajah Rumbheer Singh could be persuaded that the Thannadar had neglected his duty, the effect would probably go far to prevent such unpleasantness for the future.—Bengal Hurkaru.

BHOOTAN.—Rumours from Bhootan are very contradictory, and show how badly the intelligence department must be managed. Up to the present time, beyond the oft repeated rumour of an attack upon Cheeboo Lama, nothing has been told the public of the actual force or designs of the enemy. The last report we published would indicate, if anything, that the Bhootahs were lurking in force near our posts, and were about to initiate the guerilla warfare, the danger of which we have persistently pointed out. This acquired some confirmation from the rumour of the boast made by one of the chiefs that he could retake Dewangiri whenever he chose. We now hear there are dissensions between Tongsou Penlow and the Durbar, which threaten his authority. He, with his henchman Aujod Ferung, Jungpeen, are accused of having caused the war by their behaviour to the British envoys. Tongsou Penlow is not a man to hesitate when pushed to an extremity. The Durbar reproached him, the people who could not do this treated him with coolness. In all Eastern States popularity is power, and the man who can sway the bazaar need care but little for the frowns of the Deeree. Tongsou might have laughed at the Deb Rajah, and have treated the Dhurm Rajah as he treated Mr. Eden, but the loss of popularity was a serious matter. He determined to regain this at all hazards, and repairing for his own district, endeavoured to get the people to move against the British in defiance of his own stated policy of waiting for the rains to initiate a war, which should wear us out by a series of surprises and by a continual worrying and harassing of our outposts.—Hurkaru.

TROPHIES.—Arrangements are to be made for the erection of monuments to mark the battlefields of Moodkee, Sobraon, Ferozeshah, Ramnugger, Chillianwalla, and Goojerat.

THE BHEELS AND MEENAS.—In Rajpootana the Bheels and Meenas are again troublesome. They work on a beautifully arranged scheme, profitable to all concerned, except the unfortunate merchant who may happen to fall into their clutches. Rajpootana is broken up into perhaps more petty states than Germany. The consequent proximity of foreign frontiers renders it the very beam ideal of what a country should be in the eyes of men who consider that to take another man's goods, and even his life, is more honourable than to stay at home and till the hereditary patch of ground. The Bheel starts with an advantage and a temptation by means of these boundaries. He is aided by the sharper wit and keener roguery of the officials of the Native States. The Kardars wink at their deeds, or rather close their eyes, as those of the "gaugers" used to be closed at home. It is a hard thing for a man to see through a quantity of gold stuff, precious stones, or even coins, at least native officials in Rajpootana find it so. But the Bheel has another assistant. The Bunniah, having an eye to legitimate profits, which in India begin amongst the Mahajans at the small interest of 75 per cent. per annum, acts as banker, receiver, and seller. He makes the robbers advances, and he sells their goods for them. He gets interest on his outlay, commission on his sales, and he has the undisputed privilege of cooking his accounts entirely after his own conscience. It cannot be wondered at that such a system is hard to break down. The native chiefs, who are in the hands of their immediate followers, are not earnest in the matter. They issue orders which are received as a matter of course, but which blind no one, although it would seem as if they were only given to blind the British authorities. Our political officers are overworked, and have one long unvarying tale of outrages and robberies to report. The matter has attracted the attention of Government, and it is to be hoped the native chiefs will be invited to act in concert with British officers on some definite and well marked plan. Then, and not till then, will the name of Bheel cease to be considered in Upper India as a synonym for cut-throats and bauditti.—Hurkaru.

DISTURBANCES AT LOHAROO.—We imagine there are but few of our readers who know anything of Loharoo or its chief. It is a Mahomedan dependency, which attained some notoriety in 1836, from its chief having suffered death by hanging, as a punishment for being mixed up with the murder of William Fraser, political agent at Delhi. It is a very insignificant territory, but this could not save it from political convulsions. It appears the Nawab, like most Mussulmans of rank, left everything to the care of his dewan, and the dewan, as a matter of course, took every advantage of the confidence reposed in him. His exactions at last had the effect of exasperating the peasantry beyond endurance, and the whole State machinery, such as it was, came to a sudden stop, by their rising in arms against the obnoxious dewan. The Nawab's troops were called out, and the riot might have assumed serious proportions, but, fortunately, the jaghir is within easy distance of Delhi, and its suppression was both easy and sudden. The Punjab authorities interfered, and expelled the dewan, and the tiny revolution or insurrection was at an end.—Bengal Hurkaru.

CAPTAIN J. MORLAND, of the late 1st Bengal Fusiliers, has been nominated to the appointment of garrison quartermaster in Fort William, in succession to Major W. Stubbs, appointed second in command of the 4th Regt. N.I., at Jhansi.

MR. T. C. TROTTER, C.S., opium agent at Patna, is likely to retire from the service by the end of the current official year. He will probably be succeeded in his present post by Mr. W. Ainslie, Civil and Sessions Judge of the same district.

SMALL-POX IN CALCUTTA.—Dr. Charles and his vaccinators have a very hard task to perform. The lower orders of natives seem to evince considerable repugnance to submit to the operation. The Government, however, is determined to look this matter of the small-pox fairly in the face, and has hitherto deserved well of the public for the measures adopted. Constables have, we learn, been appointed to attend the vaccinators, and to see that no unnecessary delay is suffered to arise, and as the number of small-pox patients has increased, as was only to be expected, when it became generally known that the people could resort to hospitals, the commissioner of police has been authorised to hire another house for the season for the accommodation of the patients.

THE MUNIPOORIES, who have so distinguished themselves at hockey, appear to have awakened considerable interest in the bosoms of their neighbours of Sylhet. We hear that the Local Committee of Public Instruction at Sylhet have started a scheme of considerable interest. They have determined on establishing a school for the instruction in English of the Munipoories who reside at that station.

PUNJAB DEPUTY-COMMISSIONERS.—A new grade of First-class Deputy-commissioners on Rs. 1,750 per mensem having been sanctioned for the Punjab, the following officers have received promotion to the new rank:—Majors O. Mc L. Farrington, F. R. Pollock, and A. L. Busk.

DELHI MUNICIPALITY.—The authorities at Delhi have introduced Kerosene lamps and oil into the Chandney Chowk. They are spoken of as far superior to the common oil lamps hitherto in use, and very little inferior to gas light.

MR. T. H. COWIE, Advocate-general, has, in consequence of ill-health, declined the offer made him by the Government to officiate temporarily for Mr. Maine, in the Legislative Council.

THE LORD BISHOP has returned to Calcutta, and will preside at the Oxford and Cambridge dinner in the Town Hall on 3rd February.

MR. TUCKER has been appointed judge of Bancoorah, in the place of Mr. Fletcher.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR WILLIAM DENISON is becoming a prolific pamphleteer. He has just issued from the press a brochure, entitled, "An Attempt to Approximate the Antiquity of Man by Induction from Well Established Facts." His Excellency, in his preface, deals somewhat roughly with Bishop Colenso, but this is no place to criticise the work.

THE MASULIPATAM RELIEF FUND has reached the large sum of Rs. 1,64,133-11-1. We (Athenæum) are sorry to learn from medical authority that sickness, although not yet of a severe type, is beginning to prevail in that ill-fated district, and the zillah surgeon of Masulipatam expects that various diseases will prevail extensively for many months to come, when the hot season acts on the soil lately flooded by the sea. In anticipation of a severe outbreak of epidemic disease, Government have wisely ordered a considerable addition to the medical staff at that place. The salt water has completely destroyed vegetation around Masulipatam, and it is probable that the soil will not be fit for agricultural purposes for several years to come. The town is to be retained as a civil station, and most likely as a military one also, but the latter point has not yet been finally determined.

THE "FRIEND" ON SIR W. DENISON.—The Government of Madras, we trust not in default of having more important duties, has taken to writing critical minutes on such subjects as "Lieutenant Curran's Rope Pump;" and "Solid Wheeled Carts." Lieutenant Curran has been presented with Rs. 250 for devising "this simple pump" of wood and rope, and Government has ordered twenty to be made, so as to be worked with treddles or by bullocks. From last New Year's Day no solid wheeled cart is to be allowed on any metalled road in the Madras Presidency. There is administration in detail! The Collector of Bellary thought of the inconvenience to the ryot, and made the sensible and fair suggestion that such carts should pay a heavy wheel tax. But Sir W. Denison will have none of them. Sir William has thought it necessary to reprint some papers which he wrote in New South Wales on the extension of the railway system. We are modestly told that, on his arrival in India, he felt sure that the railways would not pay, but he graciously abstained from stopping them. As "the indirect benefit to the population at large might be great, and as the political advantage accruing from the rapidity and certainty of the transport of troops and military stores was indubitable, I did not think it necessary to enter upon any inquiry as to the character of the lines in progress." Forgetting the Indian rains, Sir William Denison recommends animal power in preference to steam on branch railways.—Friend of India.

SNOW AT OOTACAMUND.—In a valley about six miles from Ootacamund a lady and several other persons observed a fall of snow at about 7 o'clock in the morning of Tuesday last. The weather we are now experiencing is certainly singular, but this phenomenon appears more singular still. There is evidently something strange coming over the face of the earth.—Neilherry Excelsior.

FRUITS OF AN ENGLISH EDUCATION.—A pro-tergé writing to his benefactor:—"Honored Sir,—I was elevated beyond depression at getting a sight of your honor's fist once more. Most respected sir, it is occasion of gnawing remorse that I have to inform your honor that price of rice is five measures for one rupee. 'Spanking sir,' how can your poor dependent maintain his families [including his aunt's wife's sister-in-law's children all under his protection, no any others to maintain them], on the miserable pretence of seven rupees a month. Knowing 'what a pitiful person' your honor is I am always depending on your honor's celibated (celebrated?) charity and extensive bowels of compassion for the successive advances to the goal (goal?) of my aspirations and inflations. In conclusion, I beg to assure your honor that my mind was afflicted with emotions and tremendous ebullitions when your honor wrote that Miss Constance had severe spasms which I hope will turn out fortunately to be only slight stomach ache. Your honor is in my humble opinion greatly fortunate gentleman not to be in this town just now, as I hear general talk that the Cholera morbus is 'cutting a swell' and plenty peoples is daily 'kicking the buckets' with profound respect and submission and my warm-hearted and hot-headed wishes for the longevity and promotions tantamount to your honor's expidity and my humble compliments to your respectable Mistress and Miss Constance, as in duty bound shall ever pray.—I am, most honoured and stunning sir, your honour's most obedient and very humble servant, and poor dependent, A. RAMASAWMY, Passed Candidate, S.T.E."

LIVING IN MADRAS.—The Madras Times draws a sad picture of the shifts to which subalterns in the army are reduced in that Presidency by the rise of prices and insufficient allowances. The pay of a local captain in Madras is now, as represented by its equivalent in commodities purchased in a free-trade bazaar, about equal to what an ensign received thirty years ago. Married captains live in misery and debt. An unmarried subaltern of seventeen years' standing has Rs. 306-10 a month, of which, after fund, mess, and band deductions, he receives Rs. 180-3-4. He never touches beer or wine, lives in a house which costs Rs. 35 a month, pays Rs. 45 for servants, Rs. 55 for bazaar expenses other than the mess, and Rs. 30 for sundry shop bills. He has a balance of Rs. 15 out of which to dress himself, pay his step money, and meet the expense of marching and setting up house in a new station. The result is that he is always in debt. This is one instance taken from the Presidency where the rise in price has been least felt.

THE INAM COMMISSION is still quietly doing its useful work in Madras. Up to the end of November the number of cases confirmed was 3,49,746, of which 79,983 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of a permanent character; 150,812 personal grants enfranchised at the option of the Inamdars; 92,331 personal grants enfranchised compulsorily, and 6,610 personal grants not enfranchised and confirmed on present tenures. The amount of Quit-rent annually payable to Government in addition to the former rate is Rs. 12,44,732. The amount paid in redemption of the Quit-rent is Rs. 12,265-6-4. The combined Quit-rent payable to Government for the future upon personal Inams confirmed to the holders amounts to Rs. 9,72,594. These figures represent the removal of a vast amount of discontent combined with a large gain to the annual revenue, for which we have to thank Sir C. Trevelyan's administration.

COFFEE IN COORG.—The Madras Times does not draw a favourable picture of the present state of coffee cultivation in Coorg. The crop is this season much below the average. The Madras Government, imitating Sir C. Trevelyan's hasty action in Assam—afterwards overruled by the Viceroy—without warning refused to allow the planters, of whom many are natives, to cash at the Mercara treasury bills purchased in Madras. The planters asked for a little time to make other arrangements, but in vain. They were allowed, only temporarily, to make use of the Parapatan treasury, thirty-two miles off. The labour question, too, threatens to become relatively as formidable as in Assam. High prices have led the coolies to strike for better wages, and to leave for Wynaad, distant only a day's journey, where they receive a half more wages.

WHITE ANTS.—In reply to a request for information made by the St. Helena Government last year, Mr. M. G. Plumbe, of the Coorg Survey, reports that he knows of no other plan for preventing the ravages of white ants except this:—Apply with a brush to wood infested by the ants liquid made of nux vomica boiled in water with sulphuric acid and reduced to a paste. The operator should have no sores on his hands. It is characteristic of India that so deadly a poison as nux vomica should be obtainable in any bazaar at one anna the pound.

KIDNAPPING.—A mendicant lately induced a mother in Bombay to allow him to take her child, nine years of age, to see a wedding. Both disappeared, and after a month's search by the police the mother died. The child's sister, however, soon after discovered the mendicant, who confessed to the police "that he had left the girl with one Syud Mettoo, the doctor of his Highness Khunderao Gaekwar." Our resident at Baroda, on being referred to, replied that "the girl had been respectably married," and the case was dismissed at the Mazagon Police Court. Yet the child was only nine years of age.

EASTERN LUXURY.—The Madras Times draws a sad picture of the shifts to which subalterns in the army are reduced in that presidency by the rise of prices and insufficient allowances. The pay of a local captain in Madras is now, as represented by its equivalent in commodities purchased in a free-trade bazaar, about equal to what an ensign received thirty years ago. Married captains live in misery and debt. An unmarried subaltern of seventeen years' standing has Rs. 306-10 a month, of which, after fund, mess and band deductions, he receives Rs. 180-3-4. He never touches beer or wine, lives in a house which costs Rs. 35 a month, pays Rs. 45 for servants, Rs. 55 for bazaar expenses other than the mess, and Rs. 30 for sundry shop bills. He has a balance of Rs. 15 out of which to dress himself, pay his step money, and meet the expense of marching and setting up house in a new station. The result is that he is always in debt. This is one instance taken from the presidency where the rise in prices has been least felt.

DR. CLEGHORN.—The Government of India, in considering the expediency of retaining the services of Dr. Cleghorn—who has since January, 1864, been associated with Dr. Brandis, the Conservator of Forests in Bengal, on special duty—for two months longer, that is, to the 1st of March, have expressed their sense of the great services rendered to the State by that officer in the cause of forest conservancy. It is remarked that he may be regarded as the founder of Indian forest conservancy, and that his lengthened services from the institution of forest management in Madras have unquestionably contributed to the public good in this department of the administration of the country. Dr. Cleghorn's labours are also referred to as having paved the way towards establishing an efficient system of forest conservancy in the Punjab.

RANGOON.—Mr. J. Pitt Kennedy, who has been appointed to succeed Dr. Clarke as Recorder of Rangoon and Maulmain, has already arrived. His salary will be rupees one thousand per mensem, certainly not too much for any educated English gentleman in these times to receive in such a place as Burmah, and with the heavy work of two Courts before him. There is every probability, however, that the towns of Rangoon and Maulmain will eventually have separate tribunals, the rumour being that should Dr. Clarke return he will remain at the former, and Mr. Kennedy be posted to the latter. Under the auspices of the Agri-Horticultural Society of British Burmah, an exhibition will be held on a spot of ground facing the residence of the Chief Commissioner, on the 15th February. So many as forty-eight gold and silver medals, besides a thousand rupees in cash, are available for distribution as prizes. By this time the first of the British India Steam Navigation Company's vessels has left Madras for Rangoon direct. This is in fulfilment of the long-contemplated project, which seems very warmly appreciated in the latter port. The steamer in question is the Madras, which will, on her way to Rangoon, touch at Masulipatam, Cocanada, Vizagapatam and Bimlipatam, taking ten days for the voyage altogether. The visit will be paid twice a-month.

H.M.'s 76TH.—In consequence of the sudden departure of H.M.'s 66th for England, H.M.'s 76th will be sent from Fort St. George to Bangalore almost immediately; and if not to Bangalore, there is some notion at headquarters of sending them to New Zealand. The regiment has barely been a year in India, having arrived in Madras in January 1864, where Colonel Brewster and his officers seem to have made themselves particularly popular.

BANK OF MADRAS.—The directors of the Bank of Madras have resolved to increase its capital, by the creation of 1,875 new shares of 1,000 Rs. each. They are to be offered to present shareholders at a premium of 10 per cent., and are to be allotted in the proportion of one new share to each holder of two shares.

CHOLERA IN MADRAS.—This disease has been, for the last five weeks, and still is, prevalent in the town of Madras. Nungumbakum and Persewalkum are the districts in which the disease has assumed its most appalling form, and Black Town is by no means free from its influence.

MADRAS WEAVERS.—The condition of the weavers in the Madras Presidency has so much improved that only a trifling sum has been required from the fund of Rs. 10,000 raised for their relief. They have been benefited by the American war, the high price of cotton having led them to seek more lucrative employment.

THE LORD BISHOP OF MADRAS is absent on a tour of visitation to the north of his diocese, and H.E., the Commander-in-Chief is similarly visiting the Burmese provinces for military purposes.

BOMBAY.

A LAY OF BOMBAY.

Three Wallahs came sailing out into the East,
Out into the East as far as Bombay,
Each thought to go home with a fortune at least,
And live like a swell meanwhile on his pay.

But Wallahs must work, and Wallahs must swear,
For there's nothing to earn, and things are so dear,

That Sir Bartle Frere is starving.

Three Judges sat up in a desolate Court,
And they pondered much on the state of affairs,
They looked at their bills, and they looked at the Fort,

Where the brokers were shrieking and fighting for shares.

For Judges who work, like Judges must live,

And Sir Charles Trevelyan has nothing

Though Sir Bartle Frere be starving.

Three persons laid hold of the Back Bay sands,
And their shares went up in a wonderful way;
And Government's weeping and wringing its hands,
For it can't get a single servant to stay.

For men won't work, and women won't weep,

And Sir Charles Trevelyan has no one to keep

But Sir Bartle Frere, who is starving.

MOUNT ABOO.—A news-writer at Deesa says that preparations are being made for the construction of new barracks at Mount Aboo, the old barracks being no longer fit accommodation for the troops stationed there. The Sappers and Miners of the 56th Regiment are to proceed to Mount Aboo on the shortest notice. This, as our readers may know, is a mountain in the Serohee territory, Rajpootana, connected with the Aravulli range. According to Thornton, it is a celebrated place of pilgrimage, especially for the Jains, who have a very magnificent place of worship at Dilwara, situate above the middle of the mountain, Colonel Tod says:—"Beyond controversy this is the most superb of all the temples in India, and there is not an edifice besides the Taj Mahal that can approach it." It has been erected on the site of the temple to Shiva and Vishnu, and, according to tradition, the founder purchased the site from the ruler of Serohee, by covering as much ground as was requisite with silver coin, and paying it as the price. The whole of this temple is said to have occupied a period of fourteen years in building, and to have cost eighteen crores of rupees, besides fifty-six lacs spent in levelling the side of the hill on which it is built. The summit of the mountain is situated forty miles north east of the British cantonment of Deesa, to which it was thought it might afford the site for a useful and excellent sanitarium. It was first used as such in 1847.

THE FALLS OF GAIRSOPPA.—A tourist describes, in the Bombay Times, a visit to the Falls of Gairsoppa, forty miles from Honore, on the western coast. They are the highest in the world, being 900 feet, while those of Niagara, though immensely broader, are only 150 feet. At present there is little water in the Gairsoppa river, in the bed of which the Falls occur, but in the rainy season travellers describe the spectacle as unsurpassed in the whole world. The visitor, facing the falls from the right or Canara bank, stands on the Rajah's Rock, so called because of the attempt of a Rajah to build a temple there, and thence command a full view of the three Falls—the Roarer, on the left; the Rocket, in the centre; and the Dame Blanche. The Roarer falls 300 feet into a deep hole, and from that 700 feet, making a noise as it strikes the rock. The Rocket is the most beautiful, for it falls sheer down to 900 feet at once. The enraptured spectator compares it to "a sheet of frosted silver 100 feet broad and 900 feet deep, and in myriads of places on the face of the sheet there are beautiful elongated patches of a yet clearer white—a sort of raised basso-relievo surface—with a silvery frostiness with which only the pure and uncontaminated snow on the summit of Ararat can vie." In the centre these patches look like exploded rockets a foot long. The Dame Blanche Fall needs much water to justify its name. There is a good traveller's bungalow on the Canara side of the river.

THE ROYCHUND DEEPCHUND ASYLUM.—The proceedings of a meeting held at the house of Mr. Cawndas Narrondas, on the 27th November last, for the purpose of accepting from Mr. Premchund Roychund the magnificent gift of five lacs of rupees for an asylum—to be named after his father—for the aged, infirm, blind, and destitute of the Bania community, were submitted by the secretaries for the consideration of Government on the 26th January. The attention of Government had been drawn particularly to the fourth resolution passed by the meeting, requesting them to consent to act as trustees of a fund of four lacs, giving the committee the interest on the amount half-yearly, to be applied to the objects of the endowment. The balance of one lac (with such additions as the donor might still make) is to be devoted to the purchase of a site and to building purposes. The proceedings of the meeting having been forwarded by Government for report to the Deputy-Auditor and Accountant-General, Mr. Birch, was of opinion that "it would seem advisable to invest the funds of the asylum in Government securities, to be endorsed over to me as deputy-auditor and accountant-general. The interest to be credited to the institution when payable." Government have passed the following resolution upon the subject:—"The suggestion of Mr. Birch should be acted on. The benefaction should be suitably acknowledged, and specially reported to the Government of India and Secretary of State, and the papers may be published in the Government Gazette. It should be noted to the Government of India, in reference to their former instructions relating to such benefactions, that the trust involves no charge on the public revenues."

THE PARSEE CREED.—Professor Haug, of Poona, the Zend and Sanscrit scholar, writes in the Bombay Gazette a vigorous defence of Mr. Anderson's assertion in the Imperial Legislature, that the Parsees have a strong belief in a future state. They pray for the dead as Roman Catholics do. The Zend Avesta teaches that there is after death a separate abode for the good, and a separate one for the bad, the one called Gero-demana (Garotman), the other Dushaka (or Drujo-demana, i.e. house of destruction, or lie). The happy life of the blessed is called ahu vahista, i.e. the best, most excellent (literally the "most splendid") life, whence the common Persian word Behesht, or paradise, is derived. The king of Heaven is Ahuramazda, the ruler of Hell is Angromainyas (Ahriman). The Zend Avesta teaches a general resurrection of the dead, and a separation of the good from the wicked, a general destruction of the present universe and the creation of a new one, in which there is no evil, but only happiness. Dr. Haug holds that a comparison of the Zendavesta with the writings of Herodotus, Plutarch, Diogenes, Laertius and Pliny, proves the identity of the religion of the Magi with Parseeism. In his new work on Zoroastrianism he hopes to prove this, and also that "the Pehlevi, the language of the Parsi tradition, shows unmistakably peculiarly Babylonian elements, and is much older." Dr. Haug always makes the mistake, however, of assuming that the materialised religionless Parsees of the present day are as earnest and pure in their beliefs as the early Magi. They are as degenerate as the Hindoos compared with Vedic days have become.

MEMORIAL CROSS-TOWER.—It has been suggested that it would be right and fitting to adorn the Esplanade, near the admiral's quarters, with a cross-tower, in memory of all those Europeans who have died in serving their country in India, whether in civil, military, or naval service, or in any other capacity. This could be constructed in such a manner that, if permitted, the bell won by the army at the close of the last century, and which now lies a standing monument of disgrace to liberality, near the church, not placed in any proper position, could be hung. Cross-towers and bell-towers could be combined, and a campanile erected; one suitable to the city, and which would at once be a substantial memorial of the loved and lost, as well as a beacon and welcome to all arrivals from all countries, and a farewell to those who leave us. It is intended to make application to his Excellency to grant a site, to ask for a solemn public laying of the foundation-stone, and to secure the services of the best architects of the day.

COTTON OVERLAND.—As an encouragement to projectors of new lines of steamers to run between Bombay and Suez, we may mention that it has lately been discovered that cotton can be sent overland to England more profitably than round the Cape. Mr. Premchund Roychund, to whose enterprising genius Bombay owes this discovery, is said to have found his first shipment pay so well that he has engaged the spare cargo room of all the P. and O. steamers up to the end of May next, intending to freight them with cotton.

REVENUE SURVEY OFFICE.—On the proposition of the local Government the Government of India has sanctioned the formation of a Revenue Survey Office, or rather the reorganisation of the department at the island of Bombay, at a cost of Rs. 2,700 a month. A surveyor is to be appointed on a salary of Rs. 1,000, and an assistant on Rs. 700 a month, and the balance to be defrayed in entertaining an efficient establishment of clerks, writers, &c.

RETURN HOME OF THE 71ST HIGHLANDERS.

Head Quarters, Calcutta, Jan. 27.—The services of the 71st Highland light infantry in India entitle them on their departure for England to honourable mention in general orders.

A wing of the regiment on their arrival in India in 1858 joined the Central India Field Force, and H.E. therefore is enabled to bear testimony to the good services which they performed, and the excellent spirit which they displayed during that campaign.

The regiment more recently distinguished itself under their commanding officer, Colonel Hope, c.b., in the late operations on the frontier.

Sir Hugh Rose cannot, in justice to military merit, speak of the 71st in a general order without reverting to an earlier period, when in two great campaigns in Europe they won a reputation which has earned them an honoured page in history.

Sir Hugh Rose's best wishes attend this distinguished regiment on their leaving his command for home.

Exchanges.

India-office, London, Dec. 9, 1864.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

SIR,—With reference to my letter, dated Nov. 23. No. 365, I have now to inform you that the F.M. C. in C. proposes to issue a G.O. to the officers of the army on the subject of exchanges of such officers with officers of the staff corps.

2. It appears desirable to H.R.H. that officers of the staff corps who wish to exchange should submit with their applications the recommendation and certificate laid down in para. 19, page 69, of the Queen's Regulations, to the effect that the exchange does not originate in any regimental proceeding of any kind, or in any cause affecting the honour and character of the officer concerned.

3. As, however, officers of the staff corps serve every variety of position, civil and military, H.R.H. further considers that the "recommendation" in their case should be signed by the Adjutant-general of the army of the presidency in which they serve, as an evidence of fitness for line service and the declaration countersigned by the commanding officer or head of department under whose orders they may be at the time of application.

4. Your Government will issue the necessary instructions for carrying out these views.—I have, &c.,
(Signed) C. Wood.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, March 15, 1865.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE N.W. PROVINCES FOR THE YEAR 1863-64.

THE high price of cotton naturally led to a largely increased cultivation of that staple throughout the North-West Provinces, and it is stated that in 1863 the area sown was one-half greater than that of the preceding year. But so continuous was the downfall of rain in the Central and Upper Doab, and in parts of Bundelcund and Rohilcund, that the plant became generally stunted, while on the low lands it rotted and died off. Thus it happened that of the one and a half million acres planted with cotton, at least a quarter of a million were ploughed up and sown with other crops. Then, in some districts, just as the plants were coming to maturity, a drought set in, which exercised a very prejudicial influence upon the out-turn. Some slight damage, too, was done by locusts. All this goes to prove how inexpedient it would be for the Lancashire manufacturers to place too much confidence in the reputed cotton-growing capabilities of Upper India. In fact, notwithstanding that a far greater breadth of land was sown with cotton in 1863 than in 1862 the produce was rather less than in the preceding year, 1,217,170 acres yielding no more than 1,034,660 maunds of clean staple. The fact that at most of the chief marts in the Upper Provinces the price had nearly doubled between January, 1863, and May, 1864, without producing any very striking effect on the amount of supply, illustrates the reluctance of the native mind to venture upon any innovation, however tempting it may appear. At Meerut the price rose from Rs. 18-13-0 to Rs. 30-10-11, at Agra from 21 to 34, at Furruckabad from 20 to 35-8, at Cawnpore from 24 to 40, at Allahabad from 20 to 40, at Mirzapore from 16 to 40, and at Ghazepore from 22-12 to 39-6.

The diminution in the demand for Manchester piece goods induced the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce to make inquiries into the state of the local manufactures, which, it was supposed, might possibly have benefited by the almost prohibitory price of English goods. It appears, however, that so far from this being the case, there was a decided falling off in the native manufactures. And yet the demand for native cottons is greater than for English, because the former, though of a coarser texture, are "considerably cheaper than any English stuffs that would answer the same purpose, and are also warmer and more durable and better suited to the wants of the people." It is surely little creditable to the ingenuity of the Manchester manufacturers that with all their advantages of machinery they cannot compete in price with the poor hand-loom weaver, who plies his shuttle much in the same way as his forefathers did two thousand years ago. Taking the entire produce of the N.W. Provinces at 8,000,000 lbs., it is computed that from one and a half to two millions of pounds are retained for domestic use, and about 6,000,000 lbs. exported to Europe and China. At present by far the largest portion of the up-country cotton finds its way to Calcutta, but as the different lines of railway are completed, it may be expected that no small quantity will be diverted to Bombay.

Nor was the production of cotton the only branch of husbandry that occupied the attention of the Government. Agricultural Exhibitions were held at Benares and Roorkee in the early part of 1864, and a General Association was formed for the encouragement of agriculture in the Upper Provinces. Though looking to Government for moral support and occasional aid, the Association expect to maintain themselves chiefly by their own exertions, and propose to have annual Shows at the principal stations.

The most beneficial effects appear to have resulted from the establishment of the Government tea plantations on the spurs of the Himalaya. The actual quantity of tea produced was only 41,575 lbs., and 2,361 maunds of seed, valued at Rs. 104,386 in the gross—or at Rs. 40,086 net, after deducting Rs. 64,300 for expenditure. To this, however, should be added nearly 5,000 rupees, the value of 161,000 seedlings distributed to private planters. But, in truth, no just estimate of the importance of this experiment can be derived from a bare statement of income and expenditure. Had these nurseries even failed to cover their own expenses, any pecuniary loss would have been abundantly compensated by the immense benefits they are likely to confer upon the native population. Hundreds of thoroughly trained tea makers have been brought up in the Government establishments, while no small number of native zemindars are now turning their attention to the cultivation of this profitable shrub.

Some thousands of pounds weight have been purchased by Punjab merchants for exportation to Cabul and Bokhara, and in our own provinces a taste for the fragrant and grateful beverage is fast springing up.

The conservancy of the Government forests is another matter, the true importance of which is at length beginning to be appreciated. For many years past timber trees and copse-wood have been ruthlessly cut down, or rooted up, without any thought being given to the maintenance of a sufficient supply for the future. The consequence is, that some districts have been entirely denuded of forest trees, and neither timber nor fuel is procurable, except at exorbitant prices. A conference of several experienced forest officers was therefore held at Nynsee Tal, and various propositions have been submitted to Government, with a view to check any further waste for the present, and to make some provision against future wants. Adequate establishments being organised, and the forest tracts properly valued and surveyed, it was proposed to divide the latter into two classes, Reserved and Ordinary. The reserved forests are to be regarded as sacred, while in the ordinary forests the inferior kinds of trees would be farmed out under a watchful supervision. Other measures were recommended of a highly useful and practical character, but to which we need not more particularly allude in this place. To form a just estimate, however, of the value of forests in a tropical country, it must not be forgotten that without the protection of trees the springs of water dry up; neither does the same quantity of rain fall from the clouds. But irrespective of these momentous considerations, there is an ever-increasing demand for timber in all parts of India. Immense quantities of Saul wood are required for railway sleepers, and for public buildings, and it may naturally be expected that the natives themselves will acquire a taste for a better description of dwellings under the combined influence of education and high wages.

Here we take leave of this able and interesting report of a year's administration of the Northern-Western Provinces. There still remain several sections to which we have not even casually alluded; but in the annals of British India the history of a year ago already borders on the antique, so rapid is the progress of western ideas and European civilisation.

THE CYCLONE ON THE HOOGLY.

THE Bengal Government has at length published an official narrative—bearing the signature of the Hon. Ashley Eden—describing in detail the disastrous effects of the great hurricane of the 5th of October, 1864. The gale appears to have originated in the immediate neighbourhood of the Andaman Islands, whence it travelled in a north-westerly direction, and struck the mainland somewhere near the Balasore Roads and Hidgelee. Here it raged furiously throughout the night of the 4th, and from this point rushed up the right bank of the Hooghly at a rate varying from eight to twenty-six miles an hour. The full force of the hurricane made itself felt at Calcutta from 10 A.M. to 4 P.M. on the 5th, and seven hours later the storm reached Kishnagur. It was somewhere between Rampore, Bauleah and Pubna that it crossed the Ganges and swept over the Bograh district. At about the 25th degree of north latitude it turned back towards the east, and finally spent itself on the Garrow Hills.

Although these cyclones recur with tolerable regularity every ten or twelve years, and although scientific men had warned the Government in 1862 that a hurricane might be expected in the latter part of 1864, no precautions of any kind had been taken—the entire community, untaught by experience, enjoying that comfortable sense of security appropriately designated a fool's paradise. The destruction caused by the storm was, of course, all the greater from its being unexpected. And it worked out its wicked will in two ways, by wind and by water. The gale blew down houses, uprooted trees, dismantled the shipping, and lashed the sea and the river unto madness. But it was the storm-wave that overthrew the embankments—swept “the labour'd mole away”—inundated the country, destroyed the crops, and overwhelmed men and cattle in a common and sudden death. The loss of life and property in Calcutta, where exact returns were most easily obtainable, was truly dreadful, and would have been infinitely greater had not the embankments in the lower part of the river given way, and so diverted a large volume of water from the port and city of Calcutta. The magistrate of Howrah, indeed, does not hesitate to say that the total destruction of the capital of British India was only averted by that of the embankments intended to retain the flood in its appointed channel. But though saved thus providentially from being submerged beneath a wall of water towering thirty feet high, Calcutta and its suburbs had yet to mourn the deaths of two Europeans and forty-nine natives, besides injuries sustained by one of the former, and fifteen of the latter race, and the total destruction of 102 houses built of masonry, and of 40,698 tiled and straw houses, in addition to serious damage done to 563 substantial tenements, and 4,594 slighter erections. The Botanic and the Eden Gardens, Tank-square, Fort William, and the roads and avenues in and about the capital, were all denuded of their fine stately trees, which strewed the ground in all directions, blocking up the highways, and rendering them impassable to wheeled vehicles. The greatest damage inflicted, however, by the combined force of wind and water was done to the shipping in the port. On the morning of the 5th there were 195 vessels lying off Calcutta—at the going down of the sun not more than twenty-three had passed unharmed through the double ordeal. The gale, indeed, was ridden out by nearly all with comparative impunity, but, when the terrible bore came roaring up the river, one ship after another was torn from her moorings, and either driven ashore or hurled against the tier higher up the stream. In this manner thirty-six vessels were entirely lost,—including ten that went down bodily,—ninety-seven were severely damaged, and thirty-nine sustained more or less injury. The Gobindpore, a newly built 1,200 ton ship, capsized and sank off the Custom-house, her crew being saved through the devoted courage of a seaman named Edward Cleary who swam off to the wreck with a line, across the raging waters. The P. and O. Company's hulk, the old Hindustan, turned over, and went down at her moorings, while the Hospital ship Bentinck, off Diamond Harbour, was lifted up by the wave and carried bodily on to the top of the embankment; but not until the invalids had been taken off by the steamer Defiance. Unhappily, the same good fortune befel not the coolie emigrants on board the Ally, bound for the Mauritius. Not only did the vessel itself founder, but of 335 emigrants only twenty-two were saved, and no more than seven of the crew. Equally complete was the loss of the Burmah mail screw steamer Persia, which was literally swallowed up with all her passengers and crew, save two of the latter, by an enormous wave that struck her from the stern. On the river the steam-tugs Phoenix, Banshee, Linnet, Fire Queen, Dwarkanauth, and Satellite, have ceased for ever to puff and splutter. The Government steamer Adjai, and the Hope and Krishna, light vessels, were also lost, and much injury was sustained by vessels belonging to the Pilot, Survey, and Harbour Master's departments. Finally, of 270 sets of moorings in the Port only 60 remain fit for service. The damage done to Government buildings in the outlying districts of the division, with the exception of Midnapore, are estimated at £20,000, and in Fort William, Barrackpore, and Dum-Dum at £35,000, exclusive of the amount required to re-construct what is past repair. Of the trees in the park at Barrackpore at least one-half were levelled with the ground, while still greater damage was done to the beautiful avenue leading to the Governor-general's suburban residence. But not only in ships, trees, and houses did the Government suffer from this ruthless visitation, an immense quantity of salt being utterly lost, and a considerable number of Golahs seriously injured.

At Howrah, on the opposite side of the Hooghly, the hurricane raged even more furiously than in Calcutta, the populous villages of Shampore and Oolobariah being completely overwhelmed by the storm-wave. The loss of life in this district is computed at 1,978 individuals, while 316 masonry, and 150,158 mud-houses were utterly destroyed. In addition to all this, 12,762 head of cattle were drowned, but this loss does not fall entirely upon the inhabitants of the district, as many droves were merely passing through on their way to the Calcutta market.

In what may be called the county of Calcutta, or, as it is generally termed, in the 24-Pergunnahs, the mischief wrought by the great wave amounted almost to annihilation, so far as Saugor Island was concerned. Of a population of 6,000 souls, only 1,488 are known to survive, while 7,000 head of cattle and 3,565 houses were swept off the surface of the land. The wave rose 15 feet above the level of the island, and cleared away everything that opposed its advance, cutting the very island into two halves. Indeed, from Saugor to Atcheepore, the storm passed like a knife over a riband of land, varying from one to eight miles in breadth. Everything disappeared before it. Within a mile of the river 80 per cent. of the entire population perished, and between that distance and the outer edge of the storm-stricken area from 30 to 40 per cent. The total loss of life in this district probably exceeded 12,000. It was still greater, however, in that of Midnapore, where upwards of 20,000 human beings are still missing, and not less than 40,000 head of cattle. The number of houses destroyed is not known, but at Tumlook, which suffered less severely than many other places, of 1,400 houses, only 27 are now standing. The storm-wave varied greatly in height as it passed over this district. On the southern face of the sea-dyke it was under five feet, but by the time it reached Goonput it was 11½ feet high, and at Dowlutpore it was over 30 feet. Above Calcutta the hurricane lost much of its original violence, though 112 persons are reported to have been killed or drowned at Hooghly, and a considerable number at Nuddea. At Bograh, too, which was struck by the gale at 2 A.M. on the 6th, the jail was blown down as well as the bazaar, and many Government buildings severely injured, but it is not known that any lives were lost. In addition to the destruction of human life, the loss of so many thousands of cattle, the levelling or unroofing of so many houses, and the uprooting of so many noble trees, there is also to be taken into consideration the damage done to the crops by wind and wave. Fortunately this was not so great as might have been anticipated, and it is hoped that even the salt deposited by that terrible wave will not exercise a permanently injurious effect. Owing to the cyclone following so soon after the rainy season, the waters of the Bay of Bengal were less brackish than at other times of the year, and the soil itself being saturated with fresh water the tidal wave became, as it were, diluted, even as it sunk into the ground. For all that some time must elapse before the wretched villagers can be expected to recover any portion of their former prosperity. Many of the native zemindars, indeed, have done all that laid in their power by remitting rent to their tenants, but a large margin was still left to be supplemented by public and private benevolence. And neither the Government nor the European and Parsee residents were found wanting in the hour of need. In an incredibly short space of time 15,700 maunds of rice, 2,500 of dhall, 492 of oil, and 234 maunds of salt, 128,000 yards of cloth, 1,750 pieces of blanket, 988 maunds of coir yarn and jute twine, 6,200 khoddallies, and 6,400 khuttarees, were distributed among the sufferers, in addition to pecuniary aid, to the amount of £10,000. What now presses upon the Government is to devise some protection against a recurrence of such a calamity. With this view three questions have been submitted to Government: (1) the construction of wet docks for the accommodation of the shipping; (2) the completion of the requirements at Port Canning with a view to direct a portion of the shipping to Mutlah; (3) the best mode of relaying the moorings so as to render them more secure. The first and second questions are still under consideration, but on the third action has already been taken, and an urgent indent sent home for a supply of screw moorings. It is also enjoined upon all shipowners and captains that "from the 30th September until after the full moon of November no ship in the port shall be allowed to have top-gallant yards or top-gallant masts aloft, and they shall in addition strike top-sail yard and top mast when required to do so." If properly used, this almost fatal cyclone may prove the beginning of a brighter era for Calcutta, and may save it from the doom to which it was gliding down through the selfishness of its merchants and the plethoric apathy of its Baboos. But if it neglect this warning, or allow this chance to escape, another decade will not have passed away before Bombay be recognised as the capital city of British India.

BOOKS.

Soldiering in Sunshine and Storm. By Wm. Douglas, Private 10th Royal Hussars. A. and C. Black.

We wish to speak with all possible forbearance of this very pretentious and impertinent volume. That a private in a cavalry regiment should possess the ability and inclination, and find time, to write a book that is in many parts quite readable, and occasionally even instructive, is a circumstance very much to his credit. At the same time it is to be regretted that before rushing into print he did not consult some person of ordinary taste, who might have counselled him to omit the many riotous descriptions of drinking bouts, and also have cautioned him against making such free use of the names of individuals either still living, or very recently dead. In short, the book savours strongly of the barrack-room. The author may be a sharp, clever fellow enough, and he really appears to have picked up some slight smattering of literature at one of the Edinburgh schools; but he is altogether destitute of refinement, and knows neither what to reveal nor what to suppress. During his eight years' service in India he seems to have acquired the usual amount of camp jargon, and he is particularly fond of dragging in corrupt, mis-spelt gibberish, which he apparently mistakes for Hindustani. There is one point, however, on which, though unconsciously, he throws some light that may hereafter prove useful, when Egypt becomes our military high road to India. He shows, by his own experience, how inexpedient it is that British soldiers should be permitted to remain in that country one hour longer than is absolutely necessary. Even at Suez, though special orders were issued against any trooper entering the town, the author and one of his comrades contrived to get within the walls, and tested the liquors offered for sale at least at three different shops. At Cairo drinking and love-making were the order of the day, and it is somewhat significant that on their march from that city to Alexandria they found that all the women were sent away to some distance from their line of route. At that period—for the 10th Hussars were on their way to the Crimea—greater allowance would be made for the peculiar weaknesses of the infidel than could be expected in ordinary times. And it would be a very untoward result of this shortening of the passage to India if we only succeeded in alienating the goodwill of the Pasha, and in disgusting his fanatical subjects, already not too well disposed towards us. On matters connected with the practical details of a cavalry soldier's life Mr. Douglas writes much that is worthy of the notice of his superiors, however disagreeable and ungracious may be his manner of expressing himself. For a soldier's library his book may be an acceptable acquisition, but it certainly is not one in which a general reader will take the slightest interest.

The Englishwoman in India. By a Lady Resident. Smith, Elder, and Co.

A "Lady Resident" has conferred a real boon upon all who are bound "Eastward, ho!" whether as mere voyagers for health, or pleasure, or as future dwellers in "the clime of the sun." Her directions on all points connected with outfit, furniture, housekeeping, and the rearing of pigs, poultry, and children are as minute as they are practical and varied. Though chiefly familiar with the mode of living that prevails in the Madras Presidency, the information she imparts, in a light and graceful style, will be found equally applicable to the other Presidencies, with a very few trifling exceptions. In one respect, at least, it is clear that the denizens of "Sleepy Hollow," as Madras has irreverently been named, are less artistic than the dwellers within the Mahratta ditch. Our authoress suggests, as an experiment, that a narrow paper bordering should be put on between the doors and windows in drawing-rooms, so as to have the effect of panneling. This effect is commonly enough produced in Calcutta by paint far better than it could be by paper, which in the rainy season is apt to blister and peel off in ribbons. In addition to the most ample details relating to outfit, furniture, servants, housekeeping and horse-keeping, travelling, rearing children, and the management of the farm yard, a "Lady Resident" furnishes a large supply of receipts for Indian cookery, which must prove invaluable to all young housekeepers. One or two good anecdotes are also told, not the less amusing for being somewhat ancient. Here is one illustrative of the sort of answers a Madras servant who speaks a little English is likely to bring back when entrusted with a verbal message:—

"Boy, my compliments to Captain A., and ask him to send me the last 'Army List.'"

Answer given: "Tell master, very sorry, not got now."

Answer received: "Captain Sahib says see master d—d first."

And here is another touching a native's idea of the "eternal fitness of things":—

"Boy, how are master's socks so dirty?"

"I take, make e'strain coffee."

"What, you dirty wretch, for coffee?"

"Yes, missis, but never take master's clean e'sock. Master done use, then I take."

Elihu Jan's Story; or, the Private Life of an Eastern Queen. By Wm. Knighton, LL.D. Longman and Co.

Elihu Jan was a female slave and hookah attendant of the late Queen Dowager of Oude, who visited England in the vain hope of winning from her Britannic Majesty's compassion the restoration of her son, Wajid Ali Shah, to his throne and kingdom. On her royal mistress's departure from Calcutta Elihu Jan returned to Lucknow, and for a while lived with her husband, a dealer in tobacco. After the mutiny, however, her husband failed in business, and Elihu Jan entered the household of Mr. Johannes, the well-known store-keeper, in the capacity of ayah. Subsequently she transferred her services to the wife of Dr. Knighton, who professes to have taken down from her lips the very curious and amusing revelations of palace life at Lucknow, which are given to the world in this little volume. Thoroughly to appreciate the state of society depicted in these pages, one ought to come to the task fresh from a perusal of Madame D'Arblay's delineations of Court life in the time of George III. and his most correct and formal consort. The contrast is supremely ridiculous, and presents itself at every step and under all sorts of strange forms and colours. Elihu Jan's stories are certainly piquant, and afford, so far as they may be credited, a singular insight into the horrors, extravagances, and maniacal follies of a debauched Mussulman ruler, who cared nothing for power save as the means of gratifying his morbid appetites. Confessions extorted by flogging, faithless women bricked up alive, the grossest superstition, the most crass ignorance, and the most extraordinary mixture of imperial splendour and patriarchal simplicity, all combine to constitute a picture with Turneresque effects, and yet dreadfully real and life-like.

Some of Elihu Jan's personal anecdotes are exceedingly naive, and are invaluable as illustrating the mode and habit of thought that prevail among uneducated Mahomedans in British India. She is clearly a staunch believer in the right divine of kings, and is quite prepared to defend every atrocity committed by the orders of Wajid Ali Shah, or of his strong-minded mother. The book itself, however, is spoilt by the insertion of forty pages of extracts from Colonel Sleeman's "Journey through the Kingdom of Oude," and from Mrs. Parks's "Wanderings." They are put in, of course, as padding, to make the volume more suitable in appearance for the purposes of the circulating libraries, that are acting towards wholesome literature the part of a careless nurse who overlays the infant intrusted to her care. The "Conclusion" apart, Elihu Jan's Story is a series of often laughable, and always readable sketches of Eastern life and character, and quite as pleasant a pastime for a leisure hour as the general reader usually encounters.

PRINCE AZEEM JAH.

Sir F. KELLY moved for a select committee to inquire into the claim of Prince Azeem Jah to the title and dignity of Nawab of the Carnatic, and the claims of his Highness, under a treaty entered into in 1801 between the East India Company and Prince Azeem-ul-Dowlah. Looking at the nature of the questions involved in this case, he only asked, he said, that, in order that there should be a full and fair inquiry into all the circumstances, it should be referred to a select committee, so that the House and the Government might be able to do justice to this unfortunate Prince. The real question, which arose out of a certain alleged treasonable correspondence discovered in 1799, was whether it was of such a character as to justify the East India Company in at once deposing the Nawab in 1855. Sir Fitzroy entered into a long and minute history of transactions connected with the Carnatic, commencing more than a century ago, up to the treaty of 1801, with the then Nawab Azeem-ul-Dowlah. Supposing, he said, that the Company would have been justified in deposing the Nawab Wallajah, upon the discovery of the correspondence, or Omdut-ul-Omrh, his successor, the question was whether, under the treaty of 1801, the Nawab Azeem-ul-Dowlah was recognised as hereditary successor to a transmissible title and dignity, or only as possessor of the rank for his life. This was a question—the legal construction of the treaty—which that House, he observed, was not a proper tribunal to decide. He cited documents to show that the treaty was understood to convey a recognition of the hereditary dignity in the Nawab, a construction which seemed to be confirmed by the succession to the Musnud of the eldest son of Azeem-ul-Dowlah, on the death of the latter in 1819.

The motion was seconded by Mr. SMOLLETT in a long speech, in which he denounced the "Carnatic transaction" as an act of grave injustice, reflecting discredit upon the authorities.

Sir E. DERING defended Lord Harris against charges made by Mr. Smollett, complaining, with some warmth, of the unmeasured terms in which he had impugned the conduct of that nobleman when Governor of Madras with reference to the treaty of 1801; and he appealed to evidence which showed that that treaty was considered to confer no right of hereditary succession, but was a purely personal engagement. He thought Sir F. Kelly had not made out any substantial ground for the appointment of a committee.

After a few observations by Mr. VANSITTART and Mr. NEATE,

The SOLICITOR-GENERAL observed that the maintenance in India of a number of nominal Sovereigns was an admitted evil, and their abolition was beneficial to the people of India, and did harm or injury to no human being. Then were we, notwithstanding, bound to perpetuate the evil? It was said that we were bound by the treaty of 1801. He contended that the terms of the treaty bore no such construction; that it was not the intention of the treaty; on the contrary, that it was framed expressly for the purpose of excluding the possibility of such an interpretation. He proceeded to show that there had been a clear case of treachery on the part of the Nawabs of the Carnatic; that a correspondence of a treasonable character between Wallajah and Omdut-ul-Omrah and Tippoo Sultan had been discovered which gave us the right and the power to depose the Nawab. He explained the grounds of the treaty of 1801, which was a personal treaty, under which it was intended that the then Nawab, Azeem-ul-Dowlah, should hold the title by permission of the East India Company, and not by hereditary right, which could be claimed neither by the letter or spirit of the treaty, nor by the intention of its framers. He insisted that the House could decide upon the case, and that nothing but evil could result from the appointment of a committee.

Mr. HENNESSY observed that only inquiry was asked for, and he was surprised that the Government resisted it.

Mr. DUNLOP thought it was a case for inquiry.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR opposed the motion. He thought that neither on legal grounds nor upon the ground of expediency could the motion for an inquiry by a committee be maintained. At the same time, the East India Office should, in his opinion, take the case of this unfortunate family into consideration.

After a few words by Mr. INGHAM,

Sir C. WOOD justified the policy and justice of the course which had been taken in the case of the Carnatic family upon public as well as special grounds, and insisted that it had been attended with no breach of faith. He gave a short history of the transactions which resulted in the treaty of 1801, and an explanation of its object, which was, after the Carnatic had been forfeited by the family, to give to the then Nawab Azeem-ul-Dowlah the title for life only, the words "him and his heirs," and all terms implying perpetuity, being intentionally omitted. He cited the opinions of Indian statesmen and other authorities adverse to any claim of hereditary right in his descendants.

The discussion was continued by Colonel DICKSON and Colonel SYKES, but, upon a division, the motion was negatived by 53 to 38.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR S. W. STEEL, K.C.B.—We have to announce the death of Lieutenant-General Sir Scudamore Winde Steel, K.C.B., of her Majesty's Indian Forces. The deceased joined the Indian service in 1806. He served during 1808-9, under Col. Doveton, in Berar. During the Mahratta War of 1817-18 he served as Assistant-Quartermaster, and was present at the reduction of the Hill Forts in the Gungterry, where he was slightly wounded in the head with a matchlock ball. In 1821, 1822, and 1823 he was employed in the Southern Mahratta country, for which he received the thanks of the departmental officers. As Deputy-Assistant-Quartermaster of the Madras troops he took part in the expedition against Rangoon, and after a long succession of services he was appointed in 1852 to the command of the Madras division of the army of Burmah. He was in 1853 appointed K.C.B., and in 1854 specially appointed to command the Pegu division and Martaban provinces. He returned to England on the 27th of May, 1856, after having completed an uninterrupted service in India of fifty years.

LIEUT.-GENERAL SIR S. B. ELLIS, K.C.B., Royal Marines, one of the few remaining heroes of Trafalgar, died at his residence, Old Charlton, on Friday, Feb. 10, aged 78. The deceased entered the Royal Marines in 1804. He first served in Sir R. Calder's action off Cape Finisterre in 1805, and in the battle of Trafalgar in the same year. He was one of the survivors of the Walcheren expedition in 1809, was at the capture of Guadaloupe in 1810, was present at the capture of the American frigate President in 1814, and was the first officer who boarded her after she struck. He was employed from 1812 to 1813 off the coasts of Spain and Portugal, and was engaged in several boat actions off the coast of North America in 1814. In 1839 we was at the bombardment and reduction of Fort Munora in Scinde, and in the same year he commanded a detachment of his corps at Bushire, where he landed under a heavy fire from the Persians, and embarked in safety the political resident. For two years he was actively engaged in all the principal actions of the Chinese war, for which service he was promoted to the rank of Brevet-major and Lieutenant-colonel, and was also made a C.B. He was created K.C.B. in 1860, and Colonel-commandant of the Portsmouth division of Royal Marines in 1863. He had received the war medal with two clasps, and also the China medal.

CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S). Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cramp, Ague, Consumption, Asthma, Cough, Colds, Bronchitis, Sea Sickness, &c., immediately relieved by a dose of TOWLE'S CHLORODYNE, which is admitted to be a most wonderful and valuable medicine, and preferred by the profession for its known composition and moderate price.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.

Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.
Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay, and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marselles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.

This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle. Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE are in receipt of our usual files of papers from Calcutta to the 21st and from Bombay to the 28th of February.

The war on the North-Eastern frontier, in which the Indian Government has become involved through Mr. Beadon's ill-judged mission to Bhootan, has at last been fairly taken in hand by the Viceroy in Council. It is much to be desired that this most unfortunate embarrassment may bring about the reduction of the powers of the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal within the strict limits of an administrative function. As a subordinate officer, it is absurd that he should possess opportunities for forcing the hand of the Supreme Government, and of imposing upon it a line of conduct opposed to its own expressed policy. It is now obvious, however, that Sir John Lawrence is determined to submit to no more trifling and playing at soldiers—a costly and perilous game, which implies a heavy loss of men and money. The selection of Brigadier-general Tombs to command the expedition shows that fighting in good earnest is meant, and that there is no longer any idea of paying tribute for the occupation of the captured Passes. Another indication of "thoroughness" is the employment of European troops, H.M.'s 55th Regiment recently stationed at Lucknow having arrived at Calcutta on its way to Cooch Behar and Gowhatty. Six engineer officers, including Captain Trevor, Garrison Engineer, Fort William, and Lieuts. Dundas and Pre. have also been ordered up to the scene of hostilities. Two Punjab regiments, the 29th and 30th, have likewise been pushed on to reinforce the expeditionary columns, while No. 3 Battery, 25th Brigade, R.A., is only waiting till its armament is changed before it proceeds in like manner to aid in avenging the recent reverses of the British arms. As the lightest mountain train Armstrong guns weigh 3 cwt. each, it is impossible to use them where mules are the only beasts of burden. A battery of six 3-pounder mountain train guns, weighing only 2 cwt. each, is therefore being fitted out in Fort William, and will be sent forward without delay. And it is manifest that no time must be lost, if the prestige of British prowess is to be maintained among the barbarous peoples beyond our north-eastern frontiers. The evacuation of the post at Dewangiri, exaggerated as it is certain to be by the Bhootiahs, will naturally embolden their neighbours to cast in their lot with them, partly for the sheer love of fighting characteristic of all savages, and partly, perhaps, in the hope of deterring the Feringhees from ever again attempting to penetrate into the mountains. The retreat from Dewangiri might, indeed, be almost called a flight, the guns having been thrown down a ravine, and the wounded abandoned to the mercy of the enemy. As the post was no longer tenable, the Bhootiahs having cut off the supply of water, and stopped the surrounding passes by stockades, Colonel Campbell had no alternative but to steal out under cover of the night and take his chance of getting his enfeebled garrison down into the plains. While the pickets distracted the attention of the enemy by a sharp but desultory fire, the small force crept out from the miserable fort, which under no circumstances could be converted into a stronghold, and sought safety by scrambling down the heights as best they could, every man thinking only of himself. One party of 150 men, however, did keep together, under the command of Captain Macdonald, and Lieutenants Welchman, Griffiths, and Peet, and were thereby enabled to repulse an attack of the Bhootiahs after they had reached the plain country, and to drive them back into the hills at the point of the bayonet. The consequence of these untoward events is, and that General Mulcaster has been superseded, and that General Tombs has been appointed to make short work of an enemy whose intrinsic insignificance should have spared us a war which can never be glorious, but which is becoming disgraceful through the true English mistake of breaking up the force into small detachments—a species of warfare for which the formal discipline of the British army unfits both officers and men.

H.R.H. the Duke of Brabant having completed his tour through Upper India has returned to Calcutta for a few days, previous to his departure for China. During his royal highness's stay at Government-house, a sham fight, in which 6,000 troops were engaged, was "performed" on the Maidan, the battle raging with the greatest fury in the immediate neighbourhood of the Kidderpore Bridge, which was finally captured, after a severe struggle with an obstinate but, fortunately, imaginary foe.

The unfavourable news from Bhootan and the pressure of legislative business have prevented the Viceroy's departure for the Hills at the early date originally intended. It was expected, however, that

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month, and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates fall on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

A French line of mail packets now leaves Marseilles on the 19th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English mail via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

the official exodus would take place about the 25th of the present month.

Sir Hugh Rose was still in Calcutta, and proposed to leave for Madras on the 23rd of March, whence he would proceed to Bombay, and there bid adieu to the East.

Sir William Mansfield arrived at Kurra-chee on the 16th of last month, and after inspecting the different stations in Scinde intended to take up his new command at Simla, after the departure of his predecessor from Bombay. As Sir Robert Napier returns to Europe for six months before assuming the command of the Western army, the duties of that high post will temporarily devolve on General Straubenzie.

The Viceroy has availed himself of the opportunity afforded by Brigadier-general Neville Chamberlain's resignation of the command of the Punjab Irregular Force to issue a General Order in the highest degree eulogistic of that gallant officer's most distinguished career.

Speculation is rife as to the means likely to be adopted by Sir Charles Trevelyan for filling up the anticipated deficit in the revenue accounts. According to some authorities an increase of the salt-tax is contemplated, while others maintain that the income-tax will be nominally repealed, only to be re-imposed a little later in the year. The Indian Daily News, however, asserts that peremptory instructions have been received from the Home Government for its immediate and final extinction.

Small-pox was still very prevalent in Calcutta, the mortality reaching to thirty deaths a day.

We have been requested to state that the Amalgamation Inquiry Committee have removed their office from 13, King-street, to 3a King-street, St. James's-square.

BENGAL.

HONOUR TO THE MARQUIS OF DALHOUSIE.

The finest statue in India was erected to Lord Hardinge twelve years after he had left the country. The late Lord Canning has had three successors, and he is likely to have more before the statue which his admirers talked of adorns the capital. Not till eight years after his resignation of office were those who remembered the almost regal bearing and calmly noble face of the Marquis of Dalhousie gratified by gazing on Steell's effigy, which stands, as the original wished it to do, fronting the statue of Lord Wellesley, in the great vestibule of Government House. But that is not to be the final resting-place of the memorial of either. Both were men whose reputations and services were so pre-eminently public that their statues demand a building of a less private character than the palace which Wellesley himself erected—a place where all classes may at all times visit them, as they visit the sculptures which enshrine the memory of Warren Hastings and Lord Cornwallis, of Lord Hastings and Lord William Bentinck. A surplus of Rs. 97,000 remained after providing for Lord Dalhousie's statue, and to this was added the two funds raised by the admirers of "Havelock, Neill, and Nicholson," and of "Venables," the whole amounting, with subsequent subscriptions and interest, to a lakh and a half of rupees. Besides the two great statues, busts of these heroes of the mutiny and one of Sir James Outram (presented by himself) await a permanent Walhalla. After much difficulty and delay in selecting a proper site, all classes have united in fixing on that portion of Tank-square which fronts the grand staircase of Government-house. Already a temple-like structure, within which the statue of Lord Hastings is concealed, stands there. It will act as a graceful portico to the new building for the Dalhousie Institute, designed by Mr. W. Granville. The hall, which will be neither large nor lofty, while it will not be unworthy of its object, will adorn a square already being improved by such buildings as the new Post-office, Messrs. R. C. Lepage and Co.'s offices, the Agra Bank, and the new buildings about to be erected fronting Writers'-buildings. For the first time everything has conspired to favour a project which ought to be dear to all India. Everything but one—a party of the Calcutta Justices have suddenly discovered that a building of one story, for which no other appropriate site can be found, may obstruct the breeze which the tall houses all round the square already prevent from blowing. The objections seem to be made by that narrow, fussy class who delight in the rhetoric of vestrymen and understand coarse jokes better than the acts of great statesmen. Never was the assumption of a virtuous regard for the interests of the public so baseless. We trust the Governments of India and Bengal will let the "show of hands" at a mail-day meeting of the justices pass unheeded. Lord Dalhousie's memory—if not the objects of the institute—are of more importance in the eyes of the public and the present occupant of his seat and former supporter of his policy than the opinions of a few men dressed in a little brief authority. Let the Viceroy give the necessary order, and gratify the public who are tired of the justices.—Friend of India.

MR. BEADON'S LITTLE WAR.

The local administrations are becoming too strong for the Central Government. The Governors of Madras and Bombay correspond directly with the Secretary of State for India, and the Lieutenant-governors of the Punjab and Bengal secure a reluctant consent to their proposals by a most pertinacious importunity. Twice within two years has the Supreme Government been persuaded against its will into sanctioning two wars, from which nothing could be expected but expense and disaster. Both in the Umbeyla hills and the Bhootan passes the enemy were described by Sir Robert Montgomery and Mr. Beadon as too contemptible to require more than a small force, at a trifling cost, to crush them. By such representations they hoped to obtain the desired sanction. In both cases the Government of India, after resisting their importunity for years, sent a larger force than had been asked; while the Commander-in-Chief would have personally thrown himself into the thick of the fight on the north-west frontier, and magnified the little war into a campaign, which, in the state of Afghanistan at that time, might have lighted up Central Asia. There is this difference, however, between the two little wars—the Punjab Government was accustomed to such adventures—its whole existence had been passed in the exciting work of first subduing the frontier tribes, and then civilising them. Not so the more youthful Government of Bengal. All its past attempts against Kookes, Nagas, and other Indo-Chinese savages, had been as trifling as they were unfortunate, chiefly because it had no military force equal to the extent of the frontier. Moreover, while the Punjab abounded in trained political officers, Bengal could not produce one of better judgment and greater courage than Mr. Ashley Eden, whose humiliation, discussed in every native Court and bazaar throughout India, has done as much to injure our prestige as the disasters of the Cabool expedition. These were the results of a dishonourable policy, and were atoned for by the heroism of the ablest officers that ever served an ungrateful country. That was the effect not so much of a policy as of the incapacity of an individual officer to act on the instincts of an Englishman. His countrymen would fain bury it for ever in the silence of shame.

The events of the past fortnight on the frontier of Bhootan render it imperative that all classes of both the authorities and the public should forget the origin of the war, and devote themselves to its thorough completion. The result of weakly offering the bribe of fifty thousand rupees a year to bring to our feet the treacherous savages we ought to have cut to pieces, has been that the little war, so far from being at an end, has to be begun again. Had the Bhootens been a little wiser they would have continued to pursue their clever policy of passive resistance, and have allowed our troops to withdraw, and our police, surveyors and officials to take their place. They would have postponed their active resistance a few months longer. But, fortunately for us, they did not wait beyond the close of January. While the Bhooten Durbar have been talking of peace, attracted by the glitter of the promised rupees, Toungsou Penlow has been collecting his forces among the clansmen of his own province, and preparing to vindicate his treatment of our mission. On the 26th of February the 3rd Ghoorkas, who hold the entrenchment which commands the Buxa pass, repulsed the first attack. A vain attempt to surprise our garrison at Chamoorchee was made about the same time. On the 29th a large force attacked the detachment at Dewangiri, and though they were driven off with severe loss Lieutenant Urquhart, of the Engineers, and five sepoy fell on our side, while Lieutenant Story and thirty-eight sepoy were wounded by arrows. On the 27th the strong stockade which we hold in the Bala pass, a thousand feet above the sea, was attacked before daylight, and a shower of arrows kept up for nearly two hours, which caused a loss of one man killed and four wounded. Two days after we sent a party to disturb the enemy, who were stockading themselves on a height which commands our position, when one man was killed, and two officers and six men wounded. With a stronger force, on 4th February, Col. Watson attempted to drive them from their post, but in vain. The last telegram informs us that Lieut. Millett, of the 11th N.I., was killed, and Lieut. Cameron, R.A., with several sepoy, wounded. There is some confusion as to the different attacks, but these seem to be the facts, so far as is yet known. Small reinforcements of men, and two guns belonging to Cooch Behar, are now on their way.

Fortunately, there are still four months of good fighting weather before the rains compel our force to leave Bhootan. It is time to decide on a vigorous policy. We must march to the "capital," and exact, on the scene of our envoy's disgrace, reparation for the insults of the past ninety years, as well as security for that future good behaviour which the offer of money has so miserably failed to produce.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE DUC DE BRABANT.—H.R.H. the Duc de Brabant is still a guest at Government House. A grand review was given in his honour on Saturday afternoon, Feb. 19, at which nearly 6,000 men were on the ground, under the command of H.E. the Commander-in-Chief. The Duke's health is still delicate, but is said to have improved by his travels, and a still further improvement is expected from his trip to China, for which he leaves in a few days. His Royal Highness has made himself extremely popular by the winning affability of his manner to all who have been presented to him, and has evidently taken a great interest in all financial and statistical questions connected with this vast empire.

SIR NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN.—Major General Sir Neville Chamberlain having tendered his resignation of the command of the Punjab Irregular Force, the Viceroy has issued the following complimentary, but well-deserved general order, in honour of one of India's gallantest soldiers:—"Major General Sir Neville Chamberlain, now on sick leave in Europe, having tendered his resignation of the command of the Punjab Irregular Force, the Right Honourable the Viceroy and Governor General in Council considers it his duty to place on record that the Government of India has the highest appreciation of the services of this distinguished officer. Sir Neville Chamberlain, having served with honour during the two campaigns in Afghanistan, in the Gwalior campaign of 1843, and in the second Sikh war, was, in the year 1855, appointed to the command of the Punjab Irregular Force, since which period he has most successfully conducted the arrangements for the protection of the border occupied by that force, while he has ably commanded several important expeditions into the adjacent mountains, concluding with that to Umheyala in 1863, when he was severely wounded, and compelled to return to Europe. Nor must it be forgotten that during the mutiny, when a large portion of the Punjab Irregular Force proceeded to Hindoostan, Sir Neville Chamberlain was, in the first instance, placed in command of the movable column for the security of the Punjab, and, subsequently, was called to the important post of Adjutant-general of the army at Delhi, in which capacity he was highly distinguished, and received a most severe wound. Not only was Sir Neville Chamberlain often distinguished on field service during his command of the Punjab irregular force, but he strenuously and successfully exerted himself for the discipline, efficiency, and welfare of the troops under his command; he cordially co-operated with the Civil Government in its effort for the benefit of the people, and he maintained a friendly intercourse with the principal natives in the neighbourhood of his command. In all these particulars he set an admirable example to all under his control, an example which the Government would desire to see followed by all British officers in India. The Viceroy and Governor-general in council deeply regrets the retirement of such an officer from his command, but trusts he may again have the opportunity of serving his Sovereign in other capacities, when his health, shattered by numerous wounds and arduous service, has recovered under the influence of rest in his native country."

PROPOSED INCREASE OF THE SALT TAX.—The substitute for the income-tax most favoured at present by Sir C. Trevelyan and the wealthy zemindars of Bengal, is an increased taxation of the salt duty. We freely admit that the cost of salt, as compared with the rise in prices, is much less than it was when Mr. Wilson so largely raised the duty some years ago. It is, moreover, the only appreciable tax paid by the masses of the peasantry, besides that on land. To a slight extent the duty on this necessary of life might be raised without oppression; but it was never so dangerous to meddle with it as at present. Parliament is sitting, and last session the Hon. A. Kinnaird gave notice of a motion intended to expose the oppressive nature of this impost. Nothing can be more ignorant than the hatred of the philanthropic party to this tax, but this is the very reason for the probable success of any motion on the question; once, by the narrowest majority, the Government of India escaped an order to give it up. We are convinced that order will be sent if we do not follow the good policy—quies non movere.

THE GANGES CANAL has cost upwards of two millions sterling. Nearly another million must be spent on its head works because the formula on which it was constructed was borrowed, without inquiry, from the smaller canals with which we were then familiar. Sir Arthur Cotton fairly deserves some of the credit which he claims for the success of the great Godavery and Kistna irrigation works. In a controversy which he has been conducting in the London papers he asserts that the Ganges canal would have cost only half of the actual expenditure, and would have been returning twenty per cent. now, if the head had been made below the Solani, and the excavation had been so carried out as not to carry all the water below the surface. There is much truth in this, but it is hardly fair, when discussing the question of profits, to compare an irrigation canal which leads water to districts hitherto completely desert and yielding no land tax at all, with one which passes through fields previously cultivated and giving a considerable revenue. Projects for making a new cut parallel for some distance with the present Ganges Canal, and for remedying the rapidity of the fall of water at the head, have been drawn up. They will be immediately carried out at a cost of nearly eighty lakhs of rupees—a course which is the most economical now left.—Friend of India.

HAIL-STORM.—Nowgong, in Bundelcund, was visited by a severe hail-storm on the evening of the 7th February. In a quarter of an hour the station was clothed in a mantle of white, as if it had suddenly been transferred to Europe in winter. The crops in the track of the storm have been entirely ruined, for the hail-stones were very large; the gardens in cantonment were swept clean, and the trees half-stripped of leaves. The mango blossoms have perished.

COLONEL W. W. TURNER, C.B., of H.M.'s 97th Regiment, who has been brought upon the list of Brigadier-generals, will be appointed to the Saugor command. This appointment gives Lieut.-colonel Gloster, promoted from H.M.'s 38th Regiment, the command of H.M.'s 97th, at Saugor.

SIR HUGH ROSE is expected to leave Calcutta about the 23rd March, from which date he will resign his command. Sir Hugh is to visit Madras and Bombay en route, embarking for England from the latter port.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR BHOOTAN.—The Commissariat Department are as busy as the others in preparing and despatching supplies for the troops about to reinforce our army in the field. Major J. Willes, Deputy Commissary General at the Presidency, who had gone on his tour of inspection up-country, was recalled by telegraphic message before he had got beyond Benares, and is now occupied with the Commissariat arrangements for the troops going to the seat of war. The Ordnance Department are also busy in the Arsenal of Fort William; and guns and ammunition are being got ready for despatch to the frontier. Ten mortars, two nine-pounder guns, and two twenty-four-pounder howitzers, with a large supply of ammunition, leave Calcutta by the first river steamer for Assam; and further reinforcements and supplies will follow by every opportunity. A battery of six Armstrong guns has just arrived at the seat of war from the Allahabad Arsenal; and it is probable that a battery may also move up from Dinapore should necessity arise. We suppose that this time European artillery men will be employed, as it is probable that the men of the Eurasian battery who lost their guns at Dewangiri are seriously "demoralised" by this time.—Englishman.

MEDICAL SERVICE FUNDS.—The doctors, having terminated their differences with Sir Charles Wood, are now quarrelling with the Service Funds, which they represent as grasping donations and subscriptions for them, not in accordance with the pay which they receive as belonging to their rank, but in accordance with the pay which they ought to receive. A Civil Assistant Surgeon at one of the Eastern stations, being mulcted by the Military Fund as a Captain, represented to the Directors that the pay of his appointment is Rs. 400 a month, with Rs. 70 in addition, the Colonial allowance of a Subaltern, and especially mentioned as such. To this the Directors reply that his rank is that of a Captain, and that the Government ought to pay him as such; but they keep fast hold of the contributions which they have levied from him at the higher rate and order all others to be enforced at that rate for the future. This is arbitrary enough, but we doubt its justice.—Englishman.

MEER OF KOTAH.—It will be in the recollection of our readers that the Meer of Kotah some time ago attempted to build a fort after he had been informed that the Government would not allow him to do so, and that on his recusancy the fort was razed to the ground, and the land confiscated. The Meer would seem to have turned his energies, roughly directed from one pursuit, to another equally objectionable. Thinking, no doubt, the office of chieftain requires the exercise of a real governing power in him who holds it, and that unless he keeps his name and fame before their eyes his subjects might fancy he was but a myth, he has undertaken what Sir Herbert Edwards would call a crescentade against his Hindoo subjects, by imposing certain taxes relating to their religious ceremonies, which have, as a matter of course, produced considerable excitement and discontent. The Government have, therefore, been obliged to interfere to prevent the consequences, and have intimated to the Meer their displeasure at his recent proceedings.

SECOND CAPTAIN C. W. WILSON, of the C (Major Francis's) Battery of Royal Artillery, at Barrackpore, has been ordered to proceed with the utmost possible despatch to Assam, for employment with an Armstrong Battery at the seat of war in the Bhootan Doora.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL TOMBS has been appointed to the command of the Bhootan expedition, and in all probability the affair will have to be commenced de novo.

SIR W. MANSFIELD is expected to reach Simla about the end of March, when he will take over the command of the Indian army from Sir Hugh Rose.

CAPTAIN J. U. CHAMPAIN, of the Royal, late Bengal, Engineers, succeeds to the appointment of superintendent of the great telegraphic line from England to India, via Persia, vacant by the death, at Constantinople, of Lieutenant-colonel P. Stewart. Captain Champain has hitherto acted as superintendent of the Persian portion of the line, and assumed charge of the whole line on hearing of Lieut.-colonel Stewart's death. Though a young officer, Captain Champain is eminently qualified for the appointment in question, and his service in India gives him a speciality of aptitude, as regards Orientals and their languages, which could not be found in an engineer officer sent from England.

THE FOLLOWING REDUCTIONS IN THE ARTILLERY are to be carried out at once. No. 6 Battery 25th Brigade, being the junior battery in Bengal, to be reduced on its return from field service. E, F and G. batteries 22nd Brigade, being the junior field batteries in Bengal, to be reduced, to be converted into Garrison Batteries. The E, F and G Field Batteries will be designated in future as Nos. 5, 6 and 7 batteries, 22nd Brigade. The Supernumerary Non-Commissioned Officers and Artificers will be transferred to other batteries and be gradually absorbed, but, with the sanction of Government, they will receive the pay and allowances of their present ranks till the absorption has been completed.—Hurkaru.

SIR GEORGE COUPER has compiled a very excellent pamphlet, being an abstract of the Law of Evidence for the guidance of the officers in Oude. The contents are taken mostly from Phillip's work, with additions here and there, to suit the circumstances of the country. There is no doubt but that the compilation will be of great use to judicial officers whose knowledge of the Law of Evidence may be limited. The shortcomings of officials in this respect have been so palpable, as to have induced the judicial commissioner to supply an omission which has all along been felt.

H.M.'s 55TH REGIMENT, whose head-quarters are at Lucknow, with three Companies detached to Berhampore, has been ordered down towards the seat of war on the Eastern frontier. The head-quarters and right wing of the 55th will go to Cooch Behar for the present, and the left wing to Dooabree. The three companies at Berhampore will be relieved by three companies of H.M.'s 27th Inniskillings, ordered to Hazareebagh.

THE RAJAH OF KHYRIM.—His Excellency the Viceroy has granted to Ob Raban Sing, Rajah of Khyrim, subject to the confirmation of the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India, a pensionary allowance of Rs. 850 per month, for the services he had rendered to the British Government during the late Cossya and Jyntee rebellion. On the chief's death the allowance will descend to his son and successor on the Guddee, and on the demise of the latter it will lapse to the State.

MEDICAL COLLEGE.—The Government contemplate the formation of a higher class in the Medical College, for Bengali students unacquainted with English, the present vernacular class being retained, as the Bengal Native Apothecary Class, whilst the new class is to be called the Vernacular Licentiate Class. The matter has been referred to the College Council for report.

RIOT AT RAWUL PINDEE.—A serious disturbance lately took place between some men of the Cashmere Raja's and the Sirdah's Afghans at Rawul Pindie, which ended in the discomfiture of the former, three of whom were killed before the British could interfere.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—The Pioneer states that Lieut. J. E. Tripp, the popular quartermaster of the 2nd Battalion of her Majesty's 12th Regiment, was killed on the 13th Feb., by a fall from his horse at Seetapore.

SALE OF WASTE LANDS IN ASSAM.—The following are the results of the sale of waste lands which took place at Debroghur on the 2nd February:—

625 acres, at Rs. 11 0 per acre.
625 do.,	"	2 8 "
500 do.,	"	2 8 "
125 do.,	"	4 1 "
1,500 do.,	"	9 0 "
3,000 do.,	"	2 8 "

OFFICIAL MOVEMENTS.—Mr. Trotter, the Behar Opium Agent, has resigned the service; Mr. Toogood, Judge of Bheerboom, goes home on leave, and will probably be succeeded by Mr. Jenkins; Mr. Brotherib has also taken three months' leave, leaving Mr. A. Hope in charge of his office; Mr. Dodson, Judge of Mymensing, has applied for leave, his place to be filled by Mr. F. B. Simson, now acting as Commissioner of Cuttack.

MILITARY CHANGES.—In consequence of Colonel Dickens' promotion to the office of secretary in the P. W. D. to the Government of India, Colonel Maxwell will succeed him as chief engineer, Central Provinces. Colonel Beadle will be succeeded in the post of secretary to the Government of Bengal, P. W. D., by Major Chesney. Captain Hyde goes home almost immediately, and will be succeeded by Captain Trevor, of the controller's department.

ARCHERY AT MEERUT.—On the 16th February a grand archery meeting was held on the station cricket ground. The Meerut Cricket Club offered prizes for the Toxophilite Society to contest for. The first prize was won by Mrs. Jenkins, and the second by Miss Drummond. A band played some favourite airs, and there was a large attendance of spectators.

MR. G. OSBORNE, the Sub-deputy Opium Agent of Goruckpore, applied to the Lieut.-governor of Bengal to be permitted to retire from the service of Government on the pension of his rank. Mr. Osborne's salary is Rs. 900 per month, and as he has served the State for upwards of thirty years he has asked for a moiety of his salary to be granted as a pension.

CASHMERE.—There has been a miniature coup d'état at Cashmere, in consequence of some difference of opinion having arisen between the Maharajah Rumbheer Singh and Rajah Shere Ahmed Khan, which has culminated in the expulsion of the latter from Jummoo. The Rajah thereupon sought the assistance of the British Government, which was refused.

MAJOR GENERAL LORD GEORGE PAGET being gazetted for England, Major General Becher, C. B., will proceed immediately to relieve him in the command of the Sirhind Division. Colonel Williams, with the rank of Major General, comes out to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Lord Paget, and will assume command of the Oudh Division on arrival. Brigadier General Haly, C. B., gets the command of the Lahore Division, in succession to Major General Cunynghame, who goes home on furlough, or, as it is said, retires from the service.

NORTHERN INDIA RIFLE ASSOCIATION.—Northern India gives name to a Rifle Association which had its competition recently. The financial and general position of the association has now been made known; and in the report the association is said to be in an extremely flourishing condition, having a balance in its favour at the end of the year of Rs. 3,000. The total number of competitors in all the matches was 1,218, and the total amount of the entrances Rs. 3,613. The total cost of prizes borne by the association was 2,700 rupees.

H.M.'s 48TH REGIMENT.—The five companies of H.M.'s 48th Regiment, which were detained behind at Darjeeling, embarked on the 9th of February, on the ship Winchester, for England, under the command of Major J. R. Lovett, of the Regiment.

AFFRAY IN MUNEEPOOREE.—On the 6th February a party of one hundred and fifty Muneepoorees, under a proscribed chief living in Cachar, made an attempt to invade Muneepooree. The Cachar police, however, attacked them and kept them in check for some hours near the Gheree river, till a party of the 39th N.I., under Lieutenant Williams, arrived to their assistance. The Muneepoorees were then attacked and dispersed, with a loss of eleven killed, a large number of wounded, two iron guns, muskets, ammunition, standards, &c. Our loss was one sepoy, and one constable wounded. The conduct of the police in this instance and at Dewangiri shows that they are not so useless as the enemies of the new system once tried to make out, and that their drill and discipline have been at last found useful.

THE INDIAN MINTS.—The following statement of the silver received and coined in the Mints of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, in December, 1864, is published for general information:—

	BULLION OR COIN RECEIVED.		Coined.
	Govt.	Merchants.
Bombay ...	3	—	40,98,867
Madras ...	5,365	2,38,214	8,25,000
Calcutta ...	74,300	9,78,872	41,01,140

MR. W. J. ALLEN, of the Board of Revenue, has applied for permission to retire from the Civil Service on the annuity of his rank.

OUDE COMMISSION.—Five civil servants of standing from the North-western Provinces are to be sent to Oudh, where they will hold the appointment of Deputy-commissioners of Districts. The paucity of experienced and efficient officers in that province is said to be great. Dr. Corbyn, who stands appointed to the Inspector-generalship of Prisons in Oudh, had not arrived in Lucknow, and the consequence of his absence was much felt in the management of the Central Jail.

ROORKEE.—This station is, by the departure of H.M.'s 20th, again left without troops. There are conflicting reports as to whether it is to be given up altogether as a military station. The Governor-General is said to be for abandoning it, while Sir Hugh Rose would enlarge and make a fine depot of it.

MAHOMED SHUFFEE.—It was a mistake to say that Mahomed Shuffee or any of his accomplices had received pardon. Mahomed Shuffee turned Queen's evidence and craved pardon; but no promise was made to him or to any of the others implicated in the Patna conspiracy. What may be done for them hereafter depends on the issue of Ahmedoolah's trial at Patna.

MR. BAINS, C.E.—The committee of the Punjab Exhibition have presented their architect, Mr. Bains, with a silver tea service, as a mark of their appreciation of his services and assistance. This is as it should be; they do things better in the Punjab than in Bengal.

THE NEW COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—By the death of Sir W. Tuyl, his Excellency Sir William Mansfield has been promoted to the brevet rank of Lieut.-general. His Excellency left Bombay on board the Dalhousie, on the morning of the 13th Feb., for Kurrachee.

THE REPORTED DISAPPEARANCE OF ONE OF THE MALDIVES ISLANDS.—A paragraph has been going the round of the papers that one of the islands of the Maldivé group has disappeared, and that the "Rajah of Cannanore" has thereby sustained a loss of some three lacs of rupees. It would appear that the discovery of this remarkable phenomenon was made by some fishermen belonging to the island who went out in the morning, and looked in vain for their homes in the evening. We have made particular inquiries on the subject, and find that the tale is wholly without foundation. In the first place, the Maldives are under the control of their own independent petty chiefs, and not subject to the "Rajah," or, more properly speaking, the Begum of Cannanore.

There is an annual exchange of commodities between the Maldives and this market, and several small craft have arrived from those islands within the last three or four months; but they have not in the most indirect manner mentioned the disaster alluded to. The Laccadive group, including Minicoy, is under the Begum of Cannanore, subject to the control of the Collectorate of Malabar; and there appears to be some trade between the islands and the Malabar Coast, the latter furnishing condiments and rice, in exchange for cowries, coir, cocoanuts, and tortoise shells. The islanders at best derive but a precarious subsistence, and on some occasions when their supplies failed the Indian Government have frequently forwarded supplies of rice and other provisions. To their credit it must be said that whenever our seamen have been thrown amongst them by the disasters of shipwreck they have always acted in a friendly and inoffensive manner towards them, frequently assisting them with their native boats with the means of transport to the coast. If the submergence of one of the latter islands was the event referred to it is surprising that no private or official report has ever reached the authorities on this coast.—Western Star.

MASULIPATAM.—An official paper has been published, being a report by the Zillah Surgeon at Masulipatam, in reference to the probable effects, immediate and remote, of the late inundation on the health of the inhabitants. The calamity, it is estimated, left about sixty thousand carcasses of men and animals, some of which were burned, and others were left to putrify and to contaminate the atmosphere. Besides the danger arising to public health from this cause, another source of danger occurred in the contamination of the water in the wells, the whole country in the neighbourhood of Masulipatam having been flooded. Pure water has already been introduced into the town from the river, but the pathetic and perhaps prejudiced natives can scarcely be lifted out of the rut of their conventionality and habit, and prefer the unwholesome and brackish well water to the purer beverage from the river. The result has been a general prevalence of diarrhoea, approaching to dysentery, among them, and the report holds out the ominous anticipation that these maladies and fever will prevail extensively for many months to come. The European families have been advised to leave the station, and the prisoners now on their way to it have been ordered not to proceed to the town. A second Assistant Surgeon and such a number of medical subordinates as may be required are also ordered to be appointed to meet the outbreak of the epidemic. Another result of the submergence of the ground under the wave has been the total destruction of vegetation around Masulipatam, and the impregnation of the soil with salt to the depth of four or five feet. The most liberal and rigorous irrigation with fresh water will be necessary to purge the soil of the alien element which it has received.

POSTAL IRREGULARITIES.—One of the thorns in the flesh of the European portion of Indian society is the condition of the postal service, and the irregularities in a district of the Madras Presidency are about to be exposed in the trial of the late deputy-postmaster of Wellington and Coimbatore, who has been charged with fraudulently secreting several hundreds of letters. The magistrate before whom the case was originally brought has deemed it of such public importance that it has been sent for trial at the next sessions.

THE RAJAH OF MYSORE.—The settlement of the debts of the Rajah of Mysore has at length been brought to a highly satisfactory conclusion. The inquiry has been most judiciously conducted by Captain Elliot, assisted by Dr. Campbell, and at his Highness's request the sum of Rs. 10,000 has been presented to those gentlemen as an acknowledgment of their services.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—We regret to learn from Secunderabad of the attempted suicide of Lieutenant H. Adams, of H.M.'s 18th Royal Irish Regiment. The unfortunate gentleman cut his throat with a razor, and, although the wound is dangerous, hopes are entertained of his recovery. He had been on the sick list for some time, and it is thought that his lengthened illness preyed upon his mind, and led him to make an attempt upon his life. Lieut. Adams has been in the army since 1855, and has served a considerable portion of the time in India, is one of the senior lieutenants in the 18th Regiment, and being very popular, the event has caused a melancholy feeling to pervade both the regiment and the station.—Hurkaru, Feb. 20.

MODEL FARM.—A correspondence has taken place between the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of Madras and the Madras Board of Revenue, with reference to the establishment of a model farm, with a view to give an example of what may be called scientific farming to the natives. Such an idea involves agriculture, artificial irrigation, deep ploughing and the thorough cleaning of land, the growth of green crops to feed cattle during the hot months, and the improvement of stock. The introduction of green crops for such purposes will meet an evil incident to the presidency under present circumstances; as the Madras cattle, towards the beginning of the rainy season, are in such a miserable state of inanition for want of food, that they are totally unfit for the work required of them, being too weak even to draw the smallest ploughs which the Government of Madras has lately imported from England. It is expected that the Government will grant several hundred acres for the experiment, and as the plan coincides with Sir William Denison's scheme for the introduction of English implements of agriculture among the natives, there can be little doubt that the expectation will be realised.

LICENSE TAX ON TRADES AND PROFESSIONS.—The scheme of a license-tax on all trades and professions, which Mr. Cassels proposes (we presume at the suggestion of Government) to make part of the new Municipal Bill for Bombay, and the amended section relative to the octroi, are obviously intended to provide the bench of justices with the means of abolishing the town duties before the end of the year 1867. In a great city like Bombay the objections to a license-tax lose their force, for there is no doubt that it can be collected at a small cost and without annoyance to the people; while the productiveness of this new form of direct taxation will be such as to relieve the community from the pressure of these impolitic and oppressive duties on the chief necessities of life, which have aggravated the sufferings of the poor during the recent period of high prices in Bombay. According to the census taken last year there are more than 100,000 families in the island; and, supposing only half these families to come within the scope of the license-tax, and dividing them among the different classes in due proportion, it may fairly be expected that the tax will yield a revenue for the municipality of fully 8 lacs of rupees, or say double the present revenue from town duties.—Bombay Gazette.

RECLAMATION WORKS.—Tenders are invited for completing the reclamation between the Wellington Pier and Arthur Bunder; and we have reason to believe that tenders will soon be out also for reclaiming Moodee Bay. These works, it is to be hoped, will now be pushed on vigorously, the means for carrying on the same having been sanctioned by the Supreme Government.

THE SHAMJEE FAIR, KATTIAWAR.—The fair was held between the 9th and 25th of November last, and the value of the cattle and merchandise brought to it for sale is stated at Rs. 21,18,854. The sales effected amounted to Rs. 28,86,891, leaving goods to the value of Rs. 63,1,963 unsold. A table of the goods brought to, and sales effected at, the same fair for the past ten years accompanies the report, and from this statement it appears that the sales at this fair exceed by a very large amount those of any other year in the table. Chintzes and piece goods seem to have been a drug in the fair, as a very large quantity of these goods remained unsold at the close; the report states that "this state of things is owing to the unsettled state of the cotton market at the time." The goods sold in this department, it seems, did not reach anything like the prices expected, and sales were generally effected at a loss. The accommodation at the fair has, according to the report, been increased by the Maharaj of Edur, who has built, during the past year, eighty-three new shops, and intends to build one hundred more before the next fair is held. It is gratifying to find that the fair passed off without any disturbance of any kind, and without any case of robbery or violence occurring within a circuit of twelve miles from it. The roads leading to the fair have not been made as good as they might be, and the political agent has represented the matter to the Maharaj, so it is probable that before the next fair is held they will be in a better state.

GRANT TO PROFESSOR HAUG.—The Bombay Government have sanctioned a grant of Rs. 5,000 to Professor Haug on his leaving the service, both as a gratuity for his distinguished services in the encouragement of Sanscrit literature, and by way of compensation for the low amount of his salary, which has been less than that of the other professors. He obtains also a free passage to Europe, of which, however, he will not avail himself until the beginning of next year. Of course these grants are made subject to the consent of Sir Charles Trevelyan, which, it is to be hoped, will hardly be withheld in this instance; but it is impossible to say what he may or may not do. Not long ago the Bombay Government applied for Rs. 6,000 a-year for the education of the Portuguese in this Presidency, and the Government of India refused it.

THE RECENT ATTEMPT TO UPSET A TRAIN.—The exertions of the local authorities of the district, aided by the Commissioner of Police of Bombay, to find out the miscreants who lately made the diabolical attempt to overturn a railway passenger train on the Egutpoora line have partially been crowned with success, as four men have been apprehended at Nipar, two of whom have volunteered to confess all, if permitted to turn Queen's evidence; but as there is a great deal of corroborative testimony also available, their offer has not been accepted by the authorities. In the event, however, of the corroborative evidence not being sufficient to procure their conviction, it is intended to permit one of the volunteers to turn Queen's evidence.

BRITISH INDIA STEAM COMPANY.—Arrangements have been concluded between the directors of the British India and Messageries Imperiales Steam Navigation Companies for the interchange at Galle of passengers and cargo. By these arrangements passengers and goods may be at once shipped from any of the ports within the extensive range of the British India Steam Navigation Company's coasting lines direct to Singapore, Saigon, Batavia, Hong Kong, and Shanghai. The agreement comes into effect with the steamer Bushie, leaving Bombay on 1st March.

CLERICAL APPOINTMENTS.—Consequent on the retirement from the service of the Rev. R. F. Colvin, the Rev. M. M. Ross is appointed senior chaplain Church of Scotland in Bombay, and the Rev. D. Macpherson, chaplain.

BAR APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. W. J. Orr, who proceeded to Europe by the mail steamer of the 14th February, on leave on private affairs for six months, is succeeded by Mr. J. J. Curnin as acting Clerk to the Chief Justice, Sealer of the High Court, Commissioner and Clerk to the Insolvent Debtors' Court, &c. It is more than probable that Mr. Orr will not take up his appointments on the expiration of his leave, it being expected that a certain high functionary of the court will, about that time, retire on pension, which will leave a highly lucrative appointment open, which, it is believed, will be given to the fortunate nephew of our learned Chief Justice.

SCHOOL OF ART.—His Excellency the Governor paid his visit to Mr. Rainford, at his studio in the School of Art on Feb. 20, and inspected with much interest the portraits on which that accomplished artist is now engaged. A commission has been given to Mr. Rainford to paint portraits of Sir Bartle and Lady Frere for the Bombay Exhibition of 1866. After leaving the studio his Excellency went over the School of Art, looking at the works of the students and expressing much pleasure at the visible results of the progress made by them under the efficient superintendence of Mr. Terry.

THE BHEELS.—It is reported that the Bheels are more than usually troublesome this year. They have recently committed many outrages upon Scindiah's subjects. Their attacks are mostly made at night. They have been particularly troublesome in the Amjherra district, to which place the Gwalior durbar has despatched a body of troops, cavalry and infantry, for the protection of the inhabitants. In order to punish the robbers, and to do so effectually, the British authorities have requested the Sir-Soubah of Malwa to co-operate in this movement. The Bheels will thus be placed between two fires, and will probably have a rather severe lesson administered to them.

PROPOSED STOCK EXCHANGE BUILDING.—We are informed that an offer of eight lakhs of rupees has been made and refused for the building at present occupied by the Bank of Bombay and belonging to the Bombay Presidency Bank. It is reported that the parties who have made this offer contemplated to use the building for a stock-exchange, for which its spacious ground-floor seems well adapted. If this plan is carried out, the public may hope to be allowed again a free passage through Meadow Street, which is at present held in a state of siege by the share-brokers.

DEATH OF JUDGE WALTER.—We regret to have to announce the death of Mr. Charles Walter, of the Bombay Civil Service, acting session judge and agent for sirdars in the Deccan. Mr. Walter was an amiable man and an upright judge; his death is very generally deplored, and the State will feel his loss. His remains were interred on Friday afternoon, attended by a large concourse of friends who respected him in life and honoured him in death.—Deccan Herald, Feb. 27.

THE JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT of the Bombay Secretariat is shortly to be amalgamated with the Political and Secret departments, when several of the assistants in the former who are entitled will retire on their pensions. It is believed that Mr. P. Ryan, the present assistant secretary in the last-named department, will have the whole of the establishment placed under his superintendence, and will of course be allowed a proportionally increased salary.

SIR CHARLES VAN STRAUBENZEE has arrived in Bombay from Guzerat, and proceeds hence to Poona to take up his appointment as Acting Commander-in-Chief on the 10th of March. Sir Charles's military secretary will, we understand, be his nephew, Captain Van Straubenzee.

MR. CHAPMAN succeeds Mr. Ravenscroft as Secretary to Government in the Revenue, Political, and General Departments.

LIEUT. COL. KENNEDY has been appointed acting Secretary to Government in the railway department, in addition to his other duties; and Lieut. Col. de Lisle, Acting Consulting Engineer in the same department, during the absence on leave of Col. Rivers; Lieut. Merriman, R.E., has also been appointed Deputy Consulting Engineer Railway Department. It is generally believed that Col. Rivers will go home at the expiration of his present leave.

NATIVE LIBERALITY.—A member of the Wadia family has placed at the disposal of Government Rs. 25,000 for the purpose of causing a charitable dispensary to be erected at Tanna, in the memory of his grandfather, Mr. Cursetjee Rustomjee Wadia.

MR. CHAPMAN, Collector of Sattara, has been appointed Secretary to Government in the Revenue, Financial, and General Departments; the Governor's Private Secretary, Mr. J. R. Arthur, going to Sattara as Acting Collector.

BANK MANAGERS.—It is a curious fact connected with the recent commercial revolution in Bombay that out of twenty-one Banks established here, fourteen, or exactly two-thirds of them, have changed their managers within the last four or five months.

ELPHINSTONE LAND COMPANY.—The full amount realised by the auction sale of the 3,600 new shares of the Elphinstone Land and Press Company on Tuesday (21st February) was Rs. 8,158,875, which gives a premium of about Rs. 2,266½ on each share.

THE SHIP "WILLIAM STEVENSON" was submitted for sale by public auction by Messrs. Crawford and Co. on the 20th February, and was purchased by Mr. Cadurbhoy Alladin, Borah, for Rs. 12,000.

MR. GEORGE INVERARITY, Commissioner of Customs, intends shortly to proceed to England. Mr. Hadow, the Collector and Magistrate of Poona, will succeed him.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, March 27, 1865.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.

THE telegrams lately received from Bombay and Calcutta tend to show that it is quite possible for intelligence of a spasmodic character to travel too quickly. It may be urged on the other side that the news from America, which has exercised such a depressing influence upon the Indian markets, must have reached those Presidencies a few weeks later, and that the sole difference is merely a question of time. But this is taking a very hasty and superficial view of the point at issue. In the latter case something more than the naked announcement of the fact would have been offered as a guide to speculators. They would have known the causes that brought about each particular contingency, and would thus be in a position to reason with some degree of confidence on the probable future result. But telegraphic information must ever be of the most meagre kind, and is quite as likely to lead to a wrong conclusion as to a right one. A comparative anatomist, indeed, may be able to predicate from the examination of a single bone not only the entire structure but also the habits of the animal to which it belongs. But in political and commercial calculations so many disturbing causes have to be taken into account, that the longest and most sagacious experience is oftentimes as much at fault as a gambler would be who had never studied the doctrine of chances. At this moment, for instance, the telegraphic report of a great Federal or Confederate victory would depress or stimulate the Indian markets to a degree far beyond the intrinsic value of the event itself. In the one case holders of cotton goods would be in despair, in the other they would be exalted to the seventh heaven; whereas, if they knew all the circumstances of the case, they would abide the issue with a calm indifference. The ultimate effect of telegraphic communication will be the restriction of all the minor firms to bonâ fide agency business, and so far it will be productive of much good. Now and again a small capitalist, who should rather have been a professional gamester than a sedate merchant, may realise a fortune by "going in for double or quits," but it will be that he may have a larger sum to lose at the next cast of the dice. Even the largest capitalists will require to exercise no ordinary caution, for their ablest calculations may be baffled by the slightest stupidity, or carelessness, on the part of a signaller. There will be times, of course, when a telegraphic message may be the means of averting otherwise inevitable ruin; but, so far as the ordinary routine of business is concerned, it may be questioned if the inconveniences arising from such frequent and imperfect correspondence will not more than counterbalance its advantages.

From a military and political point of view, so long as tranquillity prevails in the countries traversed by the line, it is difficult to overrate the importance of such immediate communication, unless, indeed, it be abused to the extent of rendering the Viceroy and the Commander-in-Chief the mere puppets of the Home authorities. The misfortune, however, is, that when the telegraph will be the most needed, as in the event of a Continental war in Europe, or of another great rebellion in India, the wires are certain to be cut, or communication will be interrupted in some other way. In the meanwhile it is an extraordinary feat of science and enterprise, and is immensely creditable to the engineers, through whose intelligence and perseverance it has been constructed. Of its value as an investment it were premature to speak.

DOING THINGS BY HALVES.

THERE is nothing so bad as doing things by halves. If we are to be wrong, let us be greatly wrong, and stick to it. A highwayman, even with blood on his hands, is a far more interesting personage than an "area sneak," and will always command a certain degree of sympathy. The people of these islands do not seem to understand this social axiom. It is true they have done their share in the way of plundering and despoiling on a large scale, but they don't stick to what they have done. They are always doing things by halves. They will lop off the members of a State or Potentate without the slightest hesitation, but no sooner are the scissors pointed at the hair than straightway they are seized with remorse, and protest against the cruelty of putting the sufferer to inconvenience. The French manage these matters far better than we do. With infinite grace and agility they throw a cloak—call it religion, civilisation, honour, or what you will—over the eyes of the furious and still struggling victim, and then proceed to cut its throat with perfect composure and self-complacency. They may be indifferent colonisers, but they are adepts at conquest. They have, indeed, an idée, just as we have a "mission," to sanctify homicide and spoliation, but they never allow that idée to be anything more than an excuse for the benefit of outside barbarians, and would laugh to scorn the notion that they themselves were in any way bound by it, or that they need be at all embarrassed by the necessity of acting consistently with their published programme. Least of all would they dream of planting a white moss-rose tree at the head of every grave they had dug and helped to fill. Not that they are deficient in sentimentality, but they take care to preserve their sentiment in its essential form, and never suffer it to be precipitated in the form of moral platitudes and a snivelling remorse. In India they would have acted as the Norman Conqueror did in England, or as they themselves have done in Algeria. They would have had operas, cafés, and Champs Elysées in every city in the Peninsula. Shahs, shahzadehs, nawabs, and rajahs would have been taught dominoes and billiards by the best players in Paris, and would all have been decorated with the ribbon of the Legion of Honour. If any one proved troublesome he would have been interné in some petty town in the south of France, until he recognised the grandeur of French ideas when supported by French bayonets. Certainly nobody would ever have heard of the wrong done to the descendant of an upstart noble in granting him an annual allowance of 375,000 francs to spend as he pleased, and he might have considered himself fortunate if he received the third part of such a handsome annuity. But the English career in India has been one huge sham from beginning to end. From first to last the East India Company adopted the Nolo episcopari principle. They protested against territorial acquisitions, and founded an empire. Swearing they would ne'er consent to wrong Gentoo or Moorman, they yielded to destiny, and took from them all they had—lands, liberties, titles, privileges, history, and tradition. And when they had gotten their country for an inheritance, they promised to teach them English all round, and to fire nine guns whenever a great chief came to visit any of their stations. But the statesmen and politicians of England were shocked at their selfishness (chiefly displayed in deferring too much to the prejudices of the conquered millions), and resolved to take upon themselves the task of implanting Western ideas in an Eastern soil. It was then discovered that we had a "mission" to fulfil. India had been brought under English dominion in order to supply Lancashire with short-staple cotton, and Mincing-lane with unadulterated teas; and since indigo was wanted, and the soil of Bengal could grow it, it was clearly a part of this wonderful mission to compel its culture, though at the ruin of its cultivators. Possibly the inhabitants of the land might prefer corn to cotton and potherbs to indigo; but the mission must be worked out, and if her Majesty's Secretary of State could not be made to understand that India was created for the English planter, and not for the mere children of the soil—why, he must be called a Maharajah and a Bahadour, and the Premier must be admonished to get rid of him. Beyond all comparison, Sir Charles Wood is the best abused man in these isles. It is not possible for him to please any one party for any length of time. If he throw his shield over the helpless ryot, he is reviled as a White Pandey by his own countrymen; and if he decline to jeopardise the tranquillity of the empire by maintaining in squalid splendour and discontented irresponsibility a host of titular nobodies, he is told that the sun of England's honour has set, that the national character is tarnished beyond redemption, and that he himself is a monstrous epitome of all that is disagreeable in man. And all this simply because he will do things by halves, in deference to public ignorance and public timidity. No man who has a conscience is fit to govern an Oriental people. A clear head, and a steady nerve—in other words, a sound digestion—is all that is really wanted to constitute the beau ideal of an Eastern despot. There must be no looking back. The dead past must bury its dead. "Forward!" must be his battle cry. If he hesitate, he is lost. He may do a great wrong with impunity if he do it thoroughly, but he must not pause to redress ever so small a one. Take, for instance, the case of the Nawab of the Carnatic.

A hundred years ago the French and English were warring for supremacy in the Southern Peninsula. To conciliate the aid of the natives they pretended to take the part of one or the other of any two chiefs, or princes, who might happen to be at war with one another, and there seldom lacked an opportunity. In those days the Great Mogul was nominally Lord Paramount of India, which he governed through the agency of Satraps, who owed him an allegiance which they seldom paid. There was the Nawab Wuzer of Oude, the Nawab Nazim of Bengal, the Nizam of the Deccan, and other viceregal deputies of lesser note. The Nizam's vicereignty being too extensive to be directly administered by himself, he was aided by a Lieutenant, called the Soubadah or Nawab of the Carnatic. It chanced that there were rivals for this post, and accordingly the French sided with one candidate while the English adopted the other. British prowess prevailed, and their protégé proved not ungrateful to his benefactors. Through the decadence of the Delhi dynasty, the presentation of a considerable sum of money to the Nizam, and the short-sighted, easy-going good nature of the East India Company, the successful Soubadar eventually gained the title and attributes of an independent prince, owing fealty to the Emperor of Delhi. Yet a few years passed on, and the English supremacy in Southern India being firmly established, the feudal vassals of the Great Mogul became the feudal vassals of the Company. Tippoo Saib, the most formidable enemy ever opposed to the English in the East, had died a soldier's death after a gallant struggle, in which the Nawab of the Carnatic had, like a sensible man, placed himself on the side of the strongest. At the same time he took care to "hedge"—to use a sporting phrase—and endeavoured to make his book safe against either event. But it is a perilous game to run with the hare while hunting with the hounds, for the scent is hard to destroy. And so it proved in this case, for on the taking of Seringapatam a set of ciphers was found clearly showing that a clandestine, and therefore treasonous correspondence had been kept up with the enemy, to which the Nawab was at least privy, even if he took no active part in it. Nothing, says Sir Fitzroy Kelly, was found in his handwriting. It would be rather strange if there had been. Eastern craft is not a whit behind European diplomacy, and the last thing to be expected of an Indian ruler is, that he should commit himself in writing to a dangerous intrigue. That the Nawab possessed a guilty knowledge of what was going on can hardly be doubted, for the intelligence forwarded to Tippoo could have been derived from no one but himself. The treachery being proved, the right course would have been at once to have assumed the Government of the Carnatic, and declared the Nawabship extinct and forfeited for ever. But the thing was done by halves. As the otherwise rightful heir declined to accept the office on the terms proposed to him, it was bestowed upon his cousin, who was willing to agree to anything. And now the mistake was made of dignifying by the name of Treaty what was nothing more than a covenant—differing in form, not in spirit, from the covenants made by the East India Company with their European servants. The Nawab himself—by name Azeem-ul-Dowlah—never pretended that he was anything more than a highly-favoured dependent of the Company, and was quite aware that the compact was only for his own lifetime, or rather for so long as he properly conducted himself. No mention whatever was made of his "heirs and successors," and throughout the somewhat vaguely-worded document Azeem-ul-Dowlah himself appears as one of the contracting parties in his personal capacity, and not as an hereditary or independent ruler. Nor could he have appeared as such, for the Company was then the Paramount Power, and the lieutenantancy of the Carnatic was actually in abeyance at the time he consented to hold that dignity subject to the Company. But, says Major Bell, perpetuity is indicated by certain words in the preamble, which speak of "establishing the connection between the said contracting parties on a permanent basis of security in all times to come." This phrase, however, must be interpreted according to the context. The covenant was made not for one year, or two years—it was not a thing to be periodically renewed, but was to last for all times to come during the lifetime of the contracting party whose name was specially mentioned. At the death of the Nawab Azeem-ul-Dowlah it was optional with the East India Company to allow the covenant to cease and determine of itself, or to extend it to his son. Again they did things by halves. They neither declared the compact to be at an end, nor expressly extended it to his son, but carelessly suffered it to go on of itself, and in like manner did they act when a vacancy again occurred. But when both the son and the grandson of Azeem-ul-Dowlah had passed away, and there was no direct lineal descendant of the latter to inherit the liberality they had hitherto so improvidently displayed—and which had already cost the country upwards of two millions sterling—it appeared to Lord Harris, as well as to Lord Dalhousie, that the time had come for doing away with such an extravagant arrangement, the advantages of which were all on one side. In the clearest possible terms Lord Harris points out the great inconvenience, and even danger, that would arise from persisting in such a waste of the public money. It is easy enough to be lavish of funds that have to be found by others, but such prodigality savours rather of a selfish and inconsiderate ostentation than of true generosity, which must always be based upon justice. And the reasons assigned by the Governor of Madras against the perpetuation of the covenant made in 1801 are so sound and explicit that no impartial reader can fail to be convinced by them. The semblance of royalty without any of the power is a mockery which, he wisely observes, cannot be otherwise than pernicious, for the presence of a quasi-royal family and court may well lead the natives to infer that there exists a co-ordinate authority in the Government. Again, it is "not only anomalous, but prejudicial to the community that a separate authority, not amenable to the laws, should be permitted to exist." And here comes a weighty and prescient argument, which does infinite credit to his lordship's sagacity. "It is impolitic and unwise," he writes, "to allow a pageant to continue which, though it has hitherto been politically harmless, may at any time become a nucleus for sedition and agitation." Lastly, it is inexpedient to perpetuate the scandal that has been caused by the flagrant immorality and coarse debauchery of the Nawabs, which tend to bring high station into disrepute, and favour "the accumulation of an idle and dissipated population in the chief city of the Presidency." Such cogent reasoning was not likely to be thrown away upon the perspicacious mind of Lord Dalhousie, and the useless, wasteful, dangerous mockery of the titular sovereignty of the Carnatic was exploded and dispersed to the winds. An abundant provision, however, was made for the disappointed claimant of the imaginary musnud, no small portion of which is annually expended in getting up an insensate agitation for redress of grievances that have never been inflicted. Of the exact nature and success of this agitation a tolerably correct opinion may be formed from the fraudulent character of the petitions presented to Parliament in favour of a fresh inquiry into the case. It were well, indeed, for India if every royal or princely shadow could be as easily and as righteously effaced. Had no half measures been pursued in the first instance—had a "thorough" policy been followed out—had no mawkish sentiments of misplaced compassion been suffered to cloud the judgment—had the conquerors of India carried their heart in their head, or their brain over their heart—there would have been far less of heartburnings and discontent in the long run—there would, probably, have been no mutiny at Vellore, no massacre at Delhi, no Nana Sahib at Bithoor, and no annual motion about the Nawab of the Carnatic. In political questions the half is often greater than the whole.

BOOKS.

A Letter Addressed, by permission, to the Right Hon. Lord Stanley, M.P. By Indopolite. J. Davy and Sons.

This compact, but incorrectly printed, little volume contains in petto all that can be said to support the claims of Prince Azeem Jah, and, perhaps, a good deal more than can fairly be urged in their favour. The Appendix is so far valuable that it furnishes nearly all that is required for a refutation of the Nawab's alleged grievances. Lord Harris's Minute, which is honestly reproduced, is the best answer to Mr. Smollett's violent diatribe against that amiable nobleman, and clearly shows that, if his lordship really did form his own opinion as to the merits of the case without consulting his legal advisers, there were few men in India at the time his Minute was written who more thoroughly understood the inconvenience arising from the maintenance of titular sovereignties. However much, therefore, we may respect "Indopolite's" sense of fair play, we cannot think that he has acted wisely in the interests of his client in placing in such prominent relief the arguments of the adverse party. Out of his own mouth, as it were, he can now be answered—a degree of impartiality for which his principal is not likely to feel particularly grateful. Be that as it may, the question is fairly submitted to the reader, who must form his own conclusions according to the evidence and the light that is in him.

Debrett's Illustrated Peerage of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. 1865. Dean and Son.

Debrett's Illustrated Baronetage and Knightage of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. 1865. Dean and Son.

We shall hardly be accused of departing from our usual custom of noticing only such works as have an immediate reference to the East, if we award a few lines of merited commendation to the oldest and best account of the Nobility and Aristocracy of the British Empire that has ever yet been given to the public. And these volumes are not only the most complete of their kind, they are also, in relation to the quantity and variety of matter they contain, decidedly the cheapest. A work that has held its own for upwards of a century against many formidable competitors may safely be left to stand on its merits. Nor should we have deemed it necessary to direct the attention of our readers to these respectively most useful books of reference—for who is there that has not heard of "Debrett's Peerage," or "Debrett's Baronetage?"—were it not that many important improvements have been introduced in the present edition. The arms of all Peers and Baronets are here blazoned and described, and also the arms of the several Sees. In addition to this, the Knightage is now given for the first time, together with a special chapter on the Orders of State and Degrees of Honour, Dignity, and Precedence. The names of the Church livings in the gift of Peers and Baronets are carefully specified, and much useful information is introduced regarding matters which everybody wants to know, but which nobody ever does know. Not unreasonably do the proprietors claim to have produced "a complete repertory of useful knowledge concerning the Titled Classes of the Realm."

Godfrey, 17th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, complaining of violation of rights secured to them by Parliamentary guarantee, and praying for redress.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 16.

Petitions from officers of the Indian army, complaining of grievances and praying for redress, were presented by the SOLICITOR-GENERAL, from Major Colin Cookworthy, of the Bengal Artillery; by Mr. TORRENS, from Lieutenant E. Armstrong, late 3rd Regiment

Madras Europeans, and Lieutenant Bayley, 6th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; by Colonel SYKES, from Lieutenant-colonel T. Buchanan, 4th Regiment Madras Light Cavalry, and Major G. Atkinson, 6th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; by Sir W. MILES, from Robert Peniston Milbank, Crewe, Captain 14th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; and by Mr. INGHAM, from Captain Simpson and Lieutenant St. John, of the Madras army.

AZEEM JAH.—FRAUDULENT PETITIONS.

A special report from the Committee on Public Petitions was brought up by the Chairman of the Committee and read by the Clerk at the table. It stated that the Committee had grounds for believing that many of the signatures to a petition purporting to be the petition of inhabitants of Westminster, in favour of the claims of Azeem Jah, and purporting to be signed by certain persons resident near the Houses of Parliament, were forgeries. The Committee also had reason to believe that other signatures to petitions presented with the like prayer were also fraudulently attached.

Mr. C. FORSTER, as Chairman of the Committee on Public Petitions, moved that the report do lie on the table. The Committee, he said, had reason to believe that names were attached to the petition without either the knowledge or consent of the parties, to an extent involving an abuse of the right of petition and an infringement of the privileges of that House. It was for the House to say whether the notice which had been taken of the matter was sufficient to vindicate the right of petition, or whether the House would push the matter farther and appoint a Select Committee to consider the subject, with power to send for persons and papers.

Mr. ALDERMAN SALOMONS, as one of the Committee on Petitions, said that several of the signatures to one of the petitions, purporting to be those of persons of station in society, were forgeries. The Committee had reason to believe that a very large number of these signatures were fraudulent, and constituted such an abuse of the right of petition that some public notice ought to be taken of the matter.

Mr. BONHAM-CARTER said that the whole of his experience of eighteen years as a member of the Committee on Public Petitions he had never seen so gross a fraud as that now brought under the notice of the House. It was not a case in which one or two names had been attached with or without the knowledge of the parties, but one petition on the face of it appeared to be fraudulent from first to last. The very first name was proved to be a forgery, and the Committee thought it their duty to bring the matter before the House, but without the slightest intention to prejudice the debate.

The motion was agreed to, and the report was ordered to lie upon the table.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 17.

Petitions from officers in the Indian army, complaining of grievances and praying for redress, were presented by Colonel SYKES, from Captain S. Hodgson, 2nd Regiment Madras Light Cavalry, and Lieutenant C. C. Hewetson, late 49th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; by Mr. WHITE, from Major A. H. Gordon, of the late 52nd Regiment Madras Native Infantry, Captain George Hodding, 20th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, and Brevet-Captain Swiney, 32nd Regiment Madras Native Infantry; by Mr. MARSH, from Major J. A. Angus, of the late 9th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry, Brevet-Major W. Serres, of the late 51st Regiment Madras Native Infantry, and Lieutenant W. G. Sharp, 41st Regiment Madras Native Infantry.

OUDE.

LORD STANLEY asked the Secretary of State for India whether he was prepared to lay on the table, together with the papers relating to Oude affairs, any opinion which might have been recorded by members of the Council?

Sir C. Wood was understood to say that he would do so when he made his financial statement.

A BATCH OF INDIAN BILLS.

Sir C. Wood obtained leave to bring in a Bill to enlarge the powers in certain matters of the Governor-general of India in Council at meetings for making laws and regulations, and to amend the law respecting the territorial limits of the several Presidencies and Lieutenant-governorships in India; and also a Bill to extend the term for granting fresh letters patent for the High Courts in India, and to make further provision respecting the territorial jurisdiction of the said Courts.

The Bills were brought in and read a first time.

Petitions for redress of grievances were presented by Mr. JACKSON, from Lieutenant-colonel J. Daniel, 16th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, Captain E. G. Dixon, 10th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, and Lieutenant H. T. Harris, 36th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; by Mr. AUGUSTUS SMITH, from Brevet-Major Thomas Tristram Piers, Bombay army; by Colonel SYKES, from Major-general C. E. Faber, Retired List, Madras Engineers, Brevet-Major R. G. Lewis, 31st Regiment Madras Light Infantry, Lieutenant H. D. Barne, 1st Regiment Madras Native Infantry; and by Colonel WILSON PATTEN, from Lieutenant Macaulay, 51st Regiment of the Bengal army.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

In answer to Mr. WATKIN,

Sir C. Wood said he was unable to name any day for making his financial statement, for he had not yet received the Indian accounts. Next year he hoped that these accounts would be forthcoming at an earlier period. During the whole of last autumn officers had been engaged in simplifying the accounts, and this had probably impeded their earlier preparation.

BRITISH SUBJECTS IN CHINA.

Colonel SYKES called attention to the alleged inability of the British Government to enforce Orders in Council and Ordinances by superintendents of trade, relating to British subjects in China; and asked whether such alleged inability is consistent with the proceedings of the Consular Courts in China? He gave long details, founded principally upon private letters, of acts in alleged violation of the orders and ordinances in question.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL explained that, if the law were violated, Consuls in no case could proceed except upon information properly before them, or proper evidence that a breach of law had been committed. It was impossible that they could send a roving commission all over China to find out who might be or who might not be disobeying the law, and to summon them, whether they were in the service of the Emperor or not, to answer for offences of which no one had accused them. The Consular Courts had the same duties to perform as other courts in criminal cases—they had to receive information properly verified, and to decide according to law; but they were not to go about all over China trying to find out all possible offenders. The Government of this country could not be held responsible for the discovery and punishment of all British subjects who might commit offences in any part of China. When these subjects were within the consular jurisdiction and were properly accused—on proper evidence—then it would be time enough to inquire whether they had offended against the ordinances. It was quite impossible that these ordinances could be executed all over a great empire like China—they could only be enforced in those places where our Consuls were situated.

BOMBAY BACK BAY SHARES.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR called attention to the proceedings of the Indian authorities with regard to the Back Bay shares at Bombay, whereby, he said, the Government had lost a very large sum. He referred to the vast influx of money into Bombay, which had enhanced prices there, and asked for copies of any correspondence relating to a proposed increase of the salaries of officials in the Bombay Presidency.

Sir C. Wood, premising that he had no objection to lay the papers referred to upon the table, declared that the Government of India had acted rightly in this matter. He admitted that if the Government of Bombay had taken shares and sold them it might have made a considerable sum of money; but in that case the object for which it was asked to take those shares would have been entirely frustrated. When it was found that the shares were not going off very well the Government was asked to take them, in order that a permanent endowment might be given to the project. The Government of Bombay wrote to the supreme Government asking that it might be permitted to comply with that request. The Government of India replied in effect:—"We don't think it proper for a Government to take part in a speculative project of this kind. Therefore, don't do it." The ground on which it was desired that the Government of Bombay should take the shares was that the company might have Government security for the money invested in the project; and, therefore, if the Government had taken the shares and sold them at a profit that object would have been frustrated.

The India Office (Site and Approaches) Bill was read a second time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 21.

Worsley, and Lieut. H. Stevenson, Royal Bombay Artillery.

CONSULAR COURTS IN CHINA.

Mr. KINNAIRD asked the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether it was proposed to take any steps to remedy the evils arising from the Consular Courts in China being the only accessible courts for the trial of civil and criminal as well as the ordinary police cases, the Consuls not being lawyers by education, and the amount of business having become very large.

Mr. LAYARD said that measures were in progress for establishing a Consular Court at Shanghai, and a consular judge, an assistant-judge, and a law secretary would be appointed. All the provincial consular Courts in China would be under their jurisdiction; the consular judge would have the power of going circuit; there would be an appeal from the provincial courts to his court, and from his court to the Privy Council.

INDIA OFFICE (SITE AND APPROACHES, &c.) BILL.

On the motion of Mr. COWPER, the Select Committee was nominated on this Bill:—Mr. Cowper, Lord John Manners, Sir John Shelley, and Mr. Baillie Cochrane, and three members to be added by the Committee of Selection. Power to send for persons, papers, and records.

On the motion of Mr. C. FORSTER, a Select Committee was appointed to inquire into the circumstances under which and the parties by whom the signatures were annexed to the petitions relating to the case of Prince Azem Jah, presented during the present Session. That the said petitions be referred to the committee.

Reul, 14th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; Captain W. Ramsay, 10th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; and Lieutenant G. N. Ross, 12th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; by Mr. FINLAY, from Major F. W. A. Robson, 20th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; Captain T. W. Rutherford, 47th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; Captain S. Stallard, Royal Bengal Artillery; by Mr. S. FITZGERALD, from Captain J. Reay, late 63rd Regiment Bengal Native Infantry; by Colonel SYKES, from Colonel Charles Samuel Reid, Royal Bombay Artillery; Lieutenant Richard S. Roberts, 13th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; and Lieutenant W. Rowlandson, 17th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; by Dr. BRADY, from Brevet-Captain J. Thompson, of the late 58th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry; and Lieutenant C. M. Smith, 32nd Regiment Madras Native Infantry.

THE OUDE CLAIMS.

Mr. KNIGHT asked the Secretary of State for India whether the report of the Calcutta Commission on the Oude claims had been received, and, if so, whether it would be laid on the table?

Sir C. WOOD was understood to say that the report had not been received.

LABOUR ORDINANCE FOR INDIA.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR asked the Secretary of State for India if he would promote a labour ordinance for India, or certain parts of India, similar to that now in force in Ceylon; and if he would cause to be remedied the great want of roads in the important district of Wynaad. In explaining the objects of his inquiries he passed some severe criticisms upon the home Indian administration.

Sir C. WOOD said his hon. friend urged him to incur a very considerable expenditure with a view to increasing the Indian surplus or diminishing the deficit. He could not, however, see how that object was to be attained by the construction of roads which he advocated, although he was ready to admit that it was most desirable that those roads should be made with all possible expedition. He so far concurred with his hon. friend in that respect that after the report of Sir W. Denison, who had gone out to India last autumn, he had given instructions that roads, which he quite granted were very much needed, should be proceeded with in a more systematic way and should be completed within a certain time. With respect to the coffee and tea districts he found that there was an increase of about 2,000 tons a year in the production of coffee, and that the Assam tea, the production of which also was, he believed, on the increase, commanded a very good price in the London markets. His hon. friend, however, adverting to another subject, complained that there was no law in India placing on a proper footing the relations between master and servant; but the fact was that the question having been considered by the law commission in this country was placed upon that footing which the most able jurists deemed to be the best. Even beyond that point the question of importing labour from one part of the country to another had been legislated upon in the districts of Assam, for the introduction of labour into which a special Act had two years ago been passed. He regretted, however, to say that the result had not realised the expectations which had been formed, owing to circumstances over which legislation had no control. It should in dealing with the subject be borne in mind that the introduction of labour into small islands like the West Indies or Ceylon and its control was a comparatively easy matter; but that when labourers were brought into a perfectly wild country, to the sort of life prevailing in which they were unaccustomed, these regulations were attended with considerable difficulty. Into the particular district of Wynaad almost all the labourers were imported from Mysore, and, as they generally went there only for two or three months, that permanent sort of contract to which his hon. friend alluded could not well be established.

COURT OF ADMIRALTY.—SATURDAY, MARCH 25.

THE INDIAN MUTINY.—THE BANDA AND KIRWEE BOOTY.

SIR GEORGE CORNISH WHITLOCK AND OTHERS V. MAJOR-GENERAL HENRY EYRE, EXECUTOR OF THE LATE LORD CLYDE, AND OTHERS.

This case came before the Court on an application to make a claim to share in the Banda and Kirwee booty, seized during the Indian mutiny, and alleged to be worth upwards of a million of money.

Mr. E. C. Clarkson appeared on the part of Captain Dyer and the officers and men of the 50th Regiment of the Madras Army, in support of a claim; the Queen's Advocate and Mr. Ayrton, M.P., were for Sir George Whitlock and others, making the claim in the first instance.

Mr. Clarkson said Captain Dyer had made an affidavit, and he had to ask his lordship that three weeks' time be granted to support the claim, which he was instructed to make on the part of the 50th Regiment of the Madras army, because there were public documents to be consulted, and they would require to be looked into before the claim of the parties he represented could be properly placed before the court.

Mr. Ayrton objected to the delay mentioned, and suggested that a few days would be quite sufficient to make the claim.

Dr. Lushington thought that ten days' time would be quite sufficient for the purpose intended. He did not exactly know how the matter was to be presented. He apprehended that the court had generally to ascertain to whom the money belonged.

DIVORCE COURT.—MARCH 18.

Before the JUDGE ORDINARY and a Common Jury.

BARROW V. BARROW.

Dr. Wamsey and Mr. Morgan Howard appeared for the petitioner; Dr. Spinks for the respondent.

This was a wife's petition for dissolution on the ground of adultery, coupled with desertion. The husband was a solicitor in Calcutta, and he married the petitioner in February, 1849, and lived with her very happily for several years in India and in England, and had several children by her. In 1859 she came to England with the children, leaving her husband in India. He had made the acquaintance of Mr. Hudson, an artist at Calcutta, and frequently visited at his house, and ultimately formed an adulterous connection with Mrs. Hudson, who eloped with him in 1861. They had since lived together as man and wife in India and in London, and Mr. Hudson recently obtained a decree of dissolution. The petitioner stated that in May, 1860, the respondent had come over to England unexpectedly and had an interview with her, at which he made an accusation of misconduct against her, for which there was not the slightest foundation, and said he should not live with her again. He accordingly left her, and returned to India, but made her an allowance of £120 a-year.

The respondent had filed an answer, denying the charge, but there was no defence, and a verdict was returned for the petitioner.

Decree nisi, with costs.

MARCH 22.

Before the JUDGE ORDINARY and a Special Jury.

POLLARD V. POLLARD AND HEMMING.

Dillon Gustavus Pollard prayed for a dissolution of his marriage with Rebecca Pollard, on the ground of her adultery with Frederick Shand Hemming, and claimed damages.

The respondent and the co-respondent denied the charge.

The Solicitor-General and Dr. Tristram appeared for the petitioner; Mr. Holl for the respondent; and Mr. Digby Seymour, Q.C., and Dr. Swabey for the co-respondent.

The petitioner, Colonel Pollard, and the respondent, who was formerly a Miss Dysart, are members of good families in Ireland. They were married in February, 1850, the petitioner being then a lieutenant in the Madras Infantry, and in April, 1850, they went together to India. They lived together in different parts of India, and had three children. In 1855 Mrs. Pollard came to England with her daughters for the benefit of her health, and remained until August, 1857, when she rejoined her husband in India. They lived together for the next four years in India, and had a third child, a boy. In 1861 her health again gave way, and she was obliged to pay another visit to England. She arrived in March, 1861, and after staying for some time with her relatives in Ireland she came to London in September, 1862, and took a house in Clifton-road, St. John's-wood. Her children and her sister, Miss Dysart, lived with her. In November, 1863, Colonel Pollard arrived in England and went to the house in the Clifton-road, and found that his wife had left. He received a note from her asking him to meet her at the London-bridge Hotel, and she would explain why she had left the Clifton-road. He went, but he could not find her there, and he heard nothing of her for two or three days, when she wrote another note to him owning that she had deceived him dreadfully and had been untrue to him, and saying that by the time it reached him she would be at sea, hundreds of miles away. She afterwards wrote a very affecting letter to her sister, in which she said she had gone thousands of miles away from home with the man who had loved her, and whom she had loved, sixteen years ago. She added that after all had been broken off between them she had striven to forget him, but she could not fight against her fate. She expressed her deep sorrow for the misery and trouble she had brought on her family, and hoped that her children would be well taken care of. Mrs. Pollock took her son with her, and Colonel Pollock was unable to find them until August, 1864, when he ascertained that Mrs. Pollock and Mr. Hemming were living together as man and wife at Parsloes, near Barking, in Essex. They afterwards removed to Weston-super-Mare, where the citations were served on them. Colonel Pollard has since recovered possession of the child by a writ of habeas corpus.

The marriage and cohabitation were proved, and Mr. Pollard Urquhart, M.P., the petitioner's brother, and Miss Dysart and other witnesses were called to show that the petitioner and his wife had always lived on the most affectionate terms, and were apparently very much attached to each other. While he was in India he made her an allowance of £450 a year, and they kept up a constant correspondence. Several extracts from Mrs. Pollard's letters to Colonel Pollard in 1861, 1862, and up to August, 1863, were read, in all of which she addressed him in the most affectionate manner. It also appeared from the cross-examination of Miss Dysart that the respondent and Mr. Hemming had been acquainted before Colonel Pollard was introduced to her, that they became attached to one another, and were engaged to be married, but that the engagement was broken off before Colonel Pollard's introduction to her. Miss Dysart further stated that a quarrel had taken place between her brother and Mr. Hemming, and Mr. Hemming thereupon discontinued his visits to the house. Mr. Dysart, the brother, introduced Col. Pollard to the respondent, and was anxious that she should marry him. Mr. Hemming was married about the same time as the respondent, and his wife died in 1861. Miss Dysart further proved that when Mrs. Pollard was in England in 1861 she saw Mr. Hemming's name and address in a newspaper, and called on him in Moorgate-street, where he had an office, and was in business as a mining agent. She did not see him, and he called on her the next day. The house which Mrs. Pollard took in the Clifton-road in 1862 was near the house in which Mr. Hemming and his mother lived. Mr. Hemming paid daily visits to Mrs. Pollard in the Clifton-road, but no impropriety of any kind was noticed between them. Colonel Pollard is now about forty-five years of age, Mrs. Pollard about thirty-nine, and Mr. Hemming about forty.

There was no defence to the charge of adultery.

Verdict for the petitioner—Damages £1,000.

Decree nisi, with costs against the co-respondent.

RAILWAY COMPANIES.

CALCUTTA AND SOUTH-EASTERN.

A special meeting of this company was held at the offices, Gresham-house, Old Broad-street, for the purpose of considering, and if approved confirming, the special resolutions passed at the extraordinary general meeting of the 16th February; Mr. J. Borrodale in the chair.

The resolutions in question authorised the directors to borrow on debentures further sums not exceeding £100,000, at a rate of interest not exceeding 5 per cent. per annum, for five years, and to be renewable for a like period at the option of the holders; and the latter were to be allowed to convert the debentures into shares or stock at any time before they became due on giving one month's notice of their intention of doing so.

The resolutions were formally confirmed.

The Chairman said that when they last met he mentioned that an important company was being formed, from which the Calcutta and South-Eastern were likely to receive considerable benefit. That undertaking, the Port Canning and Land Investment Reclamation and Dock Company, had been brought out with success. The capital was £1,000,000, and the shares were now at a very high premium. It was supported by a great many houses in Calcutta, and by a very powerful Bombay interest; and as its objects were to construct works which must necessarily contribute largely to the traffic of the Calcutta and South-Eastern line, he thought the shareholders of the latter company might congratulate themselves upon the formation of the new undertaking. The public in Calcutta had formerly a strong feeling against the company's railway; but he was happy to say that the feeling was now as strongly in favour of it.

A vote of thanks to the chairman and directors concluded the proceedings.

SCINDE.

The report of the directors states that from the opening of the line to the 30th of December, 1863, a net profit of £28,333 was paid to Government in reduction of interest advanced; and on the 30th of June, 1864, a further sum of £3,458 was available for the same purpose. The traffic receipts for the second half of 1861 amounted to £19,361, for the same half of 1862 to £62,837, for the same half of 1863 to £100,463, and for the second half of 1864 to £94,544. During the half-year ending the 31st of December the average weekly receipts amounted to £1,680, the gross return in the half-year being £43,668. The receipts per mile per week averaged £16, and per train mile about 5s. 6d. The company's officers have had under consideration a revision of the existing rates for conveyance, which appeared to be on too low a scale. The line throughout was in good working order. No accident either to a train or passenger had happened during the half-year. The number of passengers carried was 53,480. Considerable progress had been made with the survey of the country along the valley of the Indus. The chief engineer and staff charged with the survey, on entering the independent State of Bahawalpore, were received with much cordiality by the Khan, who evinced a thorough appreciation of the benefits which the proposed railway would confer upon his territory. The sum of £1,938,819 had been expended on capital account.

During the half-year the vessels of the flotilla had plied regularly, their voyages having been performed with only the trifling casualties incidental to the navigation of the river. The gross earnings of the fleet for the six months ending the 31st of December were about £44,000, and after deducting cost of stores and working expenses there remained about £14,000. The capital expended on the flotilla amounted to £377,496.

PUNJAB.

The report of the directors states that this railway was completed throughout from Umritsur to Mooltan, although not yet opened for public traffic. Upon the 19th of December, 1864, the last rail was laid, and on the 23rd of that month a train was run through from end to end; since that date trains with materials for construction purposes had been running throughout the line. It was confidently anticipated that the line would be opened throughout for traffic in March. The directors had to deplore the great loss which they had sustained in the death of their agent and representative, Mr. Stevens, under whose able and energetic administration this important undertaking had been brought to a successful issue. The total receipts on the section, thirty-two miles in length, open for traffic amounted for the half-year to £8,730, and the working expenses were about 61·6 per cent. of the gross receipts. The expenditure on capital account amounted to £1,897,442.

DELHI.

The directors' report states that the works on this line had been actively commenced. Large quantities of permanent way materials had already been shipped, the contractors being determined to lose no time in pushing on the works. It was intended to carry on operations at both ends of the line simultaneously; and as great facilities of transport would be afforded by the completion of the Punjab Railway, which would place one end of the line at Umritsur in steam communication with the port of Kurrachee, while Ghazeeabad, at the other extremity, was connected with Calcutta by the East Indian Railway, there was every reason to feel assured that the railway would be completed throughout within the term of five years. The capital account showed that £56,024 had been expended to the 30th of September, leaving a balance of £990,907.

NEWSPAPERS AND OTHER PRINTED PAPERS FOR MALTA OR EGYPT, SENT VIA MARSEILLES.

On the 1st April next, the following alterations will take effect in the existing arrangements in respect to newspapers and book packets addressed to Malta or to Egypt.

First.—The combined British and foreign postage on newspapers forwarded to Malta or Egypt, via Marseilles, and conveyed by British packet, will be twopence for each newspaper not exceeding four ounces in weight, instead of threepence for each newspaper without regard to its weight.

Secondly.—The combined British and foreign postage on newspapers forwarded to Malta, via Marseilles, and conveyed by French packet, will, in like manner, be twopence for each newspaper not exceeding four ounces in weight, instead of one penny for a packet of newspapers not exceeding the weight of four ounces.

Thirdly.—Book packets which can, at present, be sent to Malta via Southampton only, may in future be sent via Marseilles also, and either by British or by French packet, and book packets for Alexandria, Cairo, or Suez, the transmission of which is now also limited to the Southampton route, may in future be sent by the British packets from Marseilles. Printed papers may still be sent to Alexandria by the French mail packets.

The postage chargeable on book packets, or packets of printed papers, sent to Malta, Alexandria, Cairo, or Suez, via Marseilles, will be as follows:—

For a packet not exceeding 4 ozs.	Above 4 ozs. and not exceeding 1 lb.	Above 1 lb. and not exceeding 1 1/2 lb.	Above 1 1/2 lb. and not exceeding 2 lb.	Every additional 1/2 lb.

BOOKS, &c., FOR SHANGHAI AND OTHER PORTS IN CHINA.—An official notification states that on the 1st of April next, and thenceforward, book packets addressed to Shanghai, Canton, Amoy, Foo-Choo-Foo, Ningpo, Swatow, and Whampoa, may be forwarded by the British mail packet, either via Southampton or via Marseilles, under the same conditions in all respects as book packets addressed to Hong Kong. The charge will then be as follows:—Via Southampton, for a packet not exceeding 4 ozs., 4d.; above, and not exceeding 1 lb., 8d.; above 1 lb., and not exceeding 1 1/2 lb., 1s. 4d.; above 1 1/2 lb., and not exceeding 2 lb., 2s.; every additional 1/2 lb., 8d. Via Marseilles, for a packet not exceeding 4 ozs., 6d.; above 4 ozs., and not exceeding 1 lb., 1s.; above 1 lb., and not exceeding 1 1/2 lb., 2s.; above 1 1/2 lb., and not exceeding 2 lb., 3s.; every additional 1/2 lb., 1s. This postage must, in all cases, be paid in advance.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ORDER OF THE BATH.—(War-office, March 17).—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of the Hon. Sir Frederick W. Adolphus Bruce, K.C.B., late H.M.'s Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Emperor of China, and now H.M.'s Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States of America, to be an Ordinary Member of the Civil Division of the First Class, or Knights Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.—(March 18).—The Queen has also been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of Colonel George Jackson Carey, of the 2nd Battalion 18th Regiment, to be an Ordinary Member of the Military Division of the Third Class, or Companions of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

RELICS OF TIPPOO SAIB.—The following important additions have been made to the South Kensington Museum:—A table-cover or coverlet, with a white linen ground, embroidered with patterns of flowers, foliage, and animals, and fringed with gold, formerly the property of Tippee Saib. Saddle-cloth, Genoa velvet, embroidered with foliage, in gold thread, formerly the property of Tippee Saib.

CAPTAIN R. BURTON.—It is proposed to give a public dinner to Captain Burton on his leaving England for South America. This event is to come off on Tuesday, April 4.

ASIATIC SOCIETY.—March 6.—Sir E. Colebrooke, Bart., M.P., President, in the chair.—Dr. A. Vambéry gave a lecture on the distinctions between the religious practices of the Eastern and Western Mohammedans. Beginning from a description of the characteristic features which distinguish the religious usages and observances of the Eastern Mohammedans,—such as the great number of flags in towns and on the roads, and the daily practices of the people as to sleeping, travelling, eating, dressing, &c., all of which are regulated and rigorously enforced by religious injunctions,—the lecturer proceeded to give some details about the three orders of priests, viz., the Mollahs, Ishans and Ehl i Takwas, and their respective numbers, course of studies and influence. He observed that the eastern fraction of Islam, through the rigid fanaticism which pervades it, forms almost an especial sect; and that the inhabitants of those parts believe that their country was favoured with the descent of the rain of divine knowledge, by which it became far superior in sanctity to the West and even to Mecca. After tracing the development of this form of Islam from the reign of the Samanides down to the time of the Emperor Timur and his sons, when it reached the climax of its power, he contrasted, in conclusion, with this eastern fanaticism the far more tolerant Mohammedanism in Turkey, which in its greater liberality of thought and less strict religious observances, has yielded to the influence of Christianity and European civilization. Sir Henry Rawlinson drew attention to the great importance of the study of the Mohammedan religion, which is professed by about twenty millions of English subjects in India who, on account of their strong religious prejudices, are far more difficult to deal with than the Hindus. Speaking of the influences of other creeds and observances upon Islam, he mentioned several Mohammedan festivals which were based on Pagan rites. Sir Henry also entered on the question of burials and tombs, as to which many differences exist among the various Mohammedan sects; and at his request Dr. Vambéry described some of the practices current in Central Asia.—Athenæum.

H.M.'s 28TH REGT.—The hired troop ship Tiverton, Capt. James Smith, belonging to Messrs. Coupland Brothers, and Co., of Liverpool, arrived in Plymouth Sound on Saturday, March 18, with the left wing of the 28th Regiment on board from India. The Tiverton left Bombay November 5, and St. Helena, January 18. The troops on board consisted of Capt. Hackett, in command, and Mrs. Hackett, Capt. Ingham, Lieut. Prett, Lieut. Cook and Mrs. Cook, Lieut. Treeve and Mrs. Treeve, Ensign Mackenna, Ensign Smyth, Assist.-Surg. Wilson, M.D., 14 sergeants, 7 drummers, and 274 rank and file. Mrs. Berry and two children, the family of the paymaster of the regiment, were also passengers by the Tiverton. Major-Gen. Lord Templetown, Commander-in-Chief of the Western District, visited the troops on board on Saturday, and the troops were subsequently landed by the Prospero steamtug, at the Royal William Victualling-yard, whence they marched to their quarters at the Raglan Barracks, Devonport.

BREVET-LIEUT.-COL. W. W. H. GREATHED, C.B., Royal Bengal Engineers, will vacate the appointment held by him at the Horse-guards, shortly after Midsummer, and will be succeeded by Captain and Brevet Col. E. B. Johnson, C.B., Royal Bengal Artillery, late of the Adjutant-general's department in Bengal.

THE LATE GENERAL CLARK.—The Colonelcy of the 59th Regiment is vacant by the death of Major-General John Clark, K.H., who died a few days ago at Brighton. The deceased general was present at the battle of Waterloo, and afterwards served with distinction in India. He was at the taking of Rangoon, Kimendine, Kamaroot, and Mahattee, and was severely wounded in leading the attack on Aracoony.

INDIAN MANUFACTURES.—In order to exhibit to manufacturers, and especially to cotton manufacturers, the wants of our Indian people, Government has collected, at great expense and with much trouble, specimens of all the most characteristic, useful and costly of the native manufactures in cotton, silk and wool. Not only does the collection of these specimens represent every class of fabric now manufactured and worn in India, but it exemplifies the characteristic art of the people of the East in decorating the materials with those admirable patterns and colours which are the inheritance of their race. These patterns and colours are enjoyed by the people; and it will be hopeless to attempt to rival them without an equal knowledge, not only of the mechanical processes of manufacturing the material and copying the patterns, but also of the feeling for art which inspires that decoration. It is felt that, as we buy an enormous quantity of cotton and silk from India, while the people there take only bullion from us in exchange, the balance of trade is against us, and that our manufacturers would secure an ample field if they could enter the Indian market with textile fabrics fit for native use, and decorated in accordance with native tastes. In order, therefore, to enable English manufacturers to study the demands of the Indian market, the collection of textile fabrics and patterns above referred to, which contains twenty specimens of each sort, has been divided into twenty complete sets; the objects have been placed in volumes, each set amounting to eighteen substantial folios, comprising about 700 examples. These sets of eighteen folios each are to be distributed to the leading seats of manufacture in this country, and deposited in the Chambers of Commerce in those localities where they may be consulted by those desirous of information.—Athenæum.

CHRONOGRAPHS FOR INDIA.—By an appropriately-named Great Trigonometrical Survey, India is to be surveyed as completely as England or Ireland has been by the Ordnance Survey; and an important part of the operations will be, the determining of differences of longitude. This involves observation of stars, not by the method in use but a very few years ago, which, by relying on the eye, ear, and quickness of apprehension of the observer, left much room for error, but by substituting a chronograph. The observer, as the star traverses the field of his telescope, has only to touch a small ivory key, and on the instant a dot appears on the sheet of paper wound round the barrel of the chronograph. Connect the instrument with an astronomical clock, and you have a dot for every beat of the pendulum, so that the exact time of the passage of a star can be determined to the hundredth of a second. The chronograph by which these results were shown is one of two magnificent instruments constructed in Paris, under the care of Lieut.-colonel A. Strange, expressly for use in India, to which country they are to be forthwith shipped.—Athenæum.

SUSPENSION OF AN EAST INDIA FIRM.—The suspension has been announced of Messrs. Smith, Douglas, and Co. (formerly Wm. Grant and Co.), in the East India trade, together with that of their corresponding house at Liverpool, Messrs. James Smith and Co. Losses on produce have been the cause, and the total liabilities are thought to amount to about £400,000, although perhaps not more than £100,000 will ultimately rank on the estate. The general impression seems to be that an unfavourable liquidation must be anticipated. Messrs. Grant, Smith, and Co., of Calcutta, it is said, will not be affected by this suspension.

MOYAR COFFEE COMPANY.—A prospectus has been issued of the Moyar Coffee Company, with a capital of £75,000, in shares of £5, to purchase and cultivate some coffee and tea estates on the western slopes of the Neilgherry Hills.

DEATH OF SIR HENRY POLLARD WILLOUGHBY, M.P.—It is with regret that we announce the sudden demise of Sir Henry P. Willoughby, Bart., M.P. for Evesham. The hon. baronet was discovered by his valet dead in his bed shortly before nine o'clock on Thursday morning, the 23rd inst. He had been dead about an hour, for his body was warm, although his extremities were cold. Dr. Brewer and other professional gentlemen called in were unanimously of opinion that death arose from a diseased heart. The deceased was the second son of Sir Christopher Willoughby, of Bladen House, county Oxford, by his second marriage with Martha, daughter of Mr. Maurice Evans. He was born Nov. 17, 1796, and succeeded to the baronetcy on the death of his brother Sir Christopher, in June 1813. He was unmarried. The hon. baronet was first elected in 1831, for Yarmouth, Isle of Wight, when he advocated the Reform Bill. At the general election in 1832 he was returned for Newcastle-under-Lyne. In 1837 he unsuccessfully contested the borough of Poole, in the Conservative interest; and in 1841 opposed unsuccessfully the present Lord Lyveden and Mr. Raikes Currie for the town of Northampton. He had represented Evesham in the House of Commons since 1847. A vacancy occurs in the representation of that borough. The late baronet is succeeded in the family honours and estates in Oxfordshire and Gloucestershire by his brother, John Pollard Willoughby, who was born in 1799, and married, first, in 1822, Elizabeth, only daughter of Colonel Kennedy, who died in 1852; he married secondly, in 1854, Maria, fourth daughter of Mr. Thomas Hawkes. In 1817 he entered the Bombay Civil Service, and eventually became Chief Secretary to the Bombay Government, and was a member of the local Council from 1846 to 1851, when he retired. In 1852 he was an unsuccessful candidate for Leominster; but in April, 1857, was returned as representative of that borough in the House of Commons. He resigned his seat on being appointed a member of the Indian Council.

DEATH OF SIR GEORGE NICHOLLS, K.C.B.—We regret to announce the death of Sir George Nicholls, K.C.B., which occurred at his residence, 17, Hyde Park-street, on Friday last, in his 83rd year. The deceased entered the East India Company's naval service at the age of fifteen, but left it in 1815, and settled at Southwell, Notts, where he originated those important changes in poor-law administration which he was called upon to apply upon a larger scale when he was appointed a Poor Law Commissioner in 1834. In 1838 he introduced the poor law into Ireland. In 1847 he was appointed Secretary to the Poor Law Commission, and resigned that office through ill health in 1851.

DEATH OF SIR ROBERT SCHOMBURGH.—We (Athenæum) regret to have to announce the death of Sir Robert Schomburgk, which took place in Berlin on the 11th inst. It will be remembered that after his famous explorations in British Guiana, Sir Robert was appointed British Consul in St. Domingo, and afterwards Consul-general in Siam. He returned last year to Europe, and has passed the whole winter in Berlin, confined to his bed. In consequence of a circular issued by Dr. Barth, the African traveller, as President of the Berlin Geographical Society, his funeral was attended by a large number of scientific men. He leaves behind him a solid scientific reputation.

MESSERS. J. W. BURSTALL AND CO.—The suspension has been announced of Messrs. James William Burstall and Co., of Mark-lane and Hull, merchants, chiefly connected with Bombay, with liabilities stated at £200,000. The amount of assets has not transpired. The house was a recent one, and an impression seems to prevail that the liquidation will be unfavourable. The books are in the hands of Messrs. Quilter, Ball, and Co.

THE MAILS, &c.—SOUTHAMPTON, March 20.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's screw steamship Ceylon, Captain R. W. Evans, sailed hence to-day for Gibraltar, Malta, and Alexandria, with the Calcutta, China, and Australian mails, a full cargo, and 402 boxes of specie, jewelry, &c., value £101,378. 16s.—viz.:—For Mauritius, watches and medals, £60. For Madras, bar silver, £10,000; gold coin, £785; silver coin, £1. 16s.; gold thread, watches, and jewelry, £404. For Calcutta, bar silver, £10,000; watches, jewelry, &c., £516. For Singapore, dollars, £11,500. For Hong Kong, dollars, £29,930; gold thread, jewelry, and watches, £650. For Yokohama, dollars, £1,250. For Foochow, dollars, £2,000; bar silver, £500. For Shanghai, bar silver, £30,600. For King George's Sound, watches, £150. For Hobson's Bay, bar gold, £100; watches and jewelry, £2,294. For Sydney, watches and jewelry, £633. The Ceylon takes out forty-five first and thirty-five second-class passengers, and forty-two proceed by the corresponding steamer from Marseilles, making a total of 122. Among them are Lieutenant Molyneux, R.N., Captain R. M. and Mrs. Isacke, for Gibraltar; the Hon. W. A. Kerr, Rev. P. and Mrs. Ausorge, for the Mauritius; Major and Mrs. Marquis, Ensign W. F. Rudman, Captain Theobald, Major C. H. Hallett, Rev. C. Bennett, Captain C. H. Larpet, Captain J. M. Grant, Captain and Mrs. Dunbar, for Calcutta; Captain M. Suther, for Hong Kong, &c.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for £300,000 in bills on India took place on the 15th inst., at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were—to Calcutta, £172,600; to Bombay, £102,400; and to Madras, £25,000. The minimum price was, as before, 1s. 11½d. on Calcutta and Madras, and 1s. 11½d. on Bombay. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 13 per cent., and on Bombay at 1s. 11½d. in full; above these prices in full. These terms show a reduction of about ½ per cent. from those paid on the previous occasion, the demand for means of remittance having materially diminished.

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The India and China mail steamer Ceylon takes out a total of £96,672 in specie, of which £785 in gold and £20,002 in silver go to Madras and Calcutta, the residue of £75,885 in silver being for China and the Straits.

TRADE OF SCINDE.—The Commissioner of Customs at Bombay, and the Collector of Customs at Kurrachee, have been engaged in a discussion as to the extent of the trade of Scinde. The Collector at Kurrachee had furnished returns for the year 1863-64 to the Bombay office, which Mr. Inverarity, the Commissioner, thought exaggerated, and he issued a memorandum calling for explanations from Mr. Dalzell, the Collector. The increase in the export trade from Kurrachee to Europe for 1863-64 showed an increase of 80 per cent. over that of the previous year, and this doubling, almost, of the trade in twelve months, led to the sanguine hope in the mind of the Collector at Kurrachee that the province was fast becoming independent of Bombay. In his reply to the memorandum, which reply has now been published, Mr. Dalzell reiterates his assertion that no other port in India, not even Bombay, shows a similar ratio of progress in its trade during, at least, 1862-3. One of the features in the trade of Scinde was that the exports exceeded the imports of the year by Rs. 1,04,47,758, and this, Mr. Inverarity considered abnormal, inferring that Scinde was exporting at a loss. The increase was mainly owing, it seems, to an extension of the cotton trade. Mr. Dalzell naturally replied that the difference was made up in cash, which, affording the sinews of production to the province, went, of course, in most cases, to develop still further its resources. Mr. Dalzell defends his figures by saying that he has generally proceeded upon the tariff rates, which are considerably lower than the market value, at which, however, he thinks he might even have been justified in stating them.—Bombay Gazette.

AND

ROBERT GORDON LATHAM, M.A., M.D., F.R.S., &c.

The Illustrations drawn on Wood expressly for the Work, by PAUL J. NAFTEL, Member of the London Society of Painters in Water Colours.

"The 'Channel Islands' is an excellent book of its class—well conceived, well written, well illustrated, well printed. It is the produce of many hands, and every hand a good one. Nearly every thing which a man can desire to know about Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark—about their history, Geography, and natural history—Professor Ansted and Dr. Latham have contrived to tell. Altogether the contents of the volume are as varied and interesting as a well-sustained drama; and to this drama no more graceful and picturesque scenery could have been furnished than we find in the illustrations so profusely given by artists worthy of the subject and equal to their worth—Paul Nafel and M. Petere Le Lièvre. The result is not a merely handsome volume of the old 'Keepsake' style, made to sell and be looked at, but a book of rare merit and value, made for instruction and delight, to be read with pleasure and to be referred to with profit."—Athenæum, Nov. 15, 1862.

CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S). Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cramp, Ague, Consumption, Asthma, Cough, Colds, Bronchitis, Sea Sickness, &c., immediately relieved by a dose of TOWLE'S CHLORODYNE, which is admitted to be a most wonderful and valuable medicine, and preferred by the profession for its known composition and moderate price.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.

Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.
Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay, and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marselles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 225, Piccadilly, London.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

IMPORTANT TO EVERYBODY.—For more than thirty years these remedies have been ranked before all therapeutic agents, for the all-sufficient reason that they never can be wrongly used in either external or internal diseases. Holloway's Ointment should be well rubbed on the throat and chest in sore throat, enlarged glands, chronic coughs, and wheezings. In common ear-ach and influenza the Ointment well rubbed upon the walls of the chest, and by a few doses of the Pills, soon effects a cure. The same treatment, judiciously followed up, removes diphtheria, asthma, bronchitis, pleurisy, and prevents the deep inflammation resulting in abscess or ulceration, so apt to ensue when throat or chest complaints are neglected.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and, combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Sedlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Sedlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinidine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co., 270, Regent-street, London, W.

Price one guinea; half bottles, 10s. 6d. Testimonials from artists of the highest order and from individuals of undoubted respectability may be inspected on application.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR

TEETH.—This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when they might have perished from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pain in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 23rd of February brings us no further news from Bhootan. It may, therefore, be accepted as certain, that the rumoured evacuation of Buxa, as well as Dewangiri, had no other foundation than a timorous imagination. Nor was it likely that a post held by an entire regiment, supported by artillery, would be abandoned without a determined struggle. So long as the supplies of food and water are not interfered with, there is little danger of any fresh disaster in that direction. It is sufficient, indeed, that in the skirmishes which have taken place two gallant officers, Lieutenants Gregory and Kingscote, of the 3rd Ghoorkas, have been severely wounded. Brigadier General Tombs, accompanied by Major Sankey, R.A., and Captain Owen, H.M.'s 107th Regiment, was to leave Calcutta on the 23rd of last month, and will, doubtless, give a good account of all that opposes his advance into the enemy's country.

Petty disturbances are reported from various points in the interior of India. Armed gangs of Bheels have been giving much trouble, one band having fixed its head quarters in the Rewah territory. The Rajah at first expressed his ignorance of the fact, but subsequently undertook to perform whatever might be required of him.

The Maharajah of Gwalior is spoken of as being somewhat too much addicted to martial parade. And he has gone even further than an idle indulgence in holding reviews and making believe to be independent. There happens to be a small strip of land along the banks of the Chumbul river, which, once upon a time, belonged to the Mahrattas, but is at present under the sway of the Rajah of Dholepore. Scindiah, however, is anxious to rectify his frontiers, adopting the Napoleonic idea of revindication. He has, therefore, collected a body of troops, and threatens very terrible things if the land be not given up to him. The Dholepore Chief naturally declines to comply with the uncourteous request; but it is scarcely probable that the British Government will permit its feudatories to go to war on their own account. This little affair, however, may be taken as an illustration of the sort of relations which would speedily exist between neighbouring States were the British supremacy to be overthrown.

On the western side of the Peninsula the Wagheers are again in arms. A small detachment of Beloochees, under Captain Rice, easily drove them out of the open country into the fort of Geer. Two guns and one hundred and fifty men of the 16th N.I. have been pushed forward to reinforce Captain Rice, and enable him to capture the marauders' stronghold.

H.R.H. the Duke of Brabant left Calcutta on the 22nd of February, for China, on board the steamship Thunder. The Prince appears to have won golden opinions from all with whom he was brought into contact. A grand ball was given on the 17th by the Bengal Club in honour of his Royal Highness, who had requested to have his name placed on the list of non-resident members. The local papers are now clamorous for a visit from one of our own Royal Princes.

Speculation is rife as to the exact nature of Sir Charles Trevelyan's forthcoming financial statement. That there will be a large deficit is agreed on all hands. The only question is as to the means by which the chasm is to be bridged over. According to the Friend of India this necessary but unpleasant operation is to be performed by raising a loan of ten millions sterling, to be spread over several years. The money, it seems, is required not only to fill up the present gulf, but to provide against an early repetition of such a contingency. A considerable portion of it, moreover, is to be expended on works of irrigation, and a further sum on the improvement of jails, and the construction of barracks for the European soldiers. The loan, it is confidently expected, will be raised on the London Exchange, and in the present state of the money market it ought to be had on easy terms. The improvements contemplated in the new barracks are so admirable that we have much pleasure in giving prominent insertion to the following extract from the Serampore journal:—

"The Government of India, wisely uniting centralisation and local authority, has laid down certain general principles and detailed rules to be observed in the construction of the new barracks, but the local Governments will approve of particular designs, and adapt these rules to the different climates of the Peninsula. These principles will commend themselves to the most ardent sanitary reformers, while they are suited to the necessities of our military position in India. Henceforth, in new barracks, not more than forty-four men in the case of the infantry and artillery, and about sixty-six in the case of the cavalry, are, except in a fort, to be massed under one roof. Not less than sixteen or more than twenty unmarried men are to sleep in the same room. Double-storied barracks alone are to be erected, and their upper floors only used as dormitories. The lower floors will serve as day-rooms and for auxiliary purposes. In forts it may be necessary to build barracks of three stories, but only in hill stations will soldiers be allowed to sleep on the lower floor. Each soldier in the plains is to have ninety, and on the hills seventy-seven superficial feet, so that each may have 1,408 cubic feet of air in the former, and 1,232 in the latter. Only two rows of beds will be allowed in a ward, and all lavatories and other conveniences will be in buildings detached from the barracks. Each married couple is to have a large room, and the married quarters are to be grouped in blocks according to troops and companies, with broad open verandahs in front and behind."

A long list of promotions and alterations of rank amongst the officers of the Staff Corps, and of her Majesty's Indian military forces, will be found in the London Gazette of Tuesday, March 28th.

THE 2ND BELOOCHEES, stationed at Shanghai, spent New Year's Day in a series of athletic contests with the sailors of H.M.S. Scylla. Sepoys strove with sepoys, and sailors with sailors. The Beloochees enjoyed races, a sack steplechase, wrestling, and throwing heavy weights, and were rewarded by dollars and turbans. The sailors, besides racing, had such games as "dollar-hunting in the dark," "bell in the ring," "race across the tight-rope," "greased pole," and "Siamese twin race."

THE UNITED SERVICE INSTITUTION OF POONA is to be wound up, and the books made over to a new club about to be established there. Sir W. Mansfield did his utmost to foster the institution, and more than one good series of lectures was delivered in it. But the insolvency has seized it, and the officers, for whose benefit it was intended, are likely to seek a stimulus to study Indian history and the military art in the establishment of a magazine.

KHELAT.—Our Paper states that the Khan of Khelat, aided by his feudatory, the Jam of Beyla, is about to coerce another feudatory, the chief of Ketch Mekran, who has thrown off his allegiance. The chief is doubtless instigated by Persia, who has always desired the Mekran coast and claimed the port of Gwaleh. We are glad to hear that the present imbecile Khan has resolution enough to leave his capital.

BENGAL.

THE CONTRACT BILL.

When introducing the Labour Contract Bill in the Bengal Council, on Saturday, Feb. 18, the Hon. Ashley Eden read the following extract from a report submitted by the Bengal Government to that of India:—

"These reports conclusively show that the relations now existing between the planters of Assam, Cachar, and Sylhet, and the labourers imported by them into those districts, are on a most unsatisfactory footing, and that the interests of the labourers as much as those of the planters urgently demand the interference of Government. It is obvious that a serious and growing evil has sprung up which must be dealt with vigorously and promptly. The Lieutenant-governor is of opinion that when labour is imported into a district from a distant part of the country, and at a considerable expense, some effectual steps should be taken to prevent such breaches of contract by the labourers as are now represented to be of almost daily occurrence in these districts, and that, where Government interferes in regard to the protection of the labourer in entering into a contract, the planter has a right to look for some protection of his interests in regard to that labourer. It being admittedly right that the Government should interfere to regulate the interests of planters and labourers at the earliest stage of their connection, it is necessary that this interference should proceed one step further, and that instead of ceasing the moment the labourer arrives in the district in which he is to be employed, and leaving the planter without any real remedy against defaulters, it should, as in the case of colonial emigration, continue so long as the contract under which the labourer is introduced into the district is current. That the further protection of Government is also required by the labourer is clear from all the reports of the commissioners. It is certain that in frequent cases these men, instead of obtaining the rates of wages in expectation of which they incur the risks and dangers of distant service, are actually in receipt of wages considerably lower than those current in the immediate neighbourhood of their homes. The natural consequences are those which always attend unwilling labour. Careless indifference to the interests of the master; sullen idleness and apathy; constant attempts to abscond, and sometimes even violence to the employer. The remedy for this is to provide that every contract shall secure to the labourer some intelligible minimum of wages at a monthly rate, allowing him, however, to earn what he can by extra task work according to the terms of his contract. At present the labourer has no means of calculating what he is likely to be able to earn. A tariff of task work is shown him in Calcutta, and in entire ignorance of the nature of the work he accepts the terms offered; but on arriving at the plantation he finds that under this tariff he is unable to earn so much as he would have received in the immediate neighbourhood of his own home. He considers that he has been imposed upon, and that he is therefore at liberty to break the conditions of his own contract at will. The planter may say that he would willingly pay a fair rate of wages for an ordinary day's work, but that, under existing circumstances, the labourers do not perform an ordinary day's work, and if they did their task payment would ensure them a sufficient rate of pay. But this objection will be removed if the Law be amended so as to compel the protected labourer to perform his work and to provide a sufficient penalty for wilful neglect of work, breach of contract, or abscondment. It cannot be denied that both planters and labourers urgently require protection, and it is impossible to give it to one without also giving it to the other. This protection his Honour proposes to give by introducing into the Bengal Council a Bill which he believes will entirely meet the evil complained of, and will give complete satisfaction to both parties. As, however, the matter is so important, and bears so strongly on the vexed question of a Labour Contract Law, I am directed to submit a rough sketch of the proposed Bill for the information of the Government of India. His Honour will be glad to be favoured with an early expression of the views of his Excellency in Council on the subject, as it is his intention to bring the Bill, if approved by the Government of India, before the Council at its next meeting. The Lieutenant-governor is inclined to employ a special protective agency for the labourers, and to appoint one Protector of Labourers in Cachar, and two in Assam, for that purpose, provided means can be devised for doing this at the expense of those interested in the supply of labour to those districts. This portion of the subject is still under consideration."

So far as we can learn, there is very little in the Bill (to provide for the regulation of coolie contracts) to alarm even the most tender-hearted. It will contain stringent provisions for supervising the recruiting of coolies, so strict, in fact, that any recruiter bringing a coolie from one district to be examined before a magistrate in another, will be heavily fined, the fine to be devoted to the re-conveyance of the labourer to the district whence he was brought, and no contract will be considered valid unless a minimum rate of wages is fixed upon, to be fixed from time to time to each district by the Lieutenant-governor. The transference of contracts in case of the death of the employer will be duly arranged for, and there will also be a provision for the transference of a contract from one employer to another, both parties concerned consenting. Hospital accommodation is to be provided for one in every ten labourers, and if there be more than three hundred on any estate the proprietor will have to place in medical charge thereof at least one medical officer, holding a diploma from some Indian or European collegiate institution authorised to grant diplomas, under a penalty in both instances of a sum not exceeding Rs. 500. For the further protection of coolies Protectors of Labourers will be appointed in such numbers and in such places as the Lieutenant-Governor may think fit, the expenses of their maintenance to be defrayed by a levy upon the planters, and these protectors will be empowered to receive complaints from the labourers, and inquire closely into them, assisted in their labours by clear and precise returns, to be supplied by the proprietors or managers of estates, under a penalty up to Rs. 500 in any case of incorrectness. The protectors will also make personal tours, and be allowed, as well as the magistrate of the district or any other authorised officer, to inspect the hospitals and lines provided for labourers, and, above all, in their hands will be vested the power of modifying or suspending a contract in case of sickness or necessary family duties, the latter being capable of the widest possible construction. The manager of an estate who may compel any labourer so incapacitated to do any work for which he shall have been at the time unfitted will be fined Rs. 250; if it be shown that he has withheld the wages of any labourer for a period of more than two months, the contract will at once be cancelled; and he will not be permitted to make his labourers work on Sunday, or for more than six consecutive hours on any of the other six days of the week. Surely all this is protection enough for the labourer to satisfy even Lord Shaftesbury in his most philanthropic mood. And what are the penalties he will have to undergo for any fault on his side? Absence without cause will be punished by the loss of all claim to wages or allowances during the period of such absence, and the forfeiture to his employer of one anna out of each rupee of his monthly wages for each day during which such absence may continue. In case such absence shall have exceeded seven days, or the labourer have been already convicted of the same offence within a period of six months, the labourer will be further sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for fourteen days. Negligence or indolence will also be punished by forfeiture of wages, and, on a second conviction within six months, by rigorous imprisonment for fourteen days. Desertion, or attempt to desert, will, after the closest investigation by the district magistrate, be punished by rigorous imprisonment for a period not exceeding three months for the first offence, and not exceeding six months for any subsequent offence. If, however, the labourer shall have been wrongfully brought up, his employer will have to pay a fine up to Rs. 500; persons who may knowingly entice labourers to desertion will also be fined up to Rs. 500, but no labourer will be punished under the proposed Act if he can prove that his wages have not been paid for two months, or that he has been beaten, illegally confined, or maltreated. It will, however, be provided that no conviction will be held to operate as a release, and at any time previous to the expiry of a sentence an employer may apply to have the labourer made over to him to complete his contract, the magistrate making him over and cancelling the remainder of his sentence. This last provision is, in fact, nearly a specific performance clause, and almost causes wonder why the penal clauses are thought necessary. Anyhow, the employer will have the option of keeping his recalcitrant labourer in prison or taking him out to complete his contract. The majority will probably choose the latter course, and this ought certainly to remove the objection to the "Criminal breach of contract" existing at home. But in spite of that objection, whether the Bill be considered too partial to one side or the other, there should certainly be no longer delay in introducing it into the Bengal Council, where it can be discussed and exposed to the all-powerful ordeal of public opinion. What with deserting coolies, and the two or three black sheep among the planters, the state of Assam and Cachar is disgraceful to such a Government as Mr. Beadon is trying to have that of Bengal regarded, and some law or other can alone remove the slur. There is no occasion for any favour for either party; all that can be expected, all that can be wished, is a law that shall compel the labourer to give a fair day's work without indolence or neglect, and the employer a fair day's wage without violence or ill-treatment.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A FAMILY QUARREL.—It will be in the recollection of our readers that Calcutta was scandalised some time back with the report of differences having arisen between the ex-King of Oude and his son, because the latter had visited the Viceroy without his father's consent. We now learn the result of the family disagreement. Ahmed Ally, feeling himself injured by his father, is anxious to visit England, to lay before her Majesty a complaint that in consequence of his visit to the Viceroy his father has refused to assist him in any way whatever. The Indian Government cannot, without departing from a wholesome practice, interfere in such petty cases. To do so would only make it a party to every petty intrigue which might disturb for a day or two the usual lazy life of native court. Ahmed Ally has, therefore, reasoned himself into the belief of the necessity for invoking the aid of the Secretary of State. The relation between the family of the Nawab Nazim and that of Ally Nuckee Khan, and the approaching departure of the sons of the former for Europe, would seem to have suggested, if not the idea, the means of carrying it out. Ahmed Ally is anxious to join the party, and so secure for himself the opportunity of pouring his tale of woe into the sympathetic ear of Sir Charles Wood. There are, however, two parties to be consulted in the matter. The Nawab Nazim, if he be wise, will carefully eschew any such connection as this would imply, and the Government will do well to set its face against any such enterprise on the part of the heir apparent of his Majesty of Oudh.—Hurkaru.

EAST INDIA IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The value of lands required for canals to be made by the East India Irrigation and Canal Company has been estimated at Rs. 2,29,440 in the Midnapore District, Rs. 69,000 in the Hoogly, and Rs. 14,000 in the Cuttack. But it is expected that only 2½ lacs will be disbursed during 1865-66.

OPIMUM SALE.—The following is the result of the opium sale held on Feb. 10 on behalf of H.M.'s Government:—

	Cheats.	Highest.	Lowest.	Average.	Proceeds.
Behar	2,920	900	850	890-3-8½	25,99,475
Benares	2,435	830	820	826-1-8½	20,11,576

Compared with the sale held on Jan. 10 this gives the following results:—

Behar	Cheats, the same.
Benares	300 cheats increase.
Behar	Rs. 35 increase on the highest price.
Benares	Rs. 50 " " "
Behar	Rs. 25 increase on the lowest price.
Benares	Rs. 65 " " "
Behar	Rs. 31-8-4½ increase on the average.
Benares	Rs. 65-1-7½ " " "
Behar	Rs. 92,050 increase on the total proceeds.
Benares	Rs. 1,34,475 " " "

This gives a total increase on the proceeds of the sale of Feb. 10 of Rs. 2,26,525. We may remark, however, that the highest price is still Rs. 100 below Sir Charles Trevelyan's estimate.

ARGUMENTUM AD HOMINEM.—Sir Charles Trevelyan's advice to the servants of Government, clamouring for more pay, is "that they should endeavour to adapt themselves to the altered circumstances of the times." This was particularly strong from the members of a department, every individual of which, save the chief, draws twice or three times as much pay as he received from Government four years since. The Bombay people in turn urge on Sir Charles to go over to Bombay with his staff, and show how his counsel is to be followed. One of them, a little more personal than the rest, illustrates his meaning by retailing an old anecdote:—"Sir Charles Trevelyan should be invited to come among us for six or eight months, to realise for himself the salary of his demand and supply adjusting machine—just as a gallant colonel of the Bombay Artillery served our Auditor-general some years ago. The colonel was so extravagant as to allow his establishment of six Europeans to occupy quarters at the enormous outlay of Rs. 24 per month. Auditor fumed, retrenched, and said, 'Live in tents.' The colonel quietly replied, 'Thermometer in tents 126 deg.; come up and try it yourself!' Not a word more was heard about living in tents in April in the Punjab after this."

BOMBAY CIVILIANS IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—A question arose recently as to the employment of Bombay civilians in those districts of the Central Provinces where Mahratti is the vernacular language. The proposition proceeded originally from the Bombay Government. It was suggested that young civilians from that Presidency should be made available for employment in the Central Provinces. We believe, however, there is only one district in which Mahratti is the vernacular dialect, and even in that district Urdu disputes with it the palm of being the popular dialect. Urdu is well understood all over the Central Provinces, as was to be expected. It has also to be borne in mind that the administration of the Central Provinces has been framed upon a Bengal model. This renders it highly undesirable to introduce officers trained under a different system, as, if such a plan were carried out, it could scarcely fail to be productive of inharmonious working of the machinery of Government. Again, very few civilians would be required. The Mahratti districts comprise not more than four deputy commissionerships, and to supply their places, allowing for accidents, furloughs, &c., probably not more than one Bombay civilian would be required every year. The old question was brought to the notice of the Supreme Government by Mr. Temple. In reply, he has been informed that the neglect of the present officers of Nagpore to acquire a knowledge of Mahratti might be remedied by Rule XI. for the examination of assistants. There is no need to apply to Bombay for Mahratti-speaking civilians. The Government are of opinion that were the above rule enforced, some arrangement might be made whereby officers serving in the districts where it is the dominant language might be required to acquire a sufficient colloquial knowledge of Mahratti. The rule insists upon the proficiency for all practical purposes of an assistant in the vernacular of the district in which he may be serving. We note that the Government seem to be directing a large share of their attention to the subject of the acquisition by their officers of a good colloquial knowledge of the native tongues.—Bengal Hurkaru.

"REA" DEPOSITS.—The Lahore Chronicle, writing after the recent rains, represents the prospects of the crops in the Punjab as far from cheering. Thousands of acres of land prepared for seed remain fallow for want of rain. In irrigated districts the soil has been made barren by deposits of Rea, the alkaline matter of which we (Friend of India) wrote last year. The writer thinks that this deposit is raised to the surface from a lower situation by the carelessness of the cultivators, who deluge their land with water instead of ploughing it deeply. The surface water gradually penetrates to the soda stratum, and when communication is complete the soda rises to the surface by capillary attraction. This is an ingenious theory, and seems to us much more correct than that which holds that the canal water contains the soda. The Rea deposit does not appear for a year after the land has first been irrigated. The land should be subsoiled and manured, but the careless plan is too dear to the peasant's heart for him to be convinced of this.

THE MEDICAL SERVICE.—The Government would seem to have determined upon some definite action in medical matters. We observe that a committee is to be formed at Lahore, to prepare and submit to Government a list of all medical appointments, civil and military, other than administrative or regimental, showing their present emoluments and consolidated salary. The committee will be composed of the following officers:—F. Cooper, Esq., Commissioner, President; Dr. Butler, Inspector-general of Hospitals; Dr. Scriven, Principal, Lahore Medical School; Dr. C. M. Smith, civil surgeon, Lahore.

CHOLERA IN THE 24-PERGUNNAHS.—Mr. McNeile, the joint magistrate on special duty in the districts of 24-Pergunnahs and Midnapore, has been sending in his report to the Government of Bengal on the measures adopted for checking the progress of epidemic cholera. Accompanied by Drs. Switzer and Bow, and a staff of native medical assistants, he visited Tumlook, Diamond Harbour, and Kedgerce, where he found that cholera had much abated. At Hidgellee, however, the disease was raging with more or less violence over the whole country between the Russoolpore River and the sea, and to the westward more than half way to the Midnapore and Jellapore-road. Certain spots were instantly selected, at which some of the native assistants were located. The cholera first appeared at Fort Mornington and Paroalpara on the Roopnarain, then travelled southward to Mysadul, broke out with violence in the Diamond Harbour sub-division, and fell with great severity on Kedgerce. Travelling still in a southerly direction, it is now on its way to Midnapore. We are glad, however, to observe that, in the opinion of the medical gentlemen attached to the expedition, a decided check will now be put to the ravages of the epidemic. There has not been any satisfactory means for estimating the mortality which has occurred since the outbreak of the disease, but the deputy-magistrate of Diamond Harbour believes that 10,000 deaths have occurred in his sub-division. He admits, however, that this is but a guess. It must not be overlooked that cholera is a regular visitor in those districts every year about January and February. The distress of body and mind produced by the cyclone of the 5th October last is quite sufficient to account for its unusual severity and its early appearance in the present season. —Hurkaru.

THE MAHARAJAH OF GWALIOR having consulted his astrologers about the aspects of the times, was informed by the assembled sages that some bad days were coming. It seems that although his Highness is a Hindoo, he has a high respect for the Mahomedan religion, and in trouble will as readily seek whatever consolations it can afford a wealthy "infidel" like him, as rely on the prayers of his Brahmins. On the occasion to which we allude, he has divided his favours equally between the Pundits and Moulvies. Here is an account of what took place. Three hundred and eight Pundits were ordered by his highness, the Maharajah, to recite their Bhagout, each to finish it in seven days, and two hundred Moulvies their Koran. The kotwals of Gwalior and Lushkur were ordered to proclaim by beat of the tom-tom that during those seven days no butchers and liquor sellers were to open their shops. The inhabitants of Gwalior and the Lushkur were desired by the Maharajah to come and hear the Kutba or the Bhagout. Each Pundit was allowed one silk dhotee and a shawl to cover him while repeating his Bhagout. Twenty-five maunds of different sorts of eatables were cooked and distributed every day. His Highness the Maharajah and all his courtiers and officers went to attend to hear the Bhagout. On the 10th February the recital of it was finished, and a royal salute of twenty-one guns was fired at noon of that day. Cash was then presented to each of the Pundits, and they were dismissed. After the ceremony was over, another salute of twenty-one guns was fired. One hundred rupees were also given by the Maharajah to each of the Moulvies. —Hurkaru.

THE LAST OF THE SETTS.—When the English arrived in Bengal few families occupied a higher position than that of the rich Marwarree banker, Jugget Sett. His wealth was so enormous that it has passed into a proverb amongst the natives. Armed with the power of the purse, he was able to treat with the Nazim, on the one hand, and with the English on the other, making himself equally useful and equally necessary to both, one of the stipulations of the treaty with Jaffer Ally being that Jugget Sett should be chief of the Exchequer. The old banker's name, too, passed into a title, and as far as appearances went he had founded a family, which took its place easily and naturally amongst the nobles of the land. It has been remarked that with the exception of the Delhi monarch and the chiefs of Rajpootana, the English raj is one of the oldest in the country. Nothing was more remarkable in the latter years of the Mogul Monarchy than the way in which families shot into importance. A Persian adventurer became in a few years a Viceroy, a beau sabreur a potentate who held the destinies of India in his hand. But if the decadence of the Moguls saw India become the land of petty sovereigns, the rise of the English has, in spite of pensions and stipends, seen these families sink by a gradual process, under the combined influences of Oriental pride and Oriental luxury to the ranks from which they sprang. Jugget Sett's last descendant died in December, after a long life, notorious only as a voluptuary, and with him, of course, has ceased the family greatness. He enjoyed a pension of Rs. 1,200 per mensem, but this was not sufficient for his wants, and there is reason to believe he left heavy debts behind him. He left also an adopted son, Sett Gopal Chand, and this young man applied to Government for the family pension and title. It has, however, been ruled, and very properly, that the title and pension have died with their last possessor. The young man has some fortune, and the cessation of his connection with Government will, we hope, act as a spur to induce him to make an effort to escape from the life of sloth and luxury which would seem to be the fate of all stipendiaries. The Government have, however, taken up a recommendation made by the Court of Directors in 1844, and have allowed Kishen Chand, brother to Govind Chand, the last Jugget Sett, the handsome sum of Rs. 800 per mensem, for the support of himself and the other members of the family. This pension is, however, only for the lifetime of the present recipient, and on its reversion to Government the connection of the family with Government will finally cease. —Hurkaru.

CABOOL.—The Ameer is making preparations for his campaign against Candahar; but he is badly off for money, and is compelled to apply a little pressure on those about him to replenish his exchequer. Among those selected for the operation are the wives of the late Ameer Dost Mahomed; but the poor creatures swear they would rather starve than advance anything more to their sovereign and chief. The seige of Candahar will try his resources to the utmost. Ameen Khan writes to Sirdar Afzal Khan a letter (which got intercepted), saying that he had 20,000 men in the fort, with one year's ammunition and provision. The Ameer's own supporters are wavering. Futeh Mahomed, who holds Toorkistan, has declared for Ubdalrahman Khan, and has invited him to come over and take possession of the province. The Barukzai chieftains have been disgusted with the Ameer's conduct towards all his brothers, and his confidence in counsellors who keep them away from him.

NEW SYSTEM OF AUDIT AND ACCOUNT.—Under the new system of audit and account, introduced experimentally in Bengal, the several districts in the Lower Provinces have been divided into two classes, and officers incurring petty charges will be allowed permanent advances according to the following scale:—

	First class district.	Second class district.
Collectors...	50	25
Magistrates...	100	50
Officers in charge of jails...	100	50

Out of these advances officers will pay petty expenses, and recover the amounts monthly or oftener, if necessary, by submitting a bill to the Treasury officer. It has been further de-aided that every officer who regularly incurs contingent expenses on the public service will, at the beginning of each year, obtain a general sanction for the expenditure of the year, limited in regard to numbers, rates, or aggregate amount as the controlling officer may consider expedient. This sanction will be communicated to the Treasury officer, as well as the officer concerned, and the latter will then be paid the amount of his monthly bills for contingent expenses, within the sanctioned limit without pre-audit, and without the previous countersignature of the bills by the controlling officer of his department. An abstract of the bill, duly receipted, is to be sent with the cash account, but the bill is to be sent to the controlling officer who has the check of the contingencies of any particular department. This officer will, without delay, examine, countersign, and transmit the bill to the Accountant-General, who, in the event of any retrenchment, will recover the same from the succeeding payment, or otherwise as he may deem proper. Thus, under the new system, contingent bills will be payable on presentation.

A FURIOUS ELEPHANT.—The Delhi Gazette describes a shocking accident that occurred at the Taj Mehal. The Rajah of Jodhpoor paid a visit to that building on an elephant, and had just dismounted, standing by him, when the animal got very restive, attacking immediately a sweetmeat seller close to him. He tore the poor fellow to pieces, the mahout actually being obliged to encourage the ferocious beast in his diabolical attack, to ensure the safety of his own life. Not content with leaving the man in a mangled state, on seeing him slightly move the beast deliberately went up to him and sat on him, remaining there as if to assert his supremacy over the helplessly-crushed one. The Rajah being afraid more damage might ensue, sent sowars out in every direction to warn people not to come that way, and procured from his camp three other elephants, by which means they were enabled to capture the one which had behaved in so unruly a manner, and led him away to camp. The man injured died on the spot. The Rajah, as some recompense, gave his widow Rs. 800 immediately, and settled a life-pension on her in addition, thus atoning, as far as possible, for the irreparable injury done to the unfortunate vendor of sweets.

DELHI.—In spite of modern neglect, and the policy which would, if it could, blot out the very name of the imperial city from the map of the empire, its vitality seems wonderful. Even now it draws to itself some of the influences which, purely of Western origin, are contributing to the general prosperity, and causing a new day to dawn all over India. Unwonted vigour has been infused into the commercial life of Delhi by the extraordinary activity of the cotton trade, and it has become a great centre for the screwing business. According to a news writer in the Englishman, everybody who has a few hundred rupees to invest is joining in some cotton screw press or spinning company, and all day long these machines scream and creak, the shouting of the coolies at work propelling the screws like windlasses combining to render them a perfect nuisance. In all directions inside the city may be seen "upper stories" for the reception of these screw presses (as the horizontal ones have not yet been erected in Delhi), and what with their noise, and the demoniacal screaming of pigeon flyers, the utter confusion and impossibility of hearing oneself speak are most annoying, and remind one strongly of the days of May, 1857, when Delhi city was almost, if not quite, as noisy.

WELLESLEY.—The important province of Wellesley, on the mainland opposite Penang, where there are so many English settlers, suffered from drought as much as India up to the middle of January. The rice crop will be very small.

DOINGS AT DEIG.—There has been a large pic-nic during the week at Deig, given by the officers of the Queen's Bays. It commenced on last Tuesday morning, and continued until Thursday night. About fifty persons assembled together. A long table in the beautiful hall was spread all day, for breakfast, tiffin, and dinner. Games of all kinds were kept up during the day. The band of the 2nd Dragoon Guards was in attendance, and each evening concluded with a dance. The scene called to mind the Decameron of Boccaccio, although the party in the latter consisted of only a select few, and their entertainment was more of a literary and intellectual kind. In both cases also there was plague in the vicinity. It is needless to repeat that Deig, itself is well worth visiting for its own sake, with its elaborate carving, its numerous minute little apartments, and its curious zig-zag passages which lead to nothing, unless, indeed, like the labyrinth at Hampton Court, they may lead to some bewilderment and amazement. Thursday at Muttra was to have been the evening for a theatrical representation on return to the station, but some principal parties not making their appearance the day was changed to Friday. The bill included a choice selection of favourite pieces, dancing, serenading and singing.—Delhi Gazette, Feb. 20.

WET DOCKS FOR CALCUTTA.—At their third sitting the Hooghly and Wet Docks Committee came to the conclusion that wet docks in Calcutta are as likely to be useful and as able to pay a sufficient dividend on the capital sunk on them as docks in any other port; that wharves and jetties, with suitable precautions against scour, might be constructed in the river bank, and that private companies should be encouraged to undertake both docks and wharves. Mr. C. Henfrey, of the firm of Messrs. Brassey and Co., late contractor's agent for the construction of the Eastern Bengal Railway, was examined. He recommended the construction of wet docks at Kidderpore. He would dispense with wharf walls for the docks, and have earthen slopes to the basin, with jetties at intervals. In a dock which he constructed at Chitpore the water deposited one foot of mud a week; dredging machines must therefore be constantly employed, and water must be constantly let in to the docks. They would not be unhealthy, for the water deposits with the silt all offensive matter. He thought no company would undertake the work without a 5 per cent. guarantee either from the State or a river trust.

ROTATION OF CROPS.—A special report to the Bengal Government by the Agricultural Society of Calcutta states that no general system of rotation of crops prevails among the Bengal peasantry, though in many districts the advantages of ceasing for a time the cultivation of cereals are appreciated. The system of land assessment is assigned as the probable reason why ryots do not give their fields the complete rest which is afforded by a clean fallow. How so, in a permanently assessed and zemindaree district? The replies of the various planters and officials consulted show that the reason is the ignorance and consequent laziness of the chassa population. If Mr. Beadon would follow up his praiseworthy shows by extending vernacular education, the peasantry would become intelligent enough to see that proper cultivation will enrich them. In many districts of the North-West, such as Saharunpore, the rotation of crops is the rule. Wheat, gram, and barley succeed each other as spring crops; and jowar, oord, bajra, mote, and dal, as autumn crops. Cotton is frequently sown with the dal, and it very frequently follows sugar.

NATIVE WIDOW REMARRIED.—From the Indian Mirror we learn of another Brahmin widow marriage. Baboo Chundy Churn Singh, of Calcutta, has been united in holy wedlock with Sreemutty Berajmohiny Dossee, an accomplished widow girl of Kishnaghur, brought up in the local girls'-school. The marriage was celebrated with great clat at Kishnaghur, on the 31st January, in accordance with the nuptial ritual of the Brahmo Somaj. The entire gentry of the place, from the nephew of his Highness the Maharajah and his minister to the teachers and advanced students of the college, numbering nearly four hundred persons, were present on the occasion. Some of the respectable native ladies of the place are said to have taken an active interest in the matter.

EXTENSION OF THE JURISDICTION OF CALCUTTA POLICE MAGISTRATES.—During the past year a Bill was introduced by his Honour the Lieutenant-governor in the Council of the Governor-general, proposing the extension of the jurisdiction of the police magistrates of Calcutta in respect of the provisions of the penal code regarding public health. His Honour, in his introductory speech, laid stress on his recent order to the justices of the peace for Calcutta for the suppression of burning ghats within the precincts of the town, and expressed a determination to carry out his order, notwithstanding the protest of the justices based on religious grounds. This circumstance caused a general alarm among the native community of Calcutta as to the real scope of the Bill, and the committee accordingly felt it their duty to represent to the Governor-general in Council the feelings of alarm and apprehension which the measure had occasioned. The Bill has since passed into law, but it has not, the committee are glad to notice, been applied to burning grounds on the banks of the Hooghly.

LAW IN THE PUNJAB.—Can anything be more anomalous, or derogate more from the Queen's supremacy in India, than the fact, mentioned by the Pioneer, that a gang of coiners in the Punjab, who have been for six months suffering imprisonment to which they were sentenced by the Umballa Court, have been released by the Judicial Commissioner on the ground that the coin was not "current of the realm," but recognised as current only in the territories of the Rajah of Jeypore? "It is, therefore, against that Prince, and not against the Queen, that an offence has been committed, and it is for the Rajah to deal with it, if he will." Yet some of the prisoners actually cast the coin, which passes current with many of our subjects besides the tenantry of Jeypore. Truly the Punjab is going from the one extreme of non-regulation justice to the other of quibbling legality. This is almost as bad as the decision of the same appellate court that, because our Government knew the Patna traitors had been conspiring against us for years, therefore they should not be hanged.—Friend of India.

THE NAWAB NAZIM of Moorshedabad, in order to encourage a taste for English education among his Highness's co-religionists in Bengal, some time back offered four scholarships, one for the Nizamut College, one for the Madrissa College, and the other two for the Presidency College. At first he intended to limit their tenure to a period of five years, but, at the suggestion of the Director of Public Instruction, he has extended it to six. In proposing his scheme, the Nawab said that it occurred to him that he might, at one and the same time, show his own appreciation of the benefits he had derived from an acquaintance with the English language, and advance in ever so small a degree the cause of education amongst the Mussulmans of the Lower Provinces. He therefore offered the above scholarships, to be competed for by Mahomedan pupils only.

Mr. MONCK MASON, Assistant Commissioner in Oude, has, at his own choice, been transferred to Bombay, and Mr. Gibson has been appointed in his place as 3rd class Assistant Commissioner in Oude.

LADY CANNING'S TOMB.—The monument ordered by the late Lord Canning for the tomb of Lady Canning in the garden of Barrackpore House has been prepared. The monument is of Sicilian marble, inlaid with the arms of the Canning and Stuart de Rothsay families. This will be laid flat on the tomb. In its centre as a base is a ledger richly moulded on the edge, and over this a cross resting on a dos d'ane shaped slab, with this inscription in the edge—"Sacred to the memory of Charlotte Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Lord Stuart de Rothsay, born at Paris, March 31, 1817; died at Calcutta, November 18, 1861; wife of Charles John Viscount and Earl Canning, first Viceroy of India." From the head of this slab rises a handsome headstone, capped with a cross. The sides of this stone are decorated with a twisted column, and the back is rich with ornament. The height is about fifteen feet, that of the base nearly four feet. The length is fifteen feet, and breadth about nine feet. The design was by Mr. G. G. Scott; the sculptor was Mr. J. B. Philip. The epitaph is as follows:—"Honours and praise written on a tomb are at best a vainglory, but that her charity, humility, meekness, and watchful faith in her Saviour will, for that Saviour's sake, be accepted of God, and be to her a glory everlasting, is the firm trust of those who knew her best, and most dearly loved her in life, and who cherish the memory of her departed."—The above words were written, Nov. 22, 1861, by Earl Canning, who survived his wife but seven months. He left India on the 18th March, died in London on the 17th June, and was buried in Westminster Abbey on the 21st June, 1862." The storm-wave during the cyclone does not seem to have injured the tomb, which is only a few feet above the level of the highest tides.

HINDOO ADOPTION.—The Indian Field, a native paper, says a suit is about to be tried in the Bengal High Court which will raise the novel question whether it is competent in a second or any other wife to adopt a son during the lifetime of the son adopted by the first wife. As Hindoo law, based on Brahminical superstition, requires only one son to perform what the writer calls "certain obsequious ceremonies" for the welfare of the deceased father, it is difficult to see why the question should be raised at all. The case has been instituted by the first widow of the late Baboo Promathnat Deb, as guardian of her infant son, against the second widow. In it are involved the fortunes of an opulent family of Calcutta. Baboo Prossona Coomarr Tagore has been cited as a skilled witness.

THE ALLAHABAD "MELA."—The usual mela or festival at the junction of the Ganges and Jumna below Allahabad fort, has been this year very numerous attended. A local writer estimates the numbers present on the great day, 28th Jan., at 70,000. A filthier or sadder sight we do not know than the spectacle of thousands of cropped and shaven devotees paying toll to the Brahmins ere they step into the river, while clouds of sand fill the air, whole acres of matted hair and filth send forth a horrible smell, and the din of incessant marketing arises above all. Here and there may be seen the missionary's tent or booth, where a succession of addresses is delivered all day and Christian books are sold.

PUBLIC WORKS IN PORT BLAIR are progressing rapidly. The erection of certain buildings has been completed, and the construction of others, and of a few lines of roads, are in contemplation. With a view to place the Public Works Department on a more efficient footing so as to meet the requirements of the settlement, the Government of India has sanctioned the appointment of additional free overseers, clerks and other subordinate officials under the executive engineer, at a cost of Rs. 700 per mensem, in addition to the sum of Rs. 1,000 previously allowed as proposed by that officer.

EAST INDIA RAILWAY MISMANAGEMENT.—

The case of Monohur Lall v. the East India Railway Company (reported in the Hurkaru of the 15th February) is chiefly of importance because of the remarks which Mr. Justice Morgan felt called upon to make regarding the way in which the business of the company is transacted. The plaintiff's case was dismissed, but this does not entirely exonerate the company from charges which affect the general interests of the public. The evidence of a man called Ajoodia Pershaud, and of his dealings with the officers of the company, was simply disgraceful. He appears to have had free access to the receipt books of the company, and it was out of the abuse of this privilege, which ought never to have been conceded to him, that the action took its rise. Leaving this matter on one side, however, the company seems in the position of the Eastern Counties Line last Christmas. The traffic has outstripped the power of the company to manage it properly. Whether at Benares or Howrah, the same slipshod and careless way of transacting business is apparent. If at one station the bales of cotton are not counted, at the other no effort is made to separate them. They get mixed up in inextricable confusion, and after a twelvemonth, and the revelations of a trial for non-delivery, the judge is driven to the conclusion that they are still knocking about the Howrah goods station. The passenger traffic is one in which the public have a more direct interest, its results and shortcomings are more easily watched, and are more eagerly commented upon, but the case is different with the enormous goods traffic of the line. It may, no doubt, be an example of the way the public appreciate the convenience of a railroad to be told that all the stations are crowded with produce, and that at Allahabad twenty-five thousand bales of cotton are waiting for the means of transport; but it says very little for the management of a company in which the public has spent so much money that even when the goods do find the means of transport they cannot be delivered correctly, and that to tamper with the company's books is not a very difficult matter. We commend the judge's remarks to the railway authorities, and after a careful perusal of this most discreditable case we echo his hope that "the interference of the Court will not furthermore be necessary," but that this company will take some pains to identify goods, "in justice to freighters."—Hurkaru.

LOOHAROO.—No sooner is the little revolution over in Looharoo than its chieftain imagines himself in a position to follow the bent of his own inclinations. The Looharoo principality is partly an offshoot from the Ulwur territories, partly the result of a generous fit of Lord Lake. It contains about twenty-five thousand inhabitants, and is miserably poor. Its Nawab, however, has found employment for his army in outraging the territories of his neighbour of Jheend, and has in consequence embroiled himself with the British authorities at Hissar. His conduct and explanations are said to be very unsatisfactory. The Government would do well to deprive him of the chance of creating a disturbance, however trifling, not by giving him an allowance, but by capitalising his claims, and presenting him with a lump sum.

STEAM BETWEEN DACCA AND KOOSHTEA.—The Dacca News notices certain negotiations between the Commissioner of Dacca and the agent of the Eastern Bengal River Steam Company, with a view to the establishment of steam communication between Kooshtea and Naraingunge, which is eight miles by road from Dacca. Mr. Buckland, whose good offices in this matter entitle him to the gratitude of the mercantile community of Eastern Bengal, has obtained from Mr. Prestage the assurance that the agents of the River Steamer Company (whose steamers are the best on these rivers) have expressed their willingness to run a steamer and flats once a week between Kooshtea and Dacca, if the merchants at the latter place, or at Naraingunge can be induced to guarantee 15,000 maunds of freight per week, either up or down at a minimum through rate of 8 annas per maund. If the guarantee can be given, arrangements will be made to have one flat always loading or unloading at Naraingunge, and the steamer would run at fixed times to accommodate both passengers and goods traffic, and more flats would be put on as the traffic increased. If such a guarantee were given for a few months the trade would be thoroughly established, and the passengers and general traffic would be so regular that no further guarantee would be required. Of course no guarantee of this sort can be given that would be of any legal value. But the agents of the steam company would be consulting their own, as well as the interests of the public, by entering upon a venture which cannot but pay.

THE HOOGHLY COMMITTEE.—At their seventh sitting the Hooghly Committee examined Mr. Prestage, agent of the Eastern Bengal Railway. Mr. Prestage, as agent, would prefer a railway bridge across the river at Mugra, near Hooghly, but he thought the public interests demanded it at Cossipore, and a general railway terminus at Tank-square. The cost of extending the Eastern Bengal Railway to the square and building a large station would be £350,000. The land would cost £150,000, but that would be paid by frontages. He thought as many as 30,000 passengers might arrive at and depart from the station in one day, which sometimes happens in London. Mr. Prestage did not stand very successfully a severe cross-examination as to the feasibility of his plan for wet docks at Kidderpore. The committee, in an interim report to Government, recommend that immediate measures should be taken to provide jetties in connection with suitable landing sheds and warehouses on that portion of the strand bank that lies between the Bankshall and Armenian Ghats. Even if wet docks be made these will be necessary. They urge the establishment of a public river trust, and approve of the Bill on that subject before the Bengal Legislature.

RAILWAY TRAVELLING IN INDIA.—The Pioneer records another accident on the East India Railway—the sixth within a fortnight. Between Hattrass and Pallee, during a fog, a passenger train ran into a wood train. As both were going in the same direction, the damage was slight. Again the single line is to blame—it is so crowded with traffic. A seventh accident was this. A Thakoor journeying from Allypore, placed his two purdanushkeen wives and a baby in a palanquin which rested on a truck. The truck took fire, the train was stopped, and the ladies were rescued, but they forgot the child. It was found burnt to a cinder, and the cause was the mother's hookah.

REWAH.—We hear from up-country that a band of robbers from Rewah has committed several outrages in British territory. The Rajah was called upon by Mr. Drummond to explain the reason why these men were allowed to make excursions into British districts, and find a secure retreat in Rewah. The demand would seem to have taken the Rajah very much by surprise. He has declared his ignorance of the whole matter, but has stated his willingness to make whatever inquiries the Government of the N. W. P. may consider necessary, and to take whatever measures may be suggested for the suppression of the marauders.

THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER.—We are informed by the Lahore Chronicle that communication between Kohat and Peshawur is hazardous, in consequence of the road being infested by Wazerees, and other mountain tribes.

FLOODS IN GOOJERAT.—Early in the morning of the 30th January severe rain commenced to fall in the Goojerat district, and continued without intermission for thirty hours. At noon, on the 31st, the river Chenab commenced to rise, from which it was concluded that heavy rain must have fallen at its source, and steps were at once taken to secure the bridge of boats; and although later in the day, the river having continued to rise, the water dashed against the boats in regular waves or surf, the darogah and his establishment managed to keep them well together, until five rafts came against the boats with a rush, which unsettled some of them, but they were again securely moored. Some of the men on the rafts scrambled on to the bridge, but the fate of others is not yet known. Shortly after a large boat, heavily laden, over which the crew had lost control, came with such force against the bridge that it was smashed to pieces, and two of the boats composing the bridge carried away down the stream. The river still rose higher and higher, and the current ran faster and faster as the day advanced, and ultimately all efforts to keep the bridge of boats together became useless, and at last the whole affair was washed bodily away by the furious stream, carrying with it the numerous boatmen and others who had been trying to keep it in its place. Mr. Corbyn, the assistant commissioner, was most indefatigable in his attempts to secure the boats, and has since succeeded in bridging two small streams, and has rigged up four boats to ferry passengers from one side of the river to the other, so that the communication is not altogether interrupted. A correspondent in the district says the rain gauge shows a fall of rain of fifty and a-half inches in thirty-four hours, which surely must be an exaggeration.—Lahore Chronicle.

NATIVE ECCENTRICITIES.—Native Opinion occasionally publishes curious facts about our Hindoo feudatories. The Gaekwar of Baroda, with an eclecticism worthy of Akbar, has sent eleven Brahmins to Benares, and eleven Faquirs to Mecca, to spend a year in acts of devotion, the merit of which his highness hopes to reap. The Maharajah Holkar has fined the richest merchant of Indore Rs. 5,000 for sending carts of grain through his highness's estates without permission. Scindia is described as "deeply engaged in improving the discipline of his forces and in hearing the sermons of hardasses, or public preachers." The native writer quaintly says, "As long as native princes are advised by ministers who have not received sound education, and who have no fixed principles to guide their conduct, upon which the welfare of the people depends, so long there is nothing to expect any good results from them." Of the seven lakhs of rupees about to be spent by Holkar on the marriage of his children we are told that a fifth part is to be raised from the "presents and contributions" of the people. How much squeezing this will require those who have seen a native State will have no difficulty in realising.

MEERUT.—The Mofussilite understands that Government intends to purchase the famous Meerut Mess-house and to convert it into a museum and institute. This was done in Dunn-Dum, but that station has ceased to be garrisoned by a sufficient number of men to make use of the Outram Institute. We believe that the construction of the line of railway past Meerut will lead to several changes in the present cantonments, so as to place the native lines behind those of the Europeans and further from the railway.

ARCHERY AT LUCKNOW.—A large concourse of the residents of Lucknow assembled in the Wingfield Park to witness the prizes presented by the Chief Commissioner shot for by the members of the Lucknow Archery Club. The 1st prize, a bracelet, open to all ladies in Oudh, was won by Mrs. Reid. The 2nd prize, a casket, was won by Mrs. Carey.

THE MADRAS LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL held the first meeting of the session on the 14th January. Besides the Governor the members are the Hon'ble Messrs. T. Pycroft, H. D. Phillips, J. B. Norton, C. Pelly, R. O. Campbell, W. R. Arbuthnot, Shur-fool Omrah Bahadur, A. J. Arbuthnot, and R. S. Ellis, C. B. Mr. Pycroft introduced a Bill to place the functions of magistrates, with respect to laws of a special and local character, on the same footing as they were on with respect to offences against the general law of the land. Mr. Ellis introduced a Bill "to make provision for the administration of Military Cantonments in the Presidency of Fort Saint George." A Bill to prevent gambling all over the Presidency was withdrawn. In the course of the discussion the Mussulman Member of Council took objection to a statement of Mr. Minchin, in a letter on the subject, that the fighting of birds or cocks is a national amusement and openly indulged in by the highest members of the Native Community. In an unusually long speech the Mussulman gentleman expressed his desire to see the Bill passed, because gambling is strictly prohibited by the Koran, and cock-fighting is a scandal to all good Mahomedans.

WAR AGAINST PARAPHRASE.—The Director of Public Instruction at Madras has issued an order cautioning his subordinates against "the abuse of paraphrase," the meaning of which will not be apparent to Englishmen fresh in the country, or who have not yet been initiated into the mysteries of that hugest of shams—the Government educational system. In all Government schools the pupils of the higher classes are expected to explain the sense of what they read, in English. The examiner gives them a line of poetry or prose out of Shakespeare or Bacon, or other classical authors, and they express as much of the meaning as they understand in their own words. As a consequence, they talk the rankest nonsense and the wildest grammar, and the examiner goes away disgusted. To prevent this, months before the examinations come on, the boys get their grown-up friends, frequently the masters themselves, to "paraphrase" whole pages of their English textbooks, and the "paraphrase" is made by heart, so that when the examiner comes, he is surprised at the ease and fluency with which the most complicated passages of the most involved diction are turned into plain, idiomatic English; and the poor man reports accordingly. Educational authorities here are aware of the full prevalence of the practice, and yet it is so well recognised as an essential part in that sham of all shams, their so-called "system," that none ever thinks of putting a stop to it.

AGRICULTURE IN BURMAH.—Government has made the Agri-Horticultural Society of Burmah, recently established with Colonel Phayre as president, a grant of twenty-two acres in the suburbs of Rangoon, for a garden. Agriculture seems to be in a ruder state than even in India. The population is too scanty to care for the long leases we wish them to take. There is only one tea garden in the province, in Arracan, although the hills are well fitted for both tea and coffee. Sugar is made in Martaban, and the cane flourishes near Rangoon. Tobacco seems to have been most successful, and cotton thrives.

CATTLE SHOW AT ADDANKI.—Sir W. Denison presided at the opening of the Annual Cattle Show at Addanki on the 25th January. Crowds were attracted by the Governor's presence. His Excellency was delighted with the show of bulls, and made some purchases. The Madras Times remarks that prize animals fetch large prices. As much as Rs. 300 was asked for the 1st prize heifer. Nearly 400 head of cattle were exhibited. Sir W. Denison is on a tour north to Ganjam.

COL. CAMPBELL has been confirmed as superintendent of the gun carriage manufactory, in succession to Col. Maitland.

SIR HOPE GRANT.—The Madras Commander-in-Chief, with Lady Grant and his staff, arrived at Rangoon from Madras and the Andaman Islands on the 25th January. After completing the inspection of British Burmah Sir Hope Grant will return to Madras and then leave India for England to take up the office of Quartermaster-General of the Army.

THAYET MYO.—In consequence of the growing importance of Thayet Myo in British Burmah, as a commercial port, the Government of India has in contemplation the appointment of a Collector of Customs there, on a salary of Rs. 240,000 per annum, as recommended by the local administration.

MADRAS AUXILIARY BIBLE SOCIETY.—At the last annual meeting of this society, under the presidency of the Hon. C. Pelly, it was stated that during the past year 80,000 copies of the Bible, or portions of the Bible, had been circulated, 52,000 gratis, and 28,000 by sale.

NEILGHERRY TEA.—The first public auction of Neilgherry tea in Madras realised the upset price of three rupees a pound. Surely this is a fancy price.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DECCAN CLUB.—Under the auspices of a Joint-Stock Company a Club is about to be founded at Poona, on the plan, it is said, of the "old aristocratic establishments of White's, Brooke's, and Boodle's. According to the Gazette, the Club is designed to surpass in many particulars the two existing Clubs of Bombay. The building contains, besides handsome drawing and dining-rooms, a library, which is to be liberally furnished with books. This institution alone will be an immense boon to Poona, and to many persons will, in itself, return the value of their subscriptions. Eighty bedrooms will do much to accommodate the troops of would-be monsoon visitors, who at present are debarred from a month of the Poona "season" by the impossibility of getting lodgings at any price. A swimming-bath and a racket-court will form novel and attractive features in the establishment. The most liberal promises are made for the cuisine, the cellar, and all the details of the menage. If these promises are fairly adhered to, the Club Company should be financially a success, for there will be no lack of candidates for election, and there will be no grumbling at the bills. In any case, the Club itself will be a great boon to Poona, and will, in fact, form a genuine social power.

THE USUAL COURSE OF TRUE LOVE.—We (Times of India) stated some days ago that a native lady of high rank had left Poona en route to Baroda, for the purpose of being married to His Highness the Guicowar. She was last heard of as being in Surat, with a retinue of 200 attendants. Costly preparations had been made by order of His Highness, to mark her arrival at his capital with a splendour befitting her rank. The day for the marriage was fixed by the court astrologers, after much ado in their desire to light upon the most auspicious one. Some idea of the magnificence of the arrangements for the nuptial day may be formed, when we state that one of the articles of the programme required that every leaf on every tree in His Highness' garden should have its lamp. A few days passed; when the lady of rank found, in her own case, a sad illustration of the correctness of the saying—"There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip." Her fair fame was not worth a moment's consideration in the Maharaja's opinion against the breath of scandal. An anonymous missive thrown into one of the Rajah's halls, and falling in his way, as intended, alienated his affections from the woman of his choice. This result of her journey in search of a husband is said to have caused her extreme disappointment, and she has left Baroda crest-fallen, to return to her native place.

THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.—The promoters of the International Exhibition are obviously in earnest. At a board meeting held on the 8th February, it was determined to accept the tender of Messrs. Nicol and Co. for the flooring of the building, in whose name the public have the best guarantee that could be obtained of the work they have undertaken being efficiently executed. It was also determined, to prevent any possible delay in the progress of their building, to send to England five lacs of rupees in Government paper at once, to be placed to the credit of their special agent, and to be drawn upon by him under the direction of the London Commission. A resolution was also passed to the effect that there should be a ceremony held at the laying of the foundation-stone of the building; a task at which Sir Bartle Frere has kindly promised his assistance. This event we may probably look for during the month of March. These energetic measures afford a good augury of the ultimate success of the enterprise.—Bombay Gazette.

RACE LOTTERIES.—The law of lotteries in India, being distinct in its application, should receive the most serious consideration of the Government. In defiance of the law, race lotteries are still carried on. Now, no matter who the parties are, the Government officials should not shrink from doing their obvious duty. Whether here, or in Madras, or in Calcutta, or elsewhere, it matters not, the law is clear and decisive against race or other lotteries of the kind. In Baden rouge-et-noir is made a part of the revenue of the State, and even a sovereign potentate pockets his francs with a willing and a welcome smile. Is Sir Bartle Frere prepared to do likewise here? We should like to have the opinion of the Carlton or the Reform Clubs on such proceedings as are countenanced here, and we should also like the opinion of the judges as to the race lotteries, conducted as they are in Bombay. We have no desire to say one word against the many honourable men who are on the turf in India, and who try to promote real sport; but in drawing attention to a matter which is a disgrace to Bombay and the turf itself, we are simply doing a public duty.—Times of India.

RECLAMATION WORKS.—By a special notification the Governor General in Council has decided that all reclamations of marshes, swamps, and lowlying land in the Island of Bombay, as well as all recoveries from the sea which have for their object the provision of building space, or space for wharfage, docks, quays, or landing places, shall be considered works of public utility under Act XXII. of 1863. This will give legal facilities for carrying out the improvements. So far has the madness of speculation gone in Bombay, that there are deluded people who have bought Back Bay Reclamation Shares at seventy-seven thousand rupees premium, to be delivered next year! Mr. John Fleming has, in the interest of the public, raised the question before the Government Committee whether the numerous reclamations now sanctioned or applied for are not causing the harbour to become shallow.

PROJECTED TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—A company has been projected in Bombay to establish a news and telegraphic agency for India, under the title of the Bombay Paper-Making, Printing and Publishing and Telegraphic Service Company. Some idea of the scale on which plans are made in Bombay may be formed from the statement of a local paper that the company, as a preliminary, is to construct its own telegraphic lines all over India. The merchants of Bombay are said to be interested in the scheme, but they propose to start a telegraph company separately, in order to construct the lines. It is curious that, notwithstanding all the complaints of the three Presidency cities, and the offer of Government to allow new lines to be made, talk has not yet developed into action.

ROMANCE OF THE SEA.—The captain of the ship John Allen, lately arrived from Calcutta, has reported losing two of his apprentice boys, on his passage along the coast. The boys, he states, had been reading "Robinson Crusoe," "Monte Christo," and such like books, and had become possessed of some romantic notion of desert island life in consequence. The ship had been steering close inshore during several days, and one morning, when they were wanted for some duty or other, the boys were not to be found. The ship was searched throughout, but there was nothing discovered to indicate their whereabouts. One of the ship's life-buoys, however, had been cut adrift. The ship was at that time about fifteen miles from the land, having altered her course to clear a reef, and from what the captain could gather, the boys, he thinks, must have imagined that the ship was still close inshore, and had jumped overboard with the buoy, hoping to be picked up in the morning by some of the boats which put off to ships with fruit and such like things, all along the coast. They had been borrowing small sums of money from their shipmates, and talking of their desire to remain in the country for some days before they disappeared. The captain is exceedingly distressed at their loss; the more so, that the sea in the neighbourhood abounds with sharks, and it could only be by a miracle that their lives would be saved if they went overboard in the manner supposed. The captain cruised about the spot for two days, keeping men at the mast-heads with glasses, hoping to find some trace of the unfortunate boys, but without success. Their parents are said to be in very respectable circumstances, and the boys were great favourites with their shipmates.

THE BOMBAY TRACT AND BOOK SOCIETY.—During the past year this society printed thirty books and tracts, to the extent of 155,000 copies. The distribution of Vernacula, publications reached 94,164 copies; of English, 36,000. The funds are in good condition.

POLYANDRY.—Let us first see what is the area over which polyandry now prevails. It prevails universally in Tibet, and is common in the Himalayan and Sub-Himalayan regions adjoining Tibet; in the valley of Kashmir; among the Spiti, in Ladak; in Kistewar and Sirmor. It occurs among the Telingese; in the Sivalik mountains, and in Kasia. There are unmistakable traces of its existence till recently in Gurwhal, Sylhet, and Cachar. Farther south in India we find polyandry among the Todas of the Nilgherry Hills, the Coorgs of Mysore, and the Nairs, the Maleres, and Poleres of Malabar. We find it off the Indian coast in Ceylon; and going eastward strike on it as an ancient though now almost superseded custom in New Zealand, and in one or two of the Pacific Islands. Going northward we meet it again in the Aleutian Islands; and taking the continent to the west side and north of the Aleutians we find it among the Koryaks to the north of the Okhotsk Sea. Crossing the Russian Empire to the west side we find polyandry among the Saporgian Cossacks; we thus have traced it at points half round the globe. This is not all, however. Polyandry is found in several parts of Africa and of America. We have the authority of Humboldt for its prevalence among the tribes on the Orinoco, and he also vouches for its former prevalence in Lanzerota, one of the Canary Islands. From ancient history we learn that polyandry at one time existed over even a greater area. Traces of it remained in the time of Tacitus among the Germans. And while in certain cantons of Media, according to Strabo, polygamy was authorised by express law which ordained every inhabitant to maintain at least seven wives; in other cantons the opposite rule was in force: a woman was allowed to have many husbands, and they looked with contempt on those who had less than five. Cæsar informs us that in his time polyandry prevailed among the Britons. We find direct evidence of its existence among the Picts in the Irish Nennius, not to mention traces of it in the Pictish Laws of Succession. Further we find traditions of it among the Hindus—especially among the Rajputs. And we find it among the Getae of Transaxiana (the Yuti or Yuechi of the Chinese historians). To see where else it prevailed we must go back upon our authorities and examine the various phases of polyandry which they present, and obtain a test for detecting its presence where historical evidence of its existence is wanting. The ruder form of polyandry, as we have said, is that in which the husbands are not brothers; the less rude is that in which they are brothers. The polyandry of the Kasias, the Nairs, and the Saporgian Cossacks, appears to be purely of the ruder sort, and is attended by the system of kinship through females only. It is left doubtful what is the form of the institution in some instances, as in the Aleutian Islands and among the Koryaks. But in all the other cases in which polyandry occurs, the authorities show that the ruder form occurs among the lower classes wherever the less rude occurs, except in Tibet, where polyandry is universal and the husbands are always brothers; except in Malabar, where polyandry is universally practised by all classes, saving the Brahmans only, but is of the ruder species among the high caste Nairs, and of the less rude among the lower castes, the Teers, Maleres, and Poleres. It is in the nature of the case that all the possible forms of polyandry must lie between, or be embraced in, the Nair and Tibetan forms.—McLennan's Primitive Marriage.

SURGEONS IN THE ARTILLERY.

Feb. 13.—No. 159.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 403, Dec. 24, 1864, is published for general information:—

Military.—No. 403.

India-office, London, Dec. 24, 1864.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

SIR,—In my despatch, dated Aug. 8, 1863, No. 29, para. 7, I informed you that I had suggested to the Secretary of State for War that the surgeons of the new brigades of artillery and new line regiments should be supplied from the Indian service as heretofore, until the arrangements for the future organisation of the Indian Medical Service shall have been determined upon.

2. I learn from a recent communication from the War-office that the new line regiments, with only three exceptions, together with four brigades of horse artillery, and nine of foot, serving in India, are reported to be without permanent surgeons, and that H.R.H. the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, apprehending that serious inconvenience might ensue, has recommended that surgeons should be at once appointed from the British establishment to those brigades and regiments which are at present unprovided.

3. I have informed Earl de Grey, in reply, that I consider the time to have arrived when arrangements should be made for appointing surgeons to the new brigades of artillery and new line regiments, as vacancies occur for them, from the British medical establishment, and I have requested that all present vacancies might be filled up from that establishment without delay.

4. I request that the necessary instructions may be given with a view to carrying into effect this arrangement.—I have, &c.,

Military.—No. 411.

India-office, London, Dec. 24, 1864.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

SIR,—With a view to assimilating, as nearly as possible, the system under which officers of H.M.'s Indian forces are subjected to medical examination with that which obtains in the British service at home, H.M.'s Government have, in communication with H.R.H. the Field Marshal C. in C., arranged for the formation of a Board of Medical Officers, to be composed of a president, being the present consulting physician to this office, and two members—one to be appointed from among the officers of the Indian Medical Service who may be on leave in this country, and the other to be an officer of the British Medical Department, nominated by the Horse Guards.

2. I request that you will cause it to be notified in General Orders that in future it will be necessary for all officers of H.M.'s Indian army, or of the several Staff Corps, being on leave in Europe, who may desire to appear before the Medical Board, with a view of obtaining such certificates as the regulations of the service may require in their several cases, to apply for permission to do so to the Military Department of this office.—I have, &c.,

Pensions of Uncovenanted Servants.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

The following despatch from her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for India, with enclosure, is published for general information:—

India Office, London, Jan. 18, 1865.

His Excellency the Hon. the GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL, Bombay.

SIR,—I forward to you a copy of a despatch to the Government of Madras of this day's date, No. 1, on the subject of an appeal by an Uncovenanted Servant in that Presidency, against the enforcement in his case of the new Uncovenanted Service Pension Rules.

2. You will observe that, in certain cases, where the application of the new Rules would render it necessary for an officer, in order to obtain his pension, to serve for a longer period than was required by the old Rules, her Majesty's Government authorise the grant of a pension, under the old Rules, provided that he has not at any time availed himself of the benefits conferred by the new Leave Regulations.—I have the honour to be, &c.,

India Office, London, Jan. 18, 1865.

Financial No. 1.

To H.E. the Hon. the GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL, Fort St. George.

SIR,—I have considered in Council your public letter, dated the 31st of October, 1864, No. 38, forwarding a memorial by Mr. J. G. Ferrand, First Uncovenanted Assistant in the Military Department of the Government Secretariat, praying that the new Uncovenanted Service Pension Rules may not be enforced in his case, but that, when the time arrives for his retirement from the service, he may be allowed the benefit of the former rules.

2. The general tendency of the new rules, so far from causing injury to the members of the Uncovenanted Service, is on the contrary to improve their position. In regard to the grant of pensions to Uncovenanted Servants in the enjoyment of high salaries, it had become necessary to fix a more definite limit than had previously existed; but with this exception, the cases will be comparatively few in which the new rules will not be found more favourable than the old.

3. Mr. Ferrand points out that the application of the new rules might render it necessary for him, in order to obtain a pension, to serve for a longer period than was required by the old rules. In the case of any Uncovenanted Servant so circumstanced, who was appointed prior to the promulgation of the new rules, and whom you may consider entitled to favourable consideration, I shall not object to your granting a pension after he has completed the period of service required by the old rules, in the event of his health rendering it necessary for him to retire from your service. It must, however, be understood that an Uncovenanted Servant will not be allowed to take his pension under the old rules, if he has at any time availed himself of the benefits conferred by the new leave Regulations.

4. In making this communication, I think it necessary to call your attention to the great inconvenience which must result from your asking the decision of the Home Government upon some point of the Pension Rules, with direct reference to an individual whose retirement from the service has not yet taken place. It is a fundamental principle of those rules that the full amount of pension is only to be given as the rewards of approved service. Until an officer retires from the service, it cannot be known what amount of pension the Government will consider him to deserve, and their determination can hardly be unfettered, if a decision has been previously passed by the Home Government on his individual case.—I have the honour to be, &c.,

(Signed) CHARLES WOOD.

Officiating Chief Secy. to Government.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

COOLIE LABOUR IN THE BENGAL TEA DISTRICTS.

THERE is at last some hope that both planters and coolies may yet be brought to a proper understanding of the nature of the agreement intended to bind them together, not to sever them. Notwithstanding the virulent declamation of the Calcutta papers—especially of the Englishman—it is impossible to disprove, however easy it may be to deny, the fact that much deception is practised upon the coolies to induce them to emigrate to the tea districts, and not a little harshness after they get there. It is true that, before the coolie definitively engages himself to his new employer, he is shown a tariff of the work that will be expected of him, but the figures he gazes upon have no precise meaning for his opaque and inexperienced mind. He simply believes that he is asked to go to a neighbouring district where his labour will be as light as his wages will be high, and in that cheerful faith he consents to do whatever is asked of him. He is soon undeceived. His troubles commence on the very journey to his new destination; but even if he reached his employer's plantation without more discomfort than he could endure with resignation, no long time elapses before his soul sickens within him. The first discovery he makes is, that he can earn no more in this strange place than he did when dwelling among his own people. Then, the labour is of a kind to which he is all unused. The country, too, is wild, savage, and uninhabited, and his so-called voluntary service acquires in his eyes the semblance of penal servitude. Nor is there, in truth, any very marked difference between the two, if his employer happen to be a hard man and an exacting. Flogging, indeed, has recently been prohibited, but the necessity for a formal prohibition establishes the fact of the practice. And anything more intolerable than the idea of investing the planters with such arbitrary power over their labourers can hardly be imagined. That the party claiming to be aggrieved should sit in judgment on his own case is contrary to all reason and justice. The majority of the planters are, doubtless, humane, liberal-minded men, but the possession, and certainly the exercise, of despotic and irresponsible power, has the inevitable tendency of hardening the heart and rendering it callous and unforgiving. Besides, in most cases a plantation is managed by an agent, and we know from the experience of the Slave States of America and from our own West Indian Islands what sort of treatment is to be expected from an irritable, half-educated, or simply over-zealous overseer. But, say the planters, the coolie does not care for imprisonment—indeed, he is quite content to be locked up for a while in a comfortable jail, where he is well fed and has nothing to do, and the more so because his agreement with his employer is thereby cancelled and done away with. Is not this, however, a clear admission that there must be something very faulty in the coolie's position, or else why should he seek to vitiate a contract which is his only hope of obtaining a livelihood in a strange land? It is childish to talk about the ingratitude and fickleness characteristic of the natives of India. The natives are quite as grateful as other people for real kindness and considerateness, though they may not feel themselves particularly indebted to those who kick and cuff them, and seldom address them without a word of abuse. Neither are they so blind to their own interests as to throw up a sufficient and comfortable maintenance in exchange for destitution and starvation, merely for the sake of a little variety. Treat the native as a European expects to be treated, and he will prove himself a faithful, docile, and industrious servant. But if he be treated as a slave, what is to be looked for but an abject, cringing, lazy, revengeful deportment—in short, all that enters into the idea of "servile"? A specific performance of contracts, the Calcutta journalists pretend, is all that is asked for. But how is this to be attained? Surely not by flogging, or by sending to jail every labourer who complains that he has been unfairly entrapped into a service which he regards with loathing. The first thing to be done, is to take care that a coolie proposing to emigrate to the tea districts thoroughly understands where he is going what it is he will be required to do, and how much he is likely to save out of his earnings. There is no difficulty with the emigrants to the Mauritius. The coolies, there, are perfectly satisfied with their condition. They find themselves among their own people, they live well, and worship their gods after their own fashion. But in the Bengal tea districts they are dispersed in small gangs over a wild inhospitable country, far away from "the ashes of their fathers and the temples of their gods," and, for all practical purposes, beyond the protection of the law. What wonder, then, that they should endeavour to make their way back to their old homes, regardless of a contract which they never understood, and by which they sold themselves into an Egyptian bondage? However, there is now a fair chance of their position being considerably ameliorated, by virtue of a Bill submitted by Mr. Ashley Eden to the Bengal Council on the 18th of last month, the main features of which, as sketched by the Englishman, will be found in another column. The proposed Bill may not be all that could be desired in the interest of the free labourers, but it is decidedly a great improvement on the present state of things, and, if the Protectors of Labourers do their duty with tact and firmness, may ultimately bring about a better understanding between the employers and the employed.

HEALTH OF THE ARMY IN INDIA.

ADMITTING that the alarm created in the public mind by the report of the Royal Commission appointed to examine into the sanitary state of the army in India partook very much of the nature of a panic, it cannot be denied that there still remains large room for improvement in all that concerns the health and efficiency of the British soldier in the East. The annual mortality may not be 69 per thousand, but it is certainly greater than it would be if more attention were paid to the proper ventilation of barracks, the purity of the drinking water, and the quality of the food supplied to the men. It is, no doubt, perfectly true that considerable exaggeration pervades the Commissioners' Report, chiefly owing to the obsolete materials on which it was partly founded, but it cannot be said that they drew upon their imagination for their facts, when we find, on the unquestionable authority of Dr. Stewart Clark, that the all important considerations of ventilation and conservancy are more frequently neglected than taken into account.* As Inspector-General of Provinces, N.W.P., Dr. Clark enjoyed the best possible opportunities of observing the comparative effect of good or bad air and water upon large groups of individuals. According, then, to this intelligent and wholly disinterested witness, the ravages of cholera are caused far more by excessive overcrowding than, as is usually supposed, by the unwholesomeness of the water. Some years ago, when it was customary to herd a large number of prisoners together in district jails, cholera, dysentery, and diarrhoea were seldom, if ever, absent. But after the removal of the long-term prisoners—or two-thirds of the total number—to central jails, these diseases became of ex-trremely rare occurrence. Indeed, for the space of nine years only one case of cholera broke out, though the surrounding villages were constantly visited by that dreadful scourge. On the other hand, at the central gaols, where at least as much, if not more, attention was paid to the conservancy and general management, but where the prisoners were a good deal crowded, the visitations of these epidemics were both frequent and severe. In like manner, when, in 1861, the soldiers of the line regiments stationed at Lahore were dying by scores, the artillerymen quartered in the Fort almost entirely escaped, simply because they were less crowded, and had the best building in the Fort assigned to them. "Cholera and other epidemic diseases," says Dr. Clark, "generally appear in certain groups of men at almost fixed periods; sometimes at one season, sometimes at another; but almost always after the affected have been unduly exposed to foul air from bad ventilation, overcrowding in their dwelling-places, or the massing together of large numbers of human beings, which, even in the open air, will contaminate the atmosphere for some distance, as at large fairs and in large standing camps, where great numbers of people are congregated." No one, of course, disputes the insalubrity of bad water, but it is less noxious than bad air, because "the blood will become much more readily poisoned through the lungs than through the stomach." And it is clear that the water is often blamed when other and more potent causes have been at work. For how, otherwise, is it possible to account for the greater average percentage of deaths to strength from cholera, among the men than among the officers? During the eight years ending 1853-54 the mortality from cholera in European regiments in the Bengal Presidency was only 0.1 among the latter, while it was as high as 7.0 among the former, and yet both were in the habit of using the same water. And it rarely happens that any epidemic, traceable to the water, breaks out on board ship, though the only drinking water on board may be that drawn from the foul stream of the Hooghly. There have been instances of cholera being confined to one side of the ship, or to a particular group of men, while everyone else enjoyed perfect health, so that it could not have been the water which originated the disease. If, then, it be of such vital importance that a sufficient supply of wholesome air should be always furnished to the British soldiery in India, the Government cannot be exonerated from the charge of "culpable homicide" so long as it neglects to provide the European barracks with proper means of ventilation. Dr. Clark, indeed, admits that "the new barracks recently erected have an ample number of openings for the ingress and egress of air, such as doors, windows, open ridges, &c.;" but, for all that, he adds that, "when they are occupied by the regulation number of men, the air during the night time is foul and poisonous." During the hot and rainy seasons it is plain that the air must be set in motion by artificial means; for when the external atmosphere is calm and sultry not the slightest movement will be discovered within, however numerous the openings for the ingress and egress of air. It thus happens that the noxious exhalations from the human body, after ascending a short distance, become cooled, and again descend to be again inhaled. The only effect of punkahs in such cases is to mix up the air of the apartment, so that each individual inspires not only his own, but also his neighbours' exhalations. Dr. Clark, however, is not content to point out remediable evils without making an effort to suggest a remedy. He has, therefore, devised a system of ventilation which appears very easy of application, but which cannot be clearly described without the use of diagrams.

But it must not be supposed that such a practical hygienist is blind to the necessity of providing good water as well as good air. On the contrary, he insists emphatically on the danger to health arising from the use of surface water, whether taken from stagnant pools or from shallow wells. As he unpleasantly remarks, "when a native bathes, he does not carry the water to a distance from the well for the purpose, but he sits on the edge of it, and pours the water over his body, allowing it to run back into the well; and he not only washes his body in this way, but also any little clothes he may have about him, which must be saturated with perspiration and other filth." Tanks are, if possible, still worse, for the bathers either go into them bodily, or else wash themselves and their clothes on the very brink, so that every drop of water they use runs back into the tank. As for the rivers in the lower part of their course, no words can do justice to their filthy and disgusting condition. "I have myself," says Dr. Clark, "seen upwards of fifty dead human bodies, besides numbers of carcasses of lower animals, floating in the River Hooghly, within sight at one time; and these corpses float up and down with the tide until the flesh falls off the bones, and they sink to the bottom, or lie exposed, at low water, on the muddy banks." From one of these three sources the British soldier has to procure the water with which he would slake his thirst on the march, and even when stationed in barracks. Water, however, of sweet and excellent quality can be had almost everywhere in the Upper Provinces by boring to a sufficient depth. The first expense may sometimes be considerable, but it is poor economy to allow men to perish, not one of whom can be replaced for less than £100, when the outlay of a few thousand rupees would remove one fruitful source of fatal maladies. For though unwholesome water is not necessarily poisonous, or in itself productive of active disease, it tends, like bad food, to lower the system, and so predisposes it to suffer from the attacks of epidemic complaints. Even on a march there is no reason why troops should ever be destitute of pure drinking water, if a small number of filter-tanks on spring bullock-trucks—such as are delineated in Dr. Clark's valuable treatise—were attached to each regiment. And it is not only by foul air and impure water that the British soldier in India is brought to an untimely end. His very food is issued to him without the slightest regard to the climate in which he is serving. Instead of being compelled to vary his diet with pulse, vegetables, and ripe fruit, he is allowed as much animal food as would suffice for a sailor on an Arctic expedition. Neither is due consideration paid to the conservancy of military cantonments; but that is a subject which cannot properly be treated in these columns. All who take a real interest, however, in maintaining at the lowest possible sacrifice of men and money the efficiency of the British army in India, will do well to study this unpretending little volume, and judge for themselves how much yet remains to be done before the Government can be held altogether guiltless of "manslaughter."

LUCKNOW PRIZE MONEY.

Mr. SCHOLEFIELD asked the Secretary of State for India whether there would be any further distribution of Lucknow prize money; and if so, when it was probable the distribution would take place.

Sir C. WOOD, who spoke very indistinctly, was understood to say that another distribution was intended, and had in fact been advertised in India. The roll, however, had not yet been sent home. He had asked whether the first roll could not be made available, but he was told it was so inaccurate that it was absolutely necessary to wait till the new roll came home.

EAST INDIA (GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S POWERS, ETC.) BILL.

On the order of the day for going into committee on this Bill,

Mr. VANSITTART asked why enlarged powers in the matter of laws should be granted to the Governor-General, and his power in regard even to small appointments in India restricted?

Sir C. WOOD replied that it had been a standing rule that no new appointment above a certain amount should be created in India without the sanction of the Home Government. The Bill simply continued it.

The House then went into committee on the Bill, and passed it.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP.

FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.—This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when their night past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as effluvia, tending to produce the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and robbing parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bais, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle. SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OWING, we presume, to the carelessness of the telegraphic signallers at Marseilles, the Bombay mail of the 13th March has arrived a day sooner than it was expected.

From Bhootan there is no news of any immediate importance, beyond the intimation that the enemy has plundered some villages in the Durrung district, and is running up stockades in all directions.

The Indian Government, however, has at length been fairly roused to the necessity of adopting prompt and vigorous measures to attain the early termination of an inglorious and exceedingly troublesome campaign.

The field force has been divided into two brigades, to be called the Right and Left Brigades. The former will be commanded by General Tombs, in person, with Major M. C. Sankey, R.A., as his Brigade-major; while the latter will be under the command of General Tytler, with Captain Macgregor as his Major of Brigade. Troops were also being pushed forward from the Presidency Town, H.M.'s 55th and 80th regiments having been sent on from Calcutta by river and rail. Captain H. M. Smith's battery, R.A., the 3rd of the 25th Brigade, left Fort William on the 4th of March, and a flying line of telegraph is to be established between Mynagore and Titalyah, a place about twenty miles from the foot of the hills on the road from Caragolah to Darjeeling.

The Calcutta papers give long accounts of a banquet given by the local volunteers to Sir Robert Napier and Colonel Herbert, who was to sail for England on the 9th in charge of the eldest sons of the Nawab Nazim of Bengal. The chair was taken by Captain John Rose, and among the guests were H.E. the Commander-in-Chief, General Showers, the Hon. J. B. Phear, Colonel Blane, A.D.C., Colonel Douglas, Majors Malleon, Gordon, Thompson, and Cassidy, Dr. O'Callaghan, Captain Paribby, the officers of H.M.'s 54th, and the editors of the three local newspapers. The speechifying appears to have been neither better nor worse than is usual on such occasions, and we read that "the evening was enlivened by several glees given by Messrs. Roberts and Babor, and other members of the Glee Club." Nothing is said about the scramble for soup, or the general melee among the thousand and one Khidmutgars who taint the air and deafen the hearing.

Another great event in Calcutta has been the laying of the foundation stone of the Dalhousie Institute by the Lieutenant-Governor, in presence of the Viceroy, the Commander-in-Chief, and the Lord Bishop. His Honour was assisted by Mr. Sandeman, Provincial Grand Master, while the customary prayers were recited by the right reverend prelate. Mr. Beadon's speech is characterised as remarkably sensible, and very much to the point, but we regret to learn that he was looking far from well.

The speculative success of the Canning Town Reclamation Company has led to the formation of two other schemes, not less ingenious, and possibly not less desirable—if successful. The one has for its object the reclamation of certain portions of the Salt Water Lakes, and shares are already at a premium, though the prospectus has not yet been issued. The other merely undertakes to supply Calcutta with timber and fuel from Orissa and the Central Provinces. The Port Canning shares are down to Rs. 3,500, but original holders will do very well even at that reduction from the Rs. 9,000 to which they rose, with balloon-like buoyancy, soon after their first allotment.

On the opening of the Indo-European Telegraph line, H.M.'s Secretary of State for India transmitted the following message to the Governor of Bombay:—

"London, March 1, 4 P.M.

"The Secretary of State, in congratulating the Governor of Bombay in Council on the successful completion of an undertaking calculated to bring India into closer union with Great Britain, and, under God's blessing, greatly to promote the common interests of both countries, desires also to express to Sir Bartle Frere the sense entertained by her Majesty's Government of the value of his zealous and energetic co-operation in the work which has now been brought to so prosperous a conclusion."

Probably the last official act performed by Sir Hugh Rose previous to his departure from Bengal is a General Order relating to musketry practice in the army. This order "supersedes all former orders on the subject, and is divided into twenty-seven heads. Each company in its turn is to go through a course of preliminary drills under the supervision of the adjutant, which will occupy two days for drilled soldiers and four days for recruits. They will be drilled morning and evening for three quarters of an hour in position and aiming drills. They will then practice individual firing, file firing, volley firing, and skirmishing by sections at distances ranging from 75 to 250 yards in various positions. The period of the year in which the drill and

The great Wahabee trial at Patna has come to a close. The Assessors found the prisoner, Ahmed-oollah, not guilty of the charges of waging war and abetting war against the Queen, but pronounced him guilty of the three other charges of abetting the attempt to make war, &c. The Court therefore, sentenced him to be hanged.

A movement has been set on foot in Bombay, chiefly by Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Bart., the Hon. Walter Cassels, and Dr. Thomas Diver, for the erection of an hospital for Europeans, as a memorial of the loyalty and love borne by the inhabitants of Bombay towards her Majesty the Queen, and of their admiration of the character of the late lamented Prince Consort. The project is patronised by Sir Bartle Frere and other local notables.

In our advertisement columns there appears the prospectus of a limited liability company for the purchase and cultivation of seven valuable tea and coffee estates—together comprising 3,400 acres, of which 1,000 acres are already planted. It is stated that between 700 and 800 acres are in bearing, from which 190 tons of coffee were obtained in 1862-63, and again in 1863-64. The present proprietor, indeed, appears confident of the success of the company, for he not only undertakes to accept one-fourth of the price in shares, but also engages to make a proportionate diminution of the purchase money in the event of the net profits averaging less than 14 per cent. during the first three years. The Moyar Coffee Company comes out under the fostering care of the East India Financial Association, and one promising feature of the prospectus is the intimation that no promotion money will be paid.

TEA AND CINNAMON FOUND IN TIPPERAH.

Extract from a Report by Mr. C. Lane, Chief Civil Asst., Great Trigonometrical Survey, in charge Eastern Frontier Party, dated Chittagong, Aug. 15, 1864:—

"The tea tree was found in Hill Tipperah by Mr. Civil Asst. W. C. Rossenrode, whilst carrying on the approximate triangulation in advance last season, at a hill called Sabrong, in latitude 23 deg. 3 min., and longitude 91 deg. 48 min. There is another tree in this country, called in Bengali the 'maritcha,' growing up to twenty-five or thirty feet in height, the venation of the leaves of which is the same as that of the tea. The leaves are also alternate, and, indeed, in appearance and size, the two leaves bear the greatest possible resemblance, and by itself only that of the 'maritcha' could not be distinguished from the genuine tea leaf, the colour and freedom from down being also the same in both. The only visible difference is that the tea twig has a very small stipule at the base of the petiole, which the 'maritcha' has not; in all other respects they are precisely identical.* It has been said that the tea tree will grow and thrive wherever the 'maritcha' is found; this appears to be the case. It is not impossible the 'maritcha' may be a species of tea. It is to be seen about the hill of Sabrong, where tea was found, as above stated, as well as on the extensive table-land between Gojalia H.S., in lat. 23 deg. 9 min., and long. 91 deg. 36 min., and Tulamura H.S., in lat. 23 deg. 11 min., and long. 91 deg. 48 min., and on the right bank of the River Fenny; indeed, there can be little doubt it is to be met with throughout the portion of Hill Tipperah, between lat. 23 deg. 18 min., and the Fenny, and, consequently, it may be inferred that the tree considered to be the genuine tea would also thrive here. The clove plant has likewise been found indigenous on the table-land between Gojalia H.S. and Tulamura H.S. Other spices would, no doubt, thrive here also. Specimen twigs of the 'maritcha,' of the tea, and of the clove were kindly taken charge of by a gentleman proceeding to Calcutta, but, unfortunately, when there, he did not find time sufficient to take the samples to the Secretary of the Horticultural Society, Mr. Blechynden, for his opinion."

Extract of a letter dated 13th December, 1864, from Mr. Blechynden, regarding the specimens of leaves referred to in Report on the southern portion of Hill Tipperah, surveyed in 1863-64.

"Dr. Cleghorn has been kind enough to examine the specimens of leaves from the Tipperah District, gathered by Mr. Lane, of the Great Trigonometrical Survey, and which accompanied your letter (without date) received last month.

"One of them, Dr. Cleghorn tells me, is clearly a cinnamomum; two of the others belong to Teru-trernicinus plants, and appear to be Thea, but without twig, bearing flowers or fruits; it is not possible to give an opinion as to their specific identity.

"C. LANE, Chief Civil Assistant, Great Trigonometrical Survey, in charge Eastern Frontier Party."

PRIZE MONEY.

In a late number of the War Office Gazette there appears a paragraph which one might almost fancy a joke, though a cruel joke it must be:—

"Notice is given that rolls of officers and seamen of the undermentioned vessels of the late Bengal Marine, entitled to share in the first payment of prize-money for services in Pegu in the years 1852-53, have been received in the India-office, viz.:—Bhaugeruttee, Damoodah, Enterprise, Fire Queen, Indus, Krishna, Lord William Bentinck, Mahanuddy,

* When about taking the field last November, the Commissioner of Chittagong desired me to look out for tea in the jungles of Hill Tipperah. To remove all doubts on the subject, it was deemed advisable to offer high remuneration to two of the hill men if they would gather seed at the proper season, and bring them to Chittagong. It remains to be seen if they will do so.

Nemesis, Nerbudda, Proserpine, Pluto, Phlegethon, Spy, Sutledge, Soane, Tenasserim; and that payment of such shares has commenced in the Marine and Transport Department of the India-office."

"And how many of those present in this Pegu campaign, during the years 1852-53, are alive now to receive this prize-money? If there is one thing more than another that moves the indignation of Englishmen, it is this slighting of the claims of brave men, this putting off, this procrastination which, verily, from hope deferred, maketh the heart sick. Twelve long years have elapsed since this prize-money was earned, and now a first instalment of it is to be doled out to the survivors. Let any one reflect on the changes that take place in a dozen years, and it may be conceived how many men, borne on the rolls of the ships mentioned, are ever likely to demand their rights. We may not feel any vivid sympathy with the wrongs of naval men as such; but this injury concerns both branches of the service. The Deccan prize-money was a bye-word. It was so great a wrong, and of such long continuance, that at last it became a joke. It is a well-known fact that, up to date, many who are entitled to the Indian mutiny medal have not received it, and, from all appearances, seem to have but little chance of doing so, and yet it may be mentioned as a curious circumstance that some officers have actually received two medals for the mutiny campaign. And while the system of rolls for medals being sent up from every regiment and department in which an officer has served is persevered in, it is not to be wondered at that such mistakes occur. The simple remedy would be to insert a memo. "on honor" at the foot of every roll, that the officers' and soldiers' names therein mentioned have not previously appeared in any medal-roll sent in.

The prize-money system requires total revision. The working of it at present is altogether faulty. Government retains the hoards acquired, but gives no interest. No one can say this is unfair, for if Government did not take charge of the money, and become responsible for it, there would be no hope of ever preserving it; but prize agents should be specially appointed by Government, not by choice of the army. The army may choose a man as prize agent for all kinds of reasons except his fitness for the duty. A "good fellow," a man with the knack of putting himself forward, will get the nomination, though with no business habits, no industry, and even no very superstitious probity.

Nothing makes soldiers more sulky than delay in giving out prize-money; and the feeling of the troops is that the next time there is prize to be got, there shall be no laying by of claims while the agents dilly-dally for years over the spoil. It simply comes to this, that the troops, seeing valuables on every side, will appropriate them, as they often can do, and as the Sikh soldiers unquestionably did at Lucknow, preferring to run the risk of punishment to being kept out of their rights for years.—Pioneer.

RUSSIA ON THE FRONTIER OF THIBET.

"What is truth?" is a more pertinent question in the East than elsewhere. For months back this journal, in common with others in India, France, and England, has published accounts of the progress of Russia in Central Asia, has asserted that Russia conquered Khokand last July, has described the visit of envoys from the subjugated province to the Viceroy of India and Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab. Yet now the Gazette de St. Petersburg ridicules the statement that Russia has 12,000 men operating in Khokand, and that the Russians have captured Tashkund and Khokand; and thinks it necessary to add that Russia has no intention of invading Thibet, because Lama is two thousand miles from Bokhara, through which she would have to march.

The following narrative, translated from the Khokanese account of the conquest, will set the matter at rest, while it is most interesting in itself. It confirms in a singular manner the account of the Invalide Russe, which we published on 19th January last. "In the month of Mohurru'm 1281, H. H. [July 1864] the Russians marched unawares from the east into the territory of Oulia Atu and from the north into Turkistan, and occupied by force both the territories which are the principal states in the Dast-i-kapchak [Kirghiz Steppes]. Thereupon the king of Khokand marched with his army and artillery to Chamkarah [Tchemkent], where intelligence was received to the effect that the Russians were determined to invade Chamkarah. A force was immediately advanced against them, and having come upon them at the village of Sipsak the Russian troops were completely surrounded and a great number killed. At last the Khokand troops were ordered to dismount and advance in force against the Russians. They did so, and the enemy were on the point of being made prisoners, and had actually asked for quarter, when intelligence came of the approach of another Russian force from Oulia Atu. The Khokand troops marched rapidly against them—a battle ensued which lasted for twelve days, and a large number of Russians were slain. The remainder, unable to hold their ground, escaped during the night, but not without being hotly pursued for a considerable distance." The explicit denial by an official Russian journal of the recent conquest in Central Asia is, to our mind, more suggestive evidence of Russia's designs, than the conquests themselves. If Russia's advance has no reference to the possessions of other European powers in Asia, why should she deny it so long after the event?

This denial is the more remarkable because we have lately received intelligence of the appointment of General Eydokimoff as Governor-general of the new Khanate of Khokand. This officer finally subjugated the tribes of the Caucasus, and was then put at the head of the Russian expedition which annexed Khokand and Tashkund last July. It was he who saw the importance, as the key of the military command of Central Asia, of the fortress of Ak-Medjid, which is placed at the point where the river Djihoun falls into the Sea of Aral. That sea is now as much a Russian lake as the Caspian. A steam flotilla takes supplies to the fort, and thence they are forwarded to the Russian armies and posts. There can be no doubt that Russia holds Khokand as an integral part of her Asiatic empire, and that she has gained over the Khan of Bokhara to her interests. Since she disclaims the intention of invading Thibet in the same sentence in which she denies the conquest of Khokand, she is doubtless planning a march in the direction of Lassa.

The belief in Central Asia itself is, so far as we have information, that Russia and Bokhara together will do their best to interfere in Afghanistan on behalf of Ufzul Khan, and against our ally the Ameer of Cabul. Meanwhile, the Ameer is making great preparations for his march on Candahar. He has avoided the mistake which led to the massacre of our army and troops by directing the Ghilzae chiefs to be paid all their arrears and three months in advance. The Khans of the Kohistan, too, have received notice to send forward their quota of mercenaries, since the roads are passable. The Delhi Gazette news letter publishes the following information given in a letter from "certain merchants" as to the movements of Russia:—

"The Russians, having left some of their troops under four officers at Khokand, have marched for Oorgunge. The Russians' rule and treatment have been so much liked by the natives of Tashkund, Khokand, and other places, that thousands of the natives of their own will and pleasure have accepted employment under them. Every description of supplies is brought to their camp, and purchased at fair prices. The Khokanese are so much pleased with the Russians that they cheerfully do what they are asked. From Tashkund to Ooratpa the road is quite ready, and from the latter place to Oorgunge the work is progressing. The Russians have applied to the Shah of Persia to make over to them the forts of Murve and Surruksh; and it is very likely that they will get them. Communication between Agha Musjid, where the Russians have got their headquarters and their camp, is quite safe and open, as they always get their ammunition from Agha Musjid. They have made it public that during their march towards Hindostan they will not oppress or trouble any one on any account, and will treat every one in a friendly spirit."

If only half of this is correct it is impossible to overrate its importance. It will be observed that "their march towards Hindostan" is mentioned in a way which shows what Asiatic opinion at least is as to their designs.—Friend of India.

THE REVOLUTION IN CENTRAL ASIA.

CASHMERE.—There has long been a rumour here that Tashkund, Thunkaut, and even Khokand, on the river Sirr, in the Khokand country, and Illu, Ila or Iluskh, with Thurfoan, Aksoo, Kharsha, &c., places east and north-east of Yarkand, have been formally occupied by the Russians. It is said that they have occupied the entire extent of the Khokand country, including the Khurghiz steeps of Pamir down to the Muztoojee passes, as being the grazing and pastoral lands of the Khirghiz hordes, who are subject to Khokand; and that, as the Kojahs of Andejan were friendly to the Russians, the latter have paid for their possession of that place. These same Kojahs (usually termed Andejanees), with the Kipchauks, Khirghiz, Kulmauks, Thunghanes, Mongols, and Thathars, at the private instigation of Russia, rose, and have surrounded and besieged the Chinese citadels of Yarkand, Khashgar and Khotan, and have killed a large number of the Khatthais or Chinese authorities and southern Hindoo merchants, including the Governors of both Kashgar and Yarkand. Money and arms are said to be freely supplied by the Russians to the rebels. They have become so numerous, strong, and bold that, having the entire Mahomedan population of those countries on their side, by whom they are chiefly assisted, as also the full command of all the districts appertaining to those three Chinese provinces, the three citadels themselves, within which the Chinese or Khatthais took refuge at the beginning of the outbreak, must be by this time taken and reduced, and all the Chinese put to the sword. Now no intelligence whatever arrives at Leh-dok from any of the above three provinces. Rodhuk and the whole of Chaangthung as far as Ghurr or Gharrotpa and the lakes of Maunthullau, are seriously threatened, even, it is said, to Lassa. One rumour has it that the general Mahomedan movement of those parts at the present time has been got up by the rebel Taepings of China proper, while another attributes the whole of it to Russian intrigue. The fact that the Russian agents and merchants, who have latterly resided at Kashgar, are said to be not only well respected and treated by the rebels, but to have freely scattered themselves throughout the three provinces and to be in constant communication with the Khojah rebels, would seem to corroborate the latter suggestion.

But it is said that perhaps the Taepings of China proper and the Russians are both working hand and hand in the matter as far as Khokand and Toorkistan. It is said that the Khan of Bokhara has had five Roossia Sahibs of high distinction at his Court for the last six months, without whose advice he does nothing; and his late military movement towards Samarkund was to preclude or cut off the retreat of the Khokanese should they attempt to fly in that direction. This obliged the routed army of Khokand, with its King and Omrahs, to submit unconditionally to the victorious Russians. The Khan is now preparing an army of from 60,000 to 80,000 to take full possession (whether in his own name or that of Ufzul Khan, or his son Abdoolrhaman Khan has yet to be seen) of the whole of Southern Toorkistan, he having previously raised the different populations there against the rule of Shere Ali Khan. A Persian Envoy of high rank is said to be at his Court, with the Roossia Sahibs, and to attend all the State Councils. It is said that Shahzadha Shere Shah, son of the late King of Delhi, and notorious during the Indian mutinies of '57, with three relatives of the Nana Sahib, one said to be his uncle, one a brother, and the third a nephew, have been all, with a large and respectable retinue, more than once, back and forward between Khokand, Bokhara, Balk, Koonduz, Cabul, &c., under the ostensible auspices first of Sirdar Ufzul Khan, and now of his son Sirdar Abdoolrhaman Khan and the King of Bokhara. It is said that after the King of Bokhara and Sirdar Abdoolrhaman have taken the power from Shere Ali, and settled the whole of southern Toorkistan down to the Baamian Pass and Hindoo Kush, whether the King of Bokhara takes that part of Toorkistan or not to himself for his trouble will be decided by the Shah of Persia and the Russians in council with the King of Bokhara and Abdoolrhaman Khan, or Ufzul Khan if released. Then claims to the throne of Cabul proper (but without Candahar and Heerat) will be settled by the united efforts of the Persians, Russians, the Bokhara king, and the Afghans of Sirdar Ufzul Khan's party. Candahar and Heerat are not claimed direct by Persia, still it is supposed that Persia, at the instigation of Russia, will try and place such persons as Mahmood Ameer Khan and Sheruff Khan in possession of those two places, including Kelat and Quetta, so as to be virtually her tributaries.

But how all this and other such like curious rumours now afloat are to be carried out, time alone must tell. One thing is said to be certain, that for some time past both the Yarkund and Toorkistan routes are stopped, and not a single person is allowed to travel through those countries, so all intelligence of what at present may be occurring in those parts must be at the best vague and uncertain. But it should be borne in mind that Andejan is the grand seat and the original cradle from whence Mahomedanism spread eastwards, in those parts to the Walls of China, and all the Mahomedans from Khokand eastward, through southern Siberia and Chinese Tartary, whether Ghirghiz, Kipchauks, Kulmauks, Thathars, Mongols, Khalkas, Thooranees, or Thunghanes, are considered as religious and obedient Murreeeds or disciples of one or other of the great peers, Mookdhooms or Khojah saints of Andejan. Much the same kind of reverence is paid in all these countries to Andejan and its sainted and intriguing Khojahs, as is supposed to be due by all Catholics, no matter under what temporal rule, or in what part of the world, to Rome and its Pope.—From a Correspondent of the Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE PURITAN OF SERAMPORE.—We alluded the other day with the indignation we felt, to the wanton reflections made in the Friend of India concerning a lady who it was incorrectly stated had been invited on three separate occasions to the Viceregal Palace by the mistake of a novice which will not be repeated. We are rejoiced to find by a letter we have just received from Calcutta, that the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal behaved like a chivalrous gentleman in inviting the honourable lady to a ball at Belvidere, where she met His Royal Highness the Duke of Brabant, His Excellency the Viceroy, and the Private Secretary.—Lahore Chronicle.

ANOTHER SANITARIUM IN THE PUNJAB.—Endeavours are being made to establish another sanitarium on the Wuzere border near Bunnoo, at the height of 4,600 feet above the level of the sea. The present name of the place is Sheik Bodeen, probably arising from the name of some patriarch of that name reposing there; though if the place be determined on as a sanitarium for troops, it will be re-christened. The officer selected to report on its eligibility or otherwise, though giving an unfavourable account of its picturesqueness owing to the want of trees, bushes, and gardens, and to the absence of roads for walking, yet considers the climate decidedly salubrious, people there, that is, those going up in good health, being rarely attacked by sickness of any kind. And though it is not considered sufficiently bracing to restore to health people requiring a radical change of climate, yet, owing to the absence of dampness in the atmosphere, it is peculiarly adapted for diseases of the liver or spleen, and invalids are not subject to diarrhoea there. Quoting the report, the writer says—"I strongly recommend Sheik Bodeen as a sanitarium for European soldiers, and especially for women and children. My experience of hill climates is derived from a season at Dugshai with the 1st Bengal Fusiliers, in 1859, when I had medical care of the women and children of the regiment, in addition to my other duties, and of a season in Cashmere, in 1863, when I was on special duty. I consider Sheik Bodeen's climate equal to that of Dugshai in salubrity, though less cool and pleasant. I believe it to be superior to Cashmere, especially for children, the climate of Sheik Bodeen being excellent, and that of Cashmere very indifferent for the European young.—Hurkaru."

ORDEAL BY TREACLE.—The world has not forgotten the large use to which this valuable article was applied in the far-famed Squeers establishment. But that great man, if his researches had extended to this country, might have learned how much further it was susceptible of application even in his own distinguished line. An incident occurred the other day in one of the districts of the North-West which shows the wonderful ingenuity of the native mind in the employment of treacle as an agency for judicial investigation within the domestic circle. We shall allow the new-writer to tell his story as he likes. A Nooneah, that is, a man engaged in the manufacture of molasses, "suspecting his daughter of having stolen some, enquired from her whether she were the culprit, and on her replying in the negative, requested her to prove her innocence by proposing to throw a piece into an iron utensil of boiling treacle, which if she took out without scalding her hand would satisfy him as to her innocence, but if otherwise, she was to be held undoubtedly guilty; superstitious dread, which has an influence on the conduct of the ignorant and semi-barbarous more powerful than even the terrors of a future state, made the unfortunate creature accede to her sanguinolent-minded father's proposal, and as a natural consequence she has been sent to the Government charitable hospital for medical treatment." In this case the ordeal is perfectly unexceptionable. The really innocent escape unhurt while the guilty get so dreadfully scalded that further punishment is unnecessary.

LOOKING A GIFT HORSE IN THE MOUTH.—There is rather a good story just now going the rounds of Calcutta society, which, as it illustrates a peculiar phase in the character of a functionary not very far removed from the Viceroy's private circle, is perhaps worth recording. It seems that the Duc de Brabant, before quitting Indian shores, thought that it would only be an act befitting his Royalty to bestow amongst the staff of the Governor-general some mementos of his visit to the country. Now it came to pass that a certain official received from his Royal Highness a jewelled ring. With the most unctuous phraseology at his command he returned thanks, signifying of course that the occasion was the "proudest moment of his life." About two days after the same gentleman met the Duke, and again gave expression—more unctuously than before—to his thanks, adding that the present was not only "pleasant to view, fair to gaze upon, &c.," but that it was also valuable. The cautious individual (from a sense of delicacy, as in a recent instance, we suppress the name) had suspected the Duke of palming off as a parting gift a Cingalese specimen of jewellery, and to solve his doubts and suspicions had submitted the gem to a Calcutta firm to ascertain its intrinsic value. The feelings of the recipient of this gift in discovering that it was a jewel of the first water may be imagined, perhaps, but not described. What the feelings of the Duke may have been, on being informed that his memento had been weighed and appraised, we leave our readers to conjecture.—Mofussilite.

THE 43RD NATIVE INFANTRY.—If we are correctly informed, the days of the 43rd Bengal N.I., of Dewangiri notoriety, are numbered, and its dissolution will soon leave a gap in the army list. That the conduct of the regiment at Dewangiri deserves disbandment no person will deny; but those acquainted with the constitution of the corps know very well that long before this campaign on the frontier this regiment, and also the 42nd N.I., required such a thorough remodelling as should effect a total change in their personnel, internal organisation, and discipline. These two regiments were formerly the 1st and 2nd Assam Light Infantry Battalions; and on the re-organisation of the Bengal native army four years ago they were mutatis nominibus, but with no material change or improvement that we know of, brought into the line list, and numbered as they now stand. Although subject, like all the rest of the native army since the re-organisation, to "general service," these two corps have never, on the annual reliefs, been moved from Assam, and it was pretty well known that, had they been ordered out of that province, numbers of the men, possibly the greater proportion, would have "cut their names," as the sepoys express it, and left the service. This being the case, the Government has, in fact, been keeping these men embodied and paid for their own convenience in time of peace, without, as in the case of the 43rd N.I., the probability of an equivalent in the shape of good service and behaviour when called to battle. The stamp of men to whom these remarks refer have been kept in the Government service and the province of Assam, because a general impression has prevailed that they alone, of all the races from which we can recruit in India, could stand the climate of that part of the country, which, it was assumed, would prove fatal to soldiers raised in the Upper Provinces of India. Be this as it may, and the point has never as yet been satisfactorily decided, a soldier who can only stand a certain climate, and can do the State no good service in that climate when emergency arises, is literally useless to the Government, and rather a danger than a safeguard to the community. In the interests of the Government and the public, the 43rd N.I. ought to be disbanded; and the 42nd N.I. ought to be sent to the Upper Provinces, when it would soon partially disband itself. Upon the skeleton that might remain the Government could then construct a new and useful regiment, fit and ready for general service, and worth the money expended upon it.—Englishman.

SPORTING EXTRAORDINARY.—The collector, the joint, and an assistant at Mirzapore, have been spending a few weeks in the jungles to the south of the district, and have had extraordinary sport, having bagged twenty-three tigers and two leopards. Of these, fifteen animals were shot in Barhar and Singrowlee to the south of the Soane River, and the rest on the north bank of that stream among the Khymoor hills. The visit of these gentlemen has been a blessing to all that part of the country, for the tigers had become so numerous and daring that many men and cattle had been devoured by them. Not long ago a Zemindar was riding along the main road from Sargooja and the south, attended by several servants, and was carrying his revenue to the Robertagunge Tuhseel, when a tiger suddenly sprang upon him, and dragged him from his pony into the jungle. The bones of the poor man were afterwards discovered, and near them was the money lying which he had intended to pay as his revenue. In more than one instance the collector had his shooting machan placed close to the public road. Indeed, one road, that leading to Kone, had been quite closed to travellers for two or three months, on account of the exceeding great danger which there was in travelling it. It is now reopened, as the man-eater, who had taken such a fancy to human flesh, has been killed.—Pioneer.

RECLAMATION OF THE SALT WATER LAKE.—The talked-of appearance of a new reclamation scheme is exciting a good deal of interest in Calcutta. It has been, or is to be, called, (for I have only ordinary hearsay to guide me regarding it,) "The Salt Water Lake Reclamation Company." I have no idea of the precise amount of the capital proposed to be raised, nor even of the number of shares; but the company is brought forward under the auspices of unchallengeable promoters, and is likely to be regarded with favour by the local public. The prospectus, I presume, will be published immediately; for, it is said, all the shares have been taken up. The project is well thought of by men of position and sound judgment here; and there need be no fear that, if properly managed, it will entail loss on any one. The company propose to make good dry, wholesome arable land of the pestilential swamp of a salt-water lake, that, at a distance of from two to three miles from the heart of the city, bounds the whole eastern suburb of Calcutta from north to south. The reclamation of this land will be expensive, but it will pay, and will confer immense sanitary benefit on Calcutta. At present every puff of east wind that reaches us is laden with febrile infection; for that it became contaminated in its passage over the surface of the Salt Lake, from which emanate constant and most injurious exhalations. The idea of reclaiming this miasmatic expanse is not new. It has been often before mooted, but never seriously taken up till now.—Calcutta Correspondent of the Times of India.

NAWAB ALLEE NUCKEE KHAN.—The ex-Minister of the ex-King of Oude visited Cawnpore the other day. He is not, it seems, allowed to enter Lucknow, and so from Cawnpore his old friends were sent for to meet him. Accordingly, almost all the Nawabs and other notables repaired thither, and the meeting between them and Allee Nuckee is said to have been a most cordial one. It was a farewell meeting, the Nawab being on his way to Mecca. He entreated and obtained the blessings of the High Priest of the Mahomedans on the objects of his journey to the shrine of Mahomet. He is very old and infirm, and in all human probability may not live to return to Calcutta. In that case there will be no end of litigation amongst the numerous members of his family, all of whom will have a desperate fight for the heir's share of his immense wealth.

THE CABOOL REFUGEES.—The residence of the Cabool refugees has been definitely fixed. They will take up their quarters at Jhelum, instead of at Rawul Pindia. Azeem Khan and his brothers have been sent to their new home, and it is hoped they will end their days peaceably.

BANK OF BENGAL.—The directors of the Bank of Bengal on the 25th February raised the rates of interest and discount one per cent. all round.

AFFGHAN AFFAIRS.—We (Englishman) hear that the people of Herat are oppressed by the exactions of the Governor of that province, and that many of the head men and Mulliks have written to Sirdar Mahomed Shureef Khan, that if he desired to possess himself of the place no great difficulty would be encountered. It is said that the King of Bokhara contemplates an advance against Balkh. The Ameer has nominated several Khans for the purpose of guarding the frontier and of acquiring information. A new line of post between Cabool and Balkh has also been established. It is also said that the King of Bokhara has given as his reply to the Ambassadors of Khokan that if they agree to the rule of Khoda Yar Khan he would undertake to free the country of Khokan from the grasp of Russia; but, if otherwise, they were to expect no assistance on the part of Bokhara. This alternative was refused. The Russians are engaged in constructing a road from Sakhi Khan towards Oratippa. Feroze Shah, the rebel Prince of Delhi, receives subsistence allowance from the Bokhara State. Orders have been issued by Government that if any particular refugee once departs from the British territories, asylum shall not be again granted to him. This very sensible order has been probably brought about by the recent conduct of the Afghan refugee, Sirdar Azim Khan, who, while living under the protection of the British Government at Rawul Pindlee, has evidently been carrying on intrigues against his brother the Ameer. The less we meddle with Afghan quarrels at present the better.

ABOLITION OF HOOK SWINGING.—We so rarely light upon a Bengali reformer who proceeds from talk to action that we regret the withdrawal of a Bill to make Hook-swinging, as practised in the Churruk Poojah, penal—introduced into the Bengal legislature by Rajah Sutt Shurn Ghosal. The practice is acknowledged to be inhuman, barbarous, and not justified by the shasters, and yet all the members, from Mr. Beadon to Baboo Degumber Mitter, did not consider it a fit subject for legislation. Mr. Cockerell thought the Penal Code provided against it as a nuisance, but confessed that the magistrate could not put it down so long as the public did not consider it a nuisance; while the Baboo thought that public opinion was sufficiently strong to discourage it altogether. Mr. Beadon promised "to issue orders in a short time," which "he hoped" would have the effect of stopping the practice. Public opinion does not exist out of the presidency towns except to support such customs. If the Churruk Poojah is to be stopped it must be by orders so strict that something more than a "hope" may be expressed as to their result. We look to Mr. Beadon for vigorous action.

NEPAUL.—The Hurkaru states that the two young men sent to the Presidency for the purpose, having acquired a knowledge of vaccination, a proclamation has been issued to inform the people of its uses and advantages. The vaccinators have been very busy operating on the families of the Sirdars and Ameeris, but the people seem unable to abandon their prejudice against it. The Maharaj Dheraj and Jung Bahadoor had not returned from their hunting excursion into the Terai. Colonel Taylor went to the Goruckpore frontier to meet Colonel R. C. Lawrence, the Resident, who took over charge of the office on the 18th Feb. Dr. N. Cheke, instead of proceeding on furlough, will resign the service on the 1st March.

FEMALE EDUCATION has made such progress during the past two or three years, that the time has arrived when the Government might safely take action in this direction. It has been determined to establish in many of the principal stations of Upper and Lower Bengal girls' schools, which shall be under the direct control of the Government.

RAMPOOR FAIR.—We learn from the Lahore Chronicle that the last annual fair held at Rampoor on the Sutlej, in November, was attended by 12,650 traders, from Kunawur, Ladakh, Yarkund, Kulu, Bussahir, and the plains. Merchandise, to the aggregate value of Rs. 2,63,859, was brought for sale, of which the following were the principal items:—

1. Merchandise from Kunawur, Ladakh, and Central Asia:—				Estimated Value.
Churruas	43,000
Wool	54,113
Pusham	71,068
Borax	6,281
2. From the plains:—
Brass and copper, and vessels of ditto	23,000
Gold	5,360
Flour	4,286

Compared with last year, the aggregate value of merchandise has increased by Rs. 41,055-0-7, a result partly attributed to the progress made in the construction of the new road in the valley of the Sutlej.

A NEW SIR LAUNCELOT.—Legal proceedings are about to be instituted against a Christian knight, who did good service in Oudh during the mutinies, for crim. con. with the wife of his brother-in-law. A barrister of the High Court is now engaged collecting evidence in the Punjab, within whose moral atmosphere the event is alleged to have occurred, but whether the injured husband intends going in for pecuniary damages, or desires to inflict the penalties provided in the Penal Code, we are not informed; but as he has been offered upwards of a lac of rupees if he will go to England and compromise the matter, and has refused to accept any amount whatever, it is likely that vengeance, and not money, spurs him on. It is a very pretty case as it stands, and the evidence will open out a panorama of Asiatic morals and sham religion which will astound those who believe that conversion to Christianity removes all Oriental ideas.—Englishman.

THE EUROPEAN EXODUS.—To an observer who confines his attention to each steamer which leaves Calcutta, Northern India would appear to be emptying itself of Europeans. Every year the pressure on the accommodation of the fortnightly steamers becomes greater, as if there were no French line in existence. That, too, is overburdened. No intending passenger who had not secured a berth before November last will be able to leave Calcutta till May. A weekly steamer during the months of March and April would oblige the public as much as it would profit the Peninsular and Oriental Company. Another cold season, and then the stream will begin to flow westward. Now is the time for Bombay to begin to organise a new company which will run to Suez only.—Friend of India.

COMPENSATION TO MR. TER ARRATOON.—The committee, of which Colonel R. Lawrence was president, lately assembled at Umballa, to arbitrate upon the claims of Mr. Ter Arratoon, in respect to the resumption by Government of some of the Bussahir Forests, has decreed him Rs. 20,000 as compensation. The award is considered fair and even liberal.

THE DUC DE BRABANT, before leaving India, marked his appreciation of the services and attention rendered him by the railway officials during his visit to the Upper Provinces by the presentation of various souvenirs. These were accompanied by a few words of graceful kindness, which made the gifts doubly valuable.

REVISION OF TELEGRAPHIC CHARGES.—The Director-general of Telegraphs in India is preparing a revised scale of rates for telegraphic messages, for submission to the Supreme Government. The proposed rates are higher than those now charged. The office establishment of the Government Telegraph Department is about to undergo a thorough revision, to render it more efficient.

THE CHIEF OF FENRAH, in the Harowtee district, which includes Bhoondée, Kotah, and Jhullawa, has been assassinated by his relations. The cause of quarrel has not yet transpired. The authorities have, however, taken the matter up promptly, and have instituted an inquiry into the circumstances.

CHOLERA.—In the Barriepore sub-division of the twenty-four pergunnahs, 65 people were attacked by cholera within a week, 56 died, and the rest recovered. In the Howrah division, 810 persons were attacked with cholera and smallpox, of whom 660 died, 107 recovered, and 43 are still sick.

ADOPTION FEES.—For the future, all feudal and mediatised chiefs will have to give a nuzzaranah, in cases of succession by an adopted son. The nuzzaranah is to be one-fourth of the annual income received in each case by the chief.

THE HON. MR. LEVINGE, having been compelled to go on a further leave of absence to China, for the recovery of his health, Mr. Macpherson has been gazetted to officiate as a judge of the High Court during his absence.

MR. C. ROBERTSON succeeds Mr. A. P. Howell as Under-Secretary to the Government, N.W. Provinces.

HER MAJESTY'S 80th Regiment has left the Presidency for the Bhootan Doora.

REGIMENTAL GARDENS.—The experiment which has proved so successful in the case of the European troops in the Presidency of Madras, of cultivating regimental gardens, has been tried with several native infantry regiments in the same Presidency, and attended with the most gratifying results. Reports from the commanding officers of ten native regiments have been laid before the Madras Government, giving an account of the progress of the experiment. It is amusing to notice the feeling with which, in some regiments, the idea was first received. Some tact and persuasion was necessary to induce the men even to think of the undertaking, their objection being "from Adam's time to the present no trooper was ever guilty of tilling the earth." The rubicon being once passed, however, a great interest and rivalry began to spring up as to the appearance and productiveness of the respective plots, and the men's spare time is passed in cultivating their gardens instead of strolling about the lines and bazaars. One result of the establishment of such gardens is the formation of habits of industry among the men; another is, through the cultivation of flowers, which is also attended to in some regiments, the formation of taste; a third is the substitution of fresh and good vegetables grown by the men themselves for the stale and bad vegetables bought by them in the bazaars, and a fourth is a small profit which they can make from the sale of surplus vegetables. The regiments seem hitherto to have received no aid from Government, excepting some supplies of bad seeds, which would not grow, and some garden tools. The men of some regiments have dug and built wells to enable them in the dry season to water their plots, and others are about to be dug. The satisfactory nature of the reports and the praiseworthy zeal of the men has led the Commander-in-Chief to recommend a grant for prizes on the scale laid down for European troops, but the Governor in Council has granted a fixed sum not exceeding 50 rupees for prizes to each of the two regiments in which regimental gardens have been established a full twelvemonth. The success of these gardens, coupled with the success of the recent exhibition of the products of soldiers' workshops at Meeran Meer, is a proof of the interest that is being taken in the condition and elevation of the soldier, and the experiments are worthy of imitation in other quarters.—Bombay Gazette.

CONVICT OUTBREAK AT TELlichERRY.—An attempt was made in the early part of March by the prisoners in the Tellicherry Jail to effect an escape, in which they were assisted by people outside. A sepoy convict, who did not enter into the conspiracy, divulged the plot to the officers in charge, who took measures accordingly. The signal for the ruffians within was given by four great stones being hurled from slings outside to the top of the building, when one of the prisoners broke through the roof of his cell and attempted to make off. The guard immediately fired, but without effect, except frightening the fellow into a leap over the wall, which landed him with a broken leg. Nothing further occurred that day; but the next, when the Sessions Judge arrived, one of the men became insolent to him and had one hundred and fifty lashes on the spot. Subsequently eight others tried to seize the jailor, but were put down by the guard. It is stated that in some unexplained manner the convicts had for days previous been supplied with tools of all kinds. Not the least remarkable feature in the occurrence is the sympathy of the multitude outside, but then, it is the Moplah country, and a great man among them was pining away in fetters at the time.

MR. STALKART'S PLOUGH.—The Madras Times understands that Mr. John Stalkart, of Calcutta, has brought down a plough of his invention, which promises to be of great utility to native agriculturists. Mr. Stalkart's is a one-handed plough, thus falling in with native ideas, and is adapted only to bullocks. Its simplicity of construction, the superiority with which it does its work, and the ease it affords to the ploughmen, have elicited much admiration. An enumeration of its merits may be interesting to agriculturists, and we therefore add, that the share projects below the sole plate of the plough, so that it always enters, and its long pole and short chain—only eighteen inches—prevent it going too deep, and confer all the advantages of the wheel in the various English ploughs. The share and pole being fixtures, give the plough great steadiness; the yoke also is so constructed as to enable the cattle, without hurt to themselves, to use their full strength—qualities which will put an end to galled necks, and entitle the patentee to a medal of honour from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. We are glad to hear that Government have purchased the plough and yoke with a view to its being thoroughly tried and exhibited to the people.

THE ANGLO-INDIAN MAIL SERVICE.—The Indian Daily News, in advocating the despatch of the Calcutta mails via Bombay, and an establishment of a weekly service between Bombay and Suez, complains of the length of time occupied by the P. and O. steamers, which it speaks of as "monstrous, in the present state of steam navigation," and adds:—"For the purpose of comparison, we may state that the distance between Bombay and Suez is 2,716 miles. That from Liverpool to New York is 3,073 miles. The former occupies an average of fourteen days, and the latter is frequently run in nine days. If we come to another point of comparison, the distance from Galway to New York is 2,815 miles, and it was proposed to run this distance in from seven to eight days. This is little more than half the time occupied on the Bombay line, in communicating with the largest and most important dependency of the British Crown. There is also another element of calculation—the nature of the seas to be navigated, and everything is greatly in favour of the Oriental as against the Western seas. Under these circumstances we submit that the time has well nigh arrived for an improvement in the mail service between England and India. We know that there are difficulties in the way of running weekly steamers between Bombay and Suez. But that difficulty may not be of long continuance. The railway will be completed in due course; and the Exhibition contemplated for next year in Bombay will carry with it a necessity that cannot well be avoided. The enterprising citizens of the western capital will do themselves an injustice if they do not look this subject fairly in the face. If they do so, we can have no fear of the result, as Bombay must become the grand entrepot of the tide of emigration which flows to the east in an augmenting stream. Public opinion is ripe for the change, and it must come in spite of either vested interests or official obtrusiveness."

BANK-NOTE FORGERIES.—Many of our readers will probably remember the clever capture of a gang of forgers in September of last year, when Mr. Souter, the commissioner of police, with some of his detectives, had so skilfully arranged their plans that they ascended, by means of a ladder, to the verandah of a house in the native town, and suddenly entered through the window into the room where the forgers were at work, taking them so by surprise that they were all secured before they could conceal the slightest evidence of their guilt. Several notes were found in the various stages of completion, together with the implements necessary for carrying on their nefarious trade; there was, consequently, no difficulty in securing a conviction at their trial, when one prisoner was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment, one to two years', and the remaining two to eighteen months each. When Mr. Souter took up the appointment of Commissioner of Police, the cases of forgery brought to his notice were very numerous, but the attempts to discover the forgers were for a long time fruitless, owing to the defence invariably set up by anyone detected in attempting to pass a forged note, being that it had been received in the ordinary course of business along with many others, and that the numbers, &c., were not taken. The difficulty will be sufficiently apparent when it is stated that this is the only conviction since July, 1863, although the forgeries were known to be very numerous. To obviate this difficulty, Mr. Souter held out the inducement of liberal remuneration to anyone who would give information that would lead to the detection and conviction of any forgers. This after a time had the desired effect, and resulted in the conviction of the four prisoners above mentioned. We understand that

Mr. Souter laid the matter before Government, explaining the difficulty of obtaining information by any other means, and recommending that the informers and police engaged in the case should be liberally rewarded for their successful exertions. It gives us great pleasure to add that Government has adopted Mr. Souter's suggestion by directing that Rs. 3,000 should be distributed among the three informers and the seven policemen referred to. Between April of last year and the end of January of this, some 88 forged notes have been stopped, representing the sum of Rs. 16,970. Government has therefore acted wisely in giving the Rs. 3,000 in this case, and we hope the plan will be adhered to, for unless a more artistic note were introduced as to render forgery almost an impossibility, no more effective means could be adopted to prevent forgeries in future.—Times of India.

PARSEES IN PERSIA.—On behalf of the Parsee community of Western India, Mr. Manockjee Limjee Antaria will shortly proceed to Persia again with the view to prosecute the work of improving the condition of the Zoroastrians residing in the country, and of devising measures to relieve them from the imposts levied by the Persian Government. This gentleman returned to Bombay a few months ago after working in Persia for upwards of ten years in ameliorating the condition of the Zoroastrians, in making researches regarding all relics and monuments of the ancient Persian kings and heroes, and in effecting all possible arrangements with the court at Teheran to render the burden of taxation upon Zoroastrians as light as possible. He also established a school in Persia for teaching the rudiments of education to the sons of Zoroastrians. He will be accompanied on this occasion by two Parsee assistants. The son of Dostoor Sorabjee, Rustumjee, head priest, also accompanies these travellers with the view to study Arabic and Persian.

THE REPORT ON THE HOUSE OF CORRECTION.—The Report of the Committee of Management of the House of Correction for the past year shows that there has been a very large decrease in the expenses attending the support of prisoners confined in that prison during the past year, as compared with previous years. This is brought about by the better management of the prison both in respect to the enhanced profits derived from prison labour as well as the decreased actual commissariat charges for provisions, notwithstanding the considerable rise in the rates of food, &c. It appears that each prisoner confined in the House of Correction in 1860 cost the State Rs. 14 per mensem; in 1861, Rs. 11-4; in 1862, a little more than Rs. 14, but in the following year 1863, the cost again decreased to Rs. 12; during the past year the cost of each prisoner in the penitentiary was about Rs. 14-5-8 per annum, or Rs. 12-2 per mensem, being about six annas and six pies per diem. Including the additional charges on account of establishment, but deducting those charges which appear in the account for the first time, the cost of each prisoner, as compared with former years was, in 1864, about Rs. 108-10 per annum, or a little less than Rs. 9 per mensem, or nearly five annas per diem. It will, however, be seen that more than one-half the charges alluded to were on account of establishment, and looking to the fact that nearly 400 Europeans were imprisoned in the penitentiary in 1864, a number much larger than in any previous year, and considering the present high prices for provisions and clothing, the committee believe that the greatest economy has been exercised in the management of the prison during the past year.

SIR WILLIAM MANSFIELD.—The Commander-in-Chief reached Kotree by the express train, on the 20th Feb., and proceeded at once on board the commissioner's yacht Oobarah, where every arrangement had been made for his reception. In the evening he crossed the river and visited Hydrabad. The troops were drawn up in line on the general parade ground in full dress, and received his Excellency with the salute due to his rank. After inspecting the line the troops marched past in quick time; this done, the Artillery and detachment 109th Regiment proceeded to their barracks, and the Commander-in-Chief commenced a more minute inspection of the Beloochees, a regiment which has always been a special favourite of his, and lately armed with the Enfield rifle. On the present occasion the Commander-in-Chief expressed great pleasure at again meeting them, was glad to find them looking so well, and assured them he had not forgotten their services with him in the North-West Provinces. All the officers and sirdars were called to the front, and separately introduced by their commanding officer. The Commander-in-Chief visited the barracks of the 109th and Artillery. Our old friends in the former received a high compliment for their general state of efficiency, and the chief then returned to Kotree. We believe it was Sir William Mansfield's intention to have paid the battle-field of Meance a visit, but slight indisposition before he left Kurrachee prevented his doing so. His Excellency left Kotree early on the 21st for Sukkur, where he was expected on the 26th.—Sindian.

THE HILL STATION OF MAHABLESHWUR.—The annual report on this station for the year 1864 has just been issued by the Superintendent, D. H. Cook, and laid on the editor's table. The report for 1863 showed a balance in hand of Rs. 3,508-8-11; that for 1864 shows one of Rs. 6,217-15-10. Of this balance a sum of Rs. 2,091 has been advanced, by order of the collector, for expenses incurred in establishing the Government cinchona plantation at Singmulla, and is to be refunded to the station. The report then proceeds to enumerate various improvements at the station, among which it appears that the Framjee Nusserwanjee Dhurumsalla has been completed and opened for public convenience; several new roads have been cut, and subscriptions partly collected to erect a public hall. The school has again been "revived into life." An attempt was made to collect funds to erect a new church, but as it was unsuccessful, it has been proposed to alter and improve the present building by expending between Rs. 4,000 and Rs. 5,000 upon it. The president of the Station Committee has sanctioned the payment of Rs. 2,000 from the fund, and the residue must be raised by subscription. The cinchona plantation at Singmulla is to be converted into a botanical garden. The Forest Department has been remodelled, and the Municipal Act introduced into the bazaar. The treasury transactions, which reached in 1863 the sum of Rs. 2,20,754, were increased last year by nearly half a lac.

THE "GENERAL HAVLOCK" S.S.—The Bombay Coast and River Steam Navigation Company's new steamer, General Havlock, Captain Kingcomb, arrived in harbour on the morning of the 28th Feb., from Waterford, which port she left on the 6th December, having called at St. Vincent's, Cape of Good Hope, Mauritius, and Cochin, making the run in seventy-four days under steam, and eighty from Waterford to this port. The General Havlock is a pretty little steamer of 280 gross tons, 160 feet length over all, and extreme beam 22 feet 8 inches. Her engines, of 60 horse-power, are direct acting. She is fitted with all modern improvements, and built entirely of iron and teak fittings. The eminent Glasgow firm of Blackwood and Gordon are the builders, who also fitted her engines. This vessel will be a very valuable acquisition to the Company, the more especially since their recent loss of the Johnstone Castle.

MR. A. S. D. GREY. who returned to Bombay on March 1 from furlough to Europe, is appointed acting private secretary to his Excellency the Governor.

A HORSE RAILWAY IN BOMBAY.—The want of some means of public conveyance between the more distant parts of Bombay has long been a matter of great inconvenience, but we are happy to say that this want is soon to be supplied. The project to which we allude is the formation of street railways on the American principle, the first of which is to be from the Apollo Bunder to Byculla. Messrs. Stearns, Hobart, and Co. have concluded terms with the Municipal Commissioners, and the works will be speedily commenced. We understand that the rails have been ordered from England and the carriages from America, and by the time the latter arrive the roads will be ready to receive the carriages. Public traffic by this means, it is expected, will be in full operation by the end of the monsoon. The road will, for most of the way, have a double line of rails. Starting from Apollo Bunder it will run up Juggeeva-street, thence to Duncan-road, and along Duncan-road to the bridge over the Byculla Railway. In returning the road will be down the Parell or Bhendy Bazaar-road to the Apollo Bunder. Should this length of line prove successful, it may be extended to Bandora. There will be three rates of fare. A first-class carriage will start every 15 minutes, a second-class one every five or ten minutes, from five o'clock in the morning until twelve at night. Third-class passengers will be accommodated on the roofs of both classes. The fares will be for the first class four annas, for the second class two annas, and for the third class one anna; and when it is remembered that a passenger can ride all the way, three miles, for these respective amounts, they are doubtless very cheap. The advantages of such a mode of conveyance are too apparent to need enumeration. In most of the large cities of the United States, such as New York, Philadelphia, and Boston, in Havana, Paris, Stockholm, Birkenhead, &c., these conveyances are as common as omnibuses are in London, and the crowds which travel by them prove their great utility. More convenient and more comfortable than the omnibus, they usually accommodate double the number of passengers; and as they run at regular intervals, and stop to set down or take up passengers whenever required, they form one of the most agreeable modes of conveyance imaginable. This new means of transport will prove an immense boon to Bombay, and the promotion and management are in the right hands to ensure success.—Times of India.

THE BAR GRIEVANCE.—Mr. Anstey, it will be remembered, was recently thwarted in his attempt to address the High Court on its Appellate side in the English language, by a Vakil, Mr. Mahadwarao Kristna opposing it, on the ground of his being unacquainted with that language. The Judges then sitting were of opinion that the Vakil opposing Mr. Anstey was entitled to learn all Mr. Anstey might happen to say, so as effectually to reply to it; but as the learned counsel contended that he was entitled, as an English barrister, to address the High Court and every other Court throughout Her Majesty's dominions in the English language, and that if a Vakil knew it not he might for his own benefit employ an interpreter, but could not prevent a barrister from employing the English language. The Judges took time to consider the matter, ordering the case to stand over, pending their decision upon this preliminary point. The point was accordingly considered by all the Judges, including the Chief Justice; and on the 8th of March Mr. Justice Couch delivered the result of their deliberation to Mr. Anstey and other members of the Bar. It was to the effect that the Registrar was wrong in having brought on the case in the Barrister Judge's Court of which the language was English, when the Vakil on one side knew not that language; and when there was no special order by the Court for him to be acquainted with it, and that it would, therefore, be referred to the non-Barrister Judges' Court, of which the language was the vernacular language of the country to which the case belonged.

VALUE OF LAND IN BOMBAY.—A plot of building ground, situated at the back of Messrs. B. and A. Hormusjee Wadia's new premises in the Elphinstone Circle, belonging to the municipality, and measuring four hundred and forty-four square yards, was put up to public sale by auction by Messrs. Crawford and Co., on the afternoon of the 28th of February. It was originally intended to build offices for the municipal commissioners on this site, but that idea having been abandoned, they determined to sell the same to the highest bidder. There were only a few Parsees present at the sale, which was carried on without much animation; notwithstanding which, however, the ground was knocked down at £9 the square yard, to Mr. Dinshaw Hormusjee Pettit; the area, consisting of four hundred and forty-four square yards, therefore, realised the sum of £3,996.

TELEGRAPHIC FRAUDS.—Two signallers in the Calcutta Telegraphic Office were arrested by the police, under suspicion of using telegraphic messages. One message from Bombay conveyed an order on a mercantile firm here for the payment of Rs. 15,000 to a certain party. A similar message for the payment of Rs. 700 came from Madras, and a third from Chittagong for Rs. 800. All these messages, instead of being delivered to the parties for whom they were intended, are said to have been made use of by the signallers under arrest, and the same appropriated among themselves. The results of the police investigations have not yet transpired.—Indian Daily News.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

HIGH COURT CRIMINAL PROCEDURE BILL.

THE report of the select committee of the Governor-General's council touching Mr. Maine's Bill to amend the procedure of her Majesty's High Courts of Judicature in the exercise of their original criminal jurisdiction, is a document of sufficient importance to be summarised for the benefit of those whose newspaper reading does not extend to the official Gazette of India. In considering the provisions of this Bill, the committee first direct their attention to the proposed abolition of the Grand Jury institution, that incidental clause having created so great an excitement among the non-official European residents in Bengal. They especially allude to certain remarks which appear in the report of the Indian Law Commissioners, and which were decidedly opposed to the intervention of the Grand Jury between the magistrate and the sessions judge, as being unlikely to be properly understood by the great mass of the native community. They further admit that in Madras the abolition of Grand Juries has been approved by the Grand Jury of that Presidency as well as by the High Court; and that in Bombay the only dissentient on the Bench was the Chief Justice. And in both those cities the majority, not only of natives, but of Europeans, is believed to be well affected towards the doing away of an institution so singularly destitute of the couleur locale. Besides, there is one very cogent reason against its introduction into the interior, and that is the absence of jurymen of foreign extraction. But the really important feature of the contemplated measure is the facility afforded for the trial of European offenders within a reasonable distance of the scene of the offence. Hitherto it has been necessary to send all European or American criminals to the respective Presidency towns to stand their trial, regardless of the waste of time and money, and the consequent disposition on the part of the individuals aggrieved to put up with the first loss, rather than incur a greater one coupled with much personal annoyance and inconvenience. For the future, however, if this Bill becomes law, if a magistrate finds grounds for committing a European British subject, he will, first of all, send a copy of the charge and of the depositions to the High Court, which will at once communicate with the Government to ascertain if there is any possibility of a commission being issued so as to enable the accused to be tried within a reasonable time. Should there be no apparent likelihood of this happening, the prisoner will be forwarded, as at present, to the Presidency town. This provision is, however, only a temporary one, but is necessitated by the want of proper accommodation for European prisoners in the Mofussil jails. The absence of sufficient means of communication with the principal cities in the interior will further tend, for a time, to prevent the regular or more frequent despatch of judges on circuit. Until, therefore, jail deliveries can be effected at fixed periods, with not too long an interval between, the commitment of European offenders for local trial will not take place as a matter of course, whatever may be the case hereafter. The code of criminal procedure, it is further stated, will be considerably modified when administered by a judge of the High Court; that is, it will be closely assimilated to that which prevails in the Presidency towns. The judge will be always assisted, or impeded, by a jury. As to the number of jurors, the committee prefer nine, deciding by a majority of two-thirds; but nevertheless recommend the retention of the "familiar number of twelve, the verdict to be carried either by unanimity among the jurors, or by a majority consisting of nine, in the event of the judge concurring." Should the prisoner demand a jury of Europeans or Americans, he shall be entitled to do so; and in order to obtain a sufficient number of such jurors, military men, whether commissioned or non-commissioned officers, will become liable to be summoned, always taking care that such summons does not interfere with their military duties. To fill up his time a Judge on circuit will be permitted to try other cases than those of British born subjects. He may also have associated with him a barrister of five years' standing, or a covenanted Sessions Judge, to take charge of such cases as he may indicate; but these trials will be strictly conducted according to the Code of Criminal Procedure.

With regard to the criminal jurisdiction of the High Court in the Presidency towns, it is provided that all charges of capital crimes and all very difficult cases shall, if it so please the High Court, be tried by special jury. Special Jurors will be exempt from service on Common or Petty Juries, and will, in the first instance, be drawn from the present Grand Jury List. But when by death, and the changes and chances of life in India, the Special Jury List is reduced below two hundred, an officer shall be appointed by the Chief Justice to fill up the rota, "regard being had to property, education, character, and intelligence." And if a Judge of the High Court on perusal of the depositions shall consider any charge to be clearly unsustainable, he shall be empowered to make an entry to that effect, which shall be considered equivalent to a nolle prosequi. Should no further charge be urged against the same person on the same grounds within the space of three years, such an entry shall have the force of an actual acquittal—which, morally, it never will have. Such are the principal suggestions offered by the Select Committee of the Viceroy's Council, touching a measure that so nearly concerns all European residents in British India.

RUSSIAN PROGRESS IN THE EAST.

ACCORDING to the Levant Herald, a highly-respectable journal, and one usually well-informed on all matters pertaining to Western and Central Asia, envoys from the far distant Khanat of Khokan are actually on their way to this country to seek the protection of the British Crown. Notwithstanding the absolute and peremptory contradictions of the press of St. Petersburg, it is certain that Russian influence is surely and steadily advancing towards the frontiers of India and China. It does not follow, however, that Russian progress in the East must be necessarily hostile to British interests. Even were the Muscovite securely established in Khokan, there is no inevitable connection between such a contingency and the wild careerings of the Cossack over the Calcutta maidan. And yet no sooner does a native newswriter, in the absence of something else to eke out his report of what might, could, should, or would happen—if it did not happen in quite a different way—inform the journal of which he is the paid correspondent that a Russian army is in Tashkund, or a Russian envoy in Cabul, than the Indian press goes distraught with terror, and sees a Russian spy in every Tartar who tenders borax in exchange for calico. But admitting, for the sake of argument, that the famous Testament of Peter the Great is still the guiding principle of Muscovite policy, it might fairly be asked what is the precise nature of the danger which is supposed to impend over our Eastern Empire. It is clearly not mere intriguing that the Anglo-Indian watch-dogs apprehend. Neither do they appear to anticipate any great influx of Russian officers in disguise, familiar with the Indian dialects, and skilled to win the confidence of the natives. Not even these alarmists seem to anticipate a rising of the Sikhs, led on by men in flat caps and grey coats, nor do they clamour for a Bill to prohibit the importation of artillery from the Caucasus to the eastern foot of the Hindoo Khoosh. The peril that daunts their valorous hearts may rather be likened to the spectre of the Hartz mountains. It is something very huge, very mystical, very awesome, but it is not at all tangible, neither has it any defined shape or hue. For all that, it is not the less portentous, nor, indeed, less useful in filling up an "obvious void," when editorial subjects are hard to be found. In fact, for the purposes of Anglo-Indian journalism, if there were no such region as Russia in Asia, it would be necessary to invent one. The idea, if anything so hazy can justly be called an idea, seems to be that, making the Caucasus his base of operations, the Czar will one day coerce Persia, annex Khokan and Bokhara, overrun Afghanistan, and, raising a motley host from all the peoples of Central Asia, pour down the Afghan passes into the Punjab, gathering to his standard adventurous and discontented spirits from all parts of India. The parallel of the hosts of Xerxes does not recur to the memory of the Calcutta journalists. The case, however, is strictly in point. A heterogeneous mass of ill-disciplined levies, inspirited only by the hope of plunder, and unactuated by the slightest feeling of patriotism or oneness of interests, flung themselves against a small but determined band of patriots, fighting for life and liberty, and moving as one man, and the natural consequence was a signal and complete overthrow. An exactly similar result might be confidently anticipated if ever a Russian General ventured to lead an invading army into British India. It is one thing to encounter and defeat clumsy hordes of ill-armed barbarians, but quite another to overcome small compact bodies of highly-trained soldiers, armed with weapons of precision, supported by a powerful artillery, and relying every man on his neighbour as on himself. Possibly it might not be difficult for the Russians to overrun the countries bordering on the British territories, and even reduce them to some sort of subjection, but it would be no easy matter to remove their mutual distrust and jealousy and inspire them with a common purpose. The union and consolidation of so many distinct nationalities might, indeed, be effected after the lapse of several generations, but it is scarcely worth while to go to war in the hope of sparing our grandchildren that dread visitation. And in the meantime nothing but good can arise from the diffusion of civilisation and all its artificial wants throughout the wide regions that lie between the Caspian Sea and the Himalayas. Even now there is a constant demand for English broadcloths in Bokhara, which at present reach that country through Russia and Persia. It is the same with many other articles of English manufacture, the comparative excellence and cheapness of which cause them to be valued by the rudest tribes of the Tartar Steppes. But, however much the manufacturers of this country may surpass those of other European nations in wealth, in ingenuity, and in enterprise on a large scale, they cannot be brought to give their attention to the organisation of means of transport. They are content to produce the goods, and leave it to those who want them to provide themselves as they can. Neither do English merchants readily condescend to those small details on which a retail trade mainly depends for its success. It is here that the semi-oriental Muscovite especially excels. He is a pedlar rather than a merchant, and prefers a large return on each individual transaction of a limited business, to an accumulation of small profits from a gigantic traffic. In most parts of Asia trade is still conducted very much as it used to be in Europe in the Middle Ages. Large fairs are periodically held at certain conveniently situated marts, to which sellers and purchasers resort from a great distance, travelling in caravans for the sake of mutual protection from roving bands of robbers. By these means petty towns and hamlets are supplied with what constitutes comfort and luxury according to the untutored minds and taste of their inhabitants. The advent of the Russians cannot fail to impart a knowledge of many articles as yet undreamed of in these hitherto almost inaccessible regions, and out of that knowledge will spring the desire of possession. To none will this diffusion of Western ideas and Western "notions"—to use an American phrase—prove more largely beneficial than to the manufacturers and merchants of England, for they are the source from whence these new wants must be supplied. But whether it be advantageous to British interests or otherwise, it is idle to fret and fume against a universal law of human nature. Of two neighbouring countries, the one that is most highly organised, or furthest advanced in civilisation, must inevitably exercise, as it were, a magnetic influence upon the other. Throughout all creation there is an innate tendency to produce an equilibrium. The great will magnify the little, or the little will pull down the great; but in one way or the other a balance will be struck for good or for evil. Instead, therefore, of expressing either fear or regret at Russian progress in the East, it would be both more liberal and rational to rejoice that light is dawning in dark places, and to render every assistance in our power to develop a result as creditable as it will be beneficial to all concerned in bringing it to pass.

SCINDE RAILWAY.

The half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on the 29th March at the London Tavern; W. P. Andrew, the chairman, presided.

The reports of this company's undertakings—namely, the Scinde, the Punjab, and the Delhi Railways, and the Indus Steam Flotilla, abstracts of which have appeared in this paper, were taken as read.

The CHAIRMAN, in moving the adoption of these reports, expressed the deep regret he and his colleagues felt at the loss, by death, of their excellent and able agent, Mr. R. W. Stevens, who had the entire confidence of the local Government during the construction of Punjab Railway, and had performed his duties to the company in the most satisfactory manner. The traffic on the Scinde Railway had not come up to the expectations of the directors. In the past half-year there had been a slight falling off in the receipts from exceptional circumstances. There had been a combination among the native merchants not to send their goods by the railway unless the trucks were placed at their disposal. This had caused some delay in sending the traffic over the line, but at the same time the native merchants were too wise to trust their goods to the river craft. The depressed state of commercial affairs had something to do with the matter, but otherwise the prospects of the Scinde Railway were as good as ever. If the line cost more than was contemplated, he was sure the traffic from the Punjab would more than compensate for the extra outlay, and that there was a great future before them. The flotilla kept up the communication regularly from the terminus of the Scinde Railway at Kotree up the Indus to Mooltan, the terminus of the Punjab Railway. One of their vessels recently brought down a cargo from Mooltan to Kotree, the freight for which amounted to £3,500. If all their vessels were as complete and efficient as that vessel the returns from the flotilla would be very large. It was a very difficult river to navigate, but they found that many of their smaller vessels had turned out more profitable than some of the larger vessels, which were considered superior to them. They had also a number of vessels that were earning nothing, owing to an unfortunate dispute with the contractors, but that had now been settled, and he trusted that those vessels would become available, and that the returns would increase. Their officers managed the flotilla in a very efficient and admirable manner, and they had met with no accident to any of the vessels. The first sod of the Punjab Railway was cut by Sir J. Lawrence in 1856, and in three years afterwards the first section from Lahore to Umritsur was opened for traffic. Sir J. Lawrence opened the first section of the line between Lahore and Mooltan last year; and he (the chairman) had no doubt that the whole of the Punjab Railway was now open and working to Mooltan. The estimated cost of this railway was about £2,500,000, and would be finished for something less than £10,000 per mile. It was the cheapest railway in India; and, owing to the favourable gradients and the absence of heavy works to keep in repair, the maintenance would be light and the working expenses very moderate. The great central station at Lahore was a very handsome and important building, and he expected that the Delhi line would contribute its share of the expense of building it. The works on the Delhi Railway were now occupying great attention in the Punjab, as it would be a continuation of the Punjab Railway from its junction near Umritsur to Delhi, where it would also form a junction with the East Indian Railway. The inhabitants of Delhi were most anxious for its completion, and the site of the station would be within the walls of that city. It was a line of great commercial importance, and the works had been commenced on it at both ends. The construction of the line would be carried on with energy and spirit, and every effort would be made to complete it as early as possible. The surveys were going on with a view to supply the missing link between Kotree and Mooltan along the valley of the Indus. This line had been delayed in the most unaccountable manner; its construction was of the utmost importance in a political and commercial point of view, and it was surprising that it had not been made long ago. It would, in fact, form the great bulwark to protect the empire, and the great channel of communication from Kurrachee to the interior. Three routes were being surveyed along the valley of the Indus, and he believed that before the next rainy season the surveys would be completed, so as to admit of the selection of the best route for the railway.

Sir T. H. Maddock seconded the motion for the adoption of the report.

Captain Wood, the superintendent of the Indus Steam Flotilla, entered into an explanation as to the working of the steamers, and showed that the net earnings, after paying all expenses, making ample reserves for repairs and insurance, yielded a return of 3½ per cent. upon the capital expended on them, or 2½ per cent. on the entire capital of the flotilla, including that which had been unproductive. This, he thought, under the circumstances, was a very fair result. The success of the boats was due in a great degree to the energetic exertions of the officers of the company in working them, and endeavouring to secure large freights. He believed that the traffic would become so great that when the Indus Valley Railway was completed the line of steamers could not be dispensed with.

In reply to questions by Mr. Seymour and Mr. Hayman, it was stated that the accounts of the company were being adjusted by the Government authorities, so that it was impossible to say at present what were the actual net earnings of the railway since the opening of the line; but they had worked at a profit from the commencement. The length of one route along the right bank of the Indus was 550 miles; by another route, crossing the Indus at Sukkur, would be 500 miles; and the third, along the left bank of the Indus, would be 450 miles, which was the route the chairman had recommended. By the last mail it appeared that the officers of the company had traversed the whole line from Lahore to Mooltan, 220 miles, stopping at various places to examine stations and works, and they accomplished the distance, including those stoppages, in twelve hours. The scale of rates for goods and passengers was too low, and efforts were being made to raise them.

Resolutions were passed adopting the report, re-electing the retiring directors, Sir T. H. Maddock and Mr. J. E. Anderdon, and also Mr. E. Thornton, the retiring auditor. Mr. McKinnon was also elected an auditor. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings.

INDIAN BRANCH RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that the works on the Lucknow and Cawnpore branch were progressing satisfactorily, and were likely to be completed at the end of the year. The permanent way and other materials required for the line, together with the engines and rolling stock, would probably all be despatched within the next four months, so that there was every prospect of the line being opened for traffic early next year. The report on the Nulhattee line was satisfactory as regarded the condition of the permanent way and works generally, but no doubt some disappointment would be felt at the limited amount of traffic. On this subject the directors had lately addressed a letter to the Government of India, pointing out that the reason of the traffic, which at one time promised favourably, having fallen off during the last six months of 1864, was, they understood, that the Trunk Railway had not sufficient rolling stock to carry the traffic which was brought to its stations; and that at Nulhattee, as at all other stations between Calcutta and Benares, goods were kept lying for so long a time that the merchants of Moorsshedabad and the neighbourhood preferred at present not giving up other means of transit, though greatly inferior to the railway. A very limited staff was engaged in surveying operations, which had been so far carried on that it would be unwise to abandon them, but with this exception the expenditure of the company was at present restricted to the construction of the Lucknow and Cawnpore line, and the working and maintenance of the Nulhattee line. The financial account showed that £151,492 had been expended to the 31st of December last, leaving £64,427 in hand and at interest. The revenue account from the 21st of December, 1863, to the 31st of December, 1864, amounted to £5,209, and the expenditure to £2,746, leaving a balance of £2,463.

BOLDERO v. THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MARCH 30.

The noble and learned lords present this morning were the Lord Chancellor, Lord Cranworth, Lord Chelmsford, and Lord Kingsdown.

This was an appeal from a decision of the Lord Chancellor affirming a judgment of the Master of the Rolls in favour of the respondents.

Sir F. Kelly, Sir A. Cairns, and Mr. Joseph Chitty appeared for the appellant; and Mr. Forsyth, Mr. Giffard, and Mr. Melville represented the respondents.

The question in this appeal was whether the appellant, as the executrix of her late husband, John Stephen Boldero, formerly a civil servant of the East India Company in Bengal, was entitled to the refund from the accumulated amount of his subscriptions to the Bengal Civil Service Annuity Fund in excess of half the value of the annuity of £1,000 which was payable to him out of the fund, and was received by him from the time of his retirement from the Civil Service in 1852 up to the day of his death. The suit was virtually instituted on behalf not only of the appellant, but of the other subscribers to the fund who were similarly situated. The Annuity Fund was established in 1825, and the question turned mainly upon two points—first, upon the construction of the lengthy documents establishing the fund; and, secondly, upon the subsequent despatches and conduct of the East India Company, as well in relation to that fund as to other annuity funds established in India by the company upon the same principles. It appeared that the civil servants of the Bengal establishment agreed to pay 4 per cent. on their official incomes towards the fund in question, the East India Company engaging to contribute a like sum annually towards the same object. The income derived from these sources far exceeded the charges upon the fund, and in April, 1850, there was, according to the appellant's statement, in the hands of the company, to the credit of the fund, an unappropriated balance amounting to £600,000, and after paying the whole of the charges upon it there would at that time have remained a disposable balance of £108,000. It was alleged that the company proposed to convert the whole of the principal of the fund to their own use, and to pay the annual charges upon it out of their revenue. The appellant and the other subscribers to the fund objected to such an arrangement being carried into effect until they had been repaid out of the fund the whole of the amount they had contributed in excess of half the value of their annuities, the proportion the company fixed for them to contribute. On the other hand, the company, among other allegations, stated that the fund in question was insolvent, and that, therefore, there was no pretence for the claim of the appellant.

The cause was argued at their Lordships' bar early in the Session, when time was taken for consideration.

The Lord Chancellor, in delivering judgment this morning, regarded a despatch of 1824 as forming the contract between the parties, and on a passage in that document the appellant founded her contention that no subscriber should be called upon to subscribe more than one-half the value of his annuity. Such in his (the Lord Chancellor's) opinion was not the true meaning of that passage, which only went the length of stipulating that no subscriber should be entitled to an annuity until he had paid half the value of his annuity. The fundamental rule of the society was that every subscriber should contribute to the fund during the full time of his service—namely, 25 years, during 22 years of which he must have resided in India. The company undertook to guarantee the sufficiency of the fund during the first 25 years, provided the deficiency did not amount to more than half the value of the annuity claimed, but it was nowhere stated that in the case of the subscribers contributing more than half the value of their annuity such excess was to be repaid them. Under these circumstances, he thought the decision of the Court below was correct, and must be affirmed.

Lord Cranworth and Lord Chelmsford having concurred.

The appeal was dismissed without costs.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

COLONEL WAUGH'S CASE.—On Wednesday there was a certificate meeting in re Colonel Waugh, of Branksea Island, Dorset, and also of 10, Upper Grosvenor-street, lately trading under the title of "Branksea Clay and Pottery Company." Creditors unsecured £58,257, holding security £260,343.—Mr. Linklater, for the assignees, said it had been proposed to prosecute the bankrupt for a misdemeanor, but the late Commissioner Evans declined to order the expenses of the prosecution out of the estate, and the creditors refused to apply the assets to a prosecution. The Branksea Island Estate had been sold for £30,000, which was less than the sum for which it was mortgaged. The furniture and articles of vertu at Branksea and Hyde Park, estimated at £39,000, realised £8,000, altogether the total produce, including carriages, horses, &c., reached £90,000, and as the assignees considered the twelve months' imprisonment already suffered to be sufficient, they did not oppose the bankrupt's certificate.—Commissioner Goulburn, under the circumstances, now granted a third-class certificate.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, &c.—The report of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, to be presented on the 12th of April, states the disposable balance to be £63,349, out of which the directors feel it necessary to set aside £22,000 to meet bad and doubtful debts from the recent depreciation of Eastern produce. From the balance of £41,349 they recommend a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum for the half-year, leaving £1,349 to be carried forward. The reserve fund now stands at £105,000.

SUSPENSION OF MESSRS. BREMNER AND CO.—The suspension has been announced of Messrs. Bremner and Co., in the East India and Brazilian trade, with liabilities for about £150,000, of which about £100,000 is secured. According to some statements there are fair assets, and the liquidation is likely to be comparatively favourable. The house, in its present form, was established only in 1862.

SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The shipments of specie by the Peninsular and Oriental steamship Delhi represent £32,708, the whole, with the exception of a small parcel of gold for Madras, being silver for Galle, Singapore, Hong Kong, Foochow, and Shanghai.

EAST INDIA COAL COMPANY.—On Monday, March 27, an extraordinary general meeting was held to consider the general position of the undertaking, and particularly an offer to purchase the property and shares, and to authorise the directors to sell the estate, or wind up the company, or to take such other steps as might be deemed most expedient; Mr. Wilde was in the chair. It was agreed to appoint a committee to report to the shareholders upon the present position, and as to the best means of forming a new company in London.

SUSPENSION OF MESSRS. KELSON AND CO.—Much regret has been occasioned by the suspension of Messrs. Kelson, Tritton and Co., East India and general merchants, a firm with large engagements, who have struggled for some months against losses sustained from other failures, and the severe and uninterrupted fall in produce. Their present commitments, although much less than those outstanding a few months ago, amount to about £900,000, of which, it is believed, two-thirds will be provided for by other parties primarily liable. The corresponding house at Liverpool will, it is said, not be in any degree affected. The firm hold scarcely any produce on their own account, and the partners are understood to entertain a strong conviction that the liquidation will not be unsatisfactory. It will be influenced, however, by that of Messrs. Smith, Douglas, and Co., who suspended on the 24th inst., and who are indebted to Messrs. Kelson, Tritton, and Co. to the extent of about £90,000.

ENVOYS FROM KHOKAN.—If, as is probable, the mission of the Envoys from Khokan should extend to England, the event will not be the least strange among the characteristics of the age. The Envoy at present at Constantinople had, we believe, a lengthened interview with Sir H. Bulwer in Egypt, and in consequence of that interview may have resolved to continue his journey to the mistress of India. The bearer of another and a later message from the same quarter is expected, and the two will possibly undertake the Western mission in company. They seek the protection of Britain as suppliant representatives of a throne which, in the days of Tamerlane, gave audience at one time to five hundred Envoys of dependent Princes. Their opinion of the long arm of Britain is shown by their attempting an errand so foreign to their habits; and the general impression as to the power and determination of England when her interests are directly concerned will probably deter Russia from more direct proceedings towards the Indian frontier. At present she proclaims to the world that she seeks neither, but simply a commercial road through Bokhara to China, and excuses her late formation of the province of Turkistan on economical grounds, alleging the distance of the district from Orenburg, hitherto its chief lieu and the centre of its administration. The Khokanese mission will prove to Russia that the eyes of the world are on her, and its very strangeness may awaken her to the remembrance of the danger of provoking European interference. She will be compelled to confine herself to her present professions, and if she does not go beyond them she will, after all, have only opened a road by which the commerce of all nations will be ultimately facilitated and advanced.—Levant Herald.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.'S 52ND REGIMENT.—The sailing ship Nile, Commander Owens (one of Messrs. Green's fleet of Indiamen), arrived at Portsmouth on Friday morning with the left wing of the 2nd Regiment on board, consisting of Major Crosse, in command; Capt. Keyworth and Parry; Lieuts. Wingfield (and Mrs. Wingfield), Mickelburgh, and Barwell; Ensigns Blakeney, Scott, and Adams; Assistant-Surg. Goharty, 243 men, 11 women, and 28 children. The Nile was towed into Portsmouth harbour on Friday afternoon, and immediately afterwards the troops were landed at the dockyard and marched into the Cambridge-barracks, Portsmouth, to join the headquarters. The disembarkation of the troops was effected in one hour and a-half from the time the ship entered the harbour, at the end of which time she had sailed again for London.

The Queen of the South left Sandheads, Calcutta, December 27; Madras, January 7; and the Cape of Good Hope, February 12.

THE MAILS, &c.—SOUTHAMPTON, April 4. —The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Delhi, Captain Parish, sailed hence this afternoon with the mails for Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, Egypt, Aden, Ceylon, India (except Bombay), and China. She took out 40 first and 24 second class passengers, and on freight 142 boxes of specie, value £36,753. 16s. 8d., for the following ports, viz.:—Galle, silver coin, £430; Madras, gold coin, £90; gold thread, &c., £1,038; Calcutta, jewellery, &c., £2,088. 16s. 8d.; Singapore, dollars, £21,000; Hong Kong, bar silver, £1,000; dollars, £2,958; watches, jewellery, &c., £869; Foochow, dollars, £2,000; and Shanghai, dollars, £5,230. O'Brien, General Smythe, Dr. Freer, Dr. McKennan, R.N., Colonel Sorell, C.B., Captain Price, and Lieut. Neile.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the cultivation of Coffee and Tea on the Western Slopes of the Neilgherry Hills, and in other parts of Malabar, Southern India.

The Directors have provisionally purchased seven valuable estates, two of which, Strathern and Maryland, are freehold, and situate in Wynaad, on the Government road from Beypore River to the Neilgherries, and five, namely, Moyar, Kulliad, Pencraig, Coedmore, and Thorapooly, are renewable leaseholds, held at an average rental of one rupee an acre, and form one large block of land, bounded on one side by the before-mentioned road, on another side partly by the new Government road from Beypore to Mysore, and on another by the Moyar River. The district is well known for the production of Coffee, which bears a high character in the English market.

All the estates are conveniently situated for the transit (by road and water carriage) of their produce to the coast for shipment.

The seven estates are estimated to contain altogether 3,400 acres, of which 750 acres are in bearing. The vendor guarantees there are at least 816 acres under Coffee cultivation; however, it is estimated there are upwards of 1,000 acres planted out. The properties, with their estimated averages, are described in the Schedule annexed.

The price to be paid for the estates, including the buildings, machinery, stock, appliances for cultivation, and nurseries, is £51,000 (subject to survey of the property, as mentioned in the agreement for purchase), of which the vendor will accept one-fourth in Shares of the Company, and the cash by instalments, extending over three years from the 1st April, 1865.

The vendor has made arrangements for the management of the estates by competent Superintendents, whose services the Company can retain.

The land in bearing in the years 1862-3 and 1863-4 produced a crop of Coffee averaging 190 tons for each season.

The Moyar Estate has for two seasons produced crops averaging 15 cwt. per acre from the land in full bearing.

The Strathern Estate has produced crops exceeding 10 cwt. per acre from the land in full bearing.

The Kulliad Estate has given 7 cwt. per acre in its second year after planting, and the other estates promise to be equally productive when they come into bearing.

It is estimated that from the 750 acres of land in bearing in the season 1865-6 the crop should not be less than 240 tons, which at present prices will yield a return of 16½ per cent. on the capital called up.

In the season 1866-7 it is estimated there should be 850 acres in bearing, which should give 820 tons, yielding a return of 19½ per cent. on the capital then called up; and in the following season it is estimated there should not be less than 1,000 acres in bearing, which should give 370 tons and a return of 18½ per cent. on the capital then called up.

The above is a low estimate, being only at the rate of 6 2-5ths cwt. per acre for the first year, 7½ cwt. for the second year, and 7 2-5ths cwt. for the third year.

The agreement with the Vendor provides that, if upon the account of the first three years' working of the properties being taken, the net profits shown shall not amount to a sum equivalent to £14 per cent. per annum on the capital of the Company as called up, the deficit (whatever it may be) shall be deducted from the balance of purchase-money due to the Vendor.

It has been proved that the growth of Tea and Cinchona can be profitably combined with that of Coffee in certain parts of Wynaad; the Directors, therefore, propose to direct their attention to these productions, especially looking to the fact that the Tea which has yet been produced in the Neilgherries has met with a ready and local sale, at prices seldom less than 4s. per pound. There are a few acres of Tea planted on the Estates, and some portions are producing seed and leaf.

The cultivation of the estates may be very considerably extended, and there are other properties in the immediate neighbourhood which may (by special resolution of the Shareholders) be purchased and worked to advantage by the Company.

Pasture of the finest description is abundant at all seasons in the vicinity of the estates.

The vendor's Agreement for Sale of the property, and the Articles of Association, can be seen at the Offices of the Company.

No promotion money will be paid, and the preliminary expenses will be limited to such as are absolutely necessary. If no allotment of Shares be made, the deposit money will be returned in full.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Sedlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Sedlitz Spring in one compound powder. It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinodine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fever should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street London, W.

CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S). Cholera,

Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cramp, Ague, Consumption, Asthma, Cough, Colds, Bronchitis, Sea Sickness, &c., immediately relieved by a dose of TOWLE'S CHLORODYNE, which is admitted to be a most wonderful and valuable medicine, and preferred by the profession for its known composition and moderate price.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.

Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.

Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay, and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marselles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

(Signed) GEORGE ALLEN, Chief Officer.

J. C. CONGDON, Master.

Retail by Chemists, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. per bottle. Supplied Wholesale and for Export by the Manufacturer, A. F. TOWLE, Chemist, 93, Stockport-road, Manchester.

Appointed Agents: DWARKANATH, GOOPTEE, and Co., Calcutta; LEVY, BROTHERS, Melbourne; W. STEELE, Brisbane, Queensland; SKELTON, Sydney.

NOTHING IMPOSSIBLE.—The greatest and most useful invention of the day, AGUA AMARELLA.—Messrs. JOHN GOSNELL and Co., Three King-court, Lombard street, Perfumers to Her Majesty, respectfully offer to the public this truly marvellous fluid, which gradually restores the human hair to its pristine hue—no matter at what age.

The Agua Amarella has none of the properties of dyes; it, on the contrary, is beneficial to the system, and when the hair is once restored, one application per month will keep it in perfect colour. Price one guinea; half bottle, 10s. 6d. Testimonials from artists of the highest order and from individuals of undoubted respectability may be inspected on application.

Messrs. J. GOSNELL and Co. have been appointed P. r. f. umers to H.R.H. the Princess of Wales.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA.—

The medical profession for thirty years have approved of this pure solution of Magnesia as the best remedy for Gout and stomachic disorders of every kind; and as a mild aperient it is especially adapted for ladies and children. Prepared solely by DINNEFORD and Co., Chemists, &c., 172, New Bond-street, London; and sold throughout the world by all respectable Chemists. CAUTION.—See that "Dinneford and Co." is on each bottle and red label over the cork.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR

TEETH.—This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when thought past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease, and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pain in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—PROTECTORS OF

HEALTH.—In the hand-to-hand struggle for existence in the present day good health is everything. Holloway's purifying, digestive, and gently-laxative Pills are admirably adapted for restoring soundness to invalids, whose functions are so feebly performed that life itself seems most precarious. The stomach has its many maladies removed by a judicious use of these Pills, the torpid liver is roused by them to active secretion, and every other organ subserving digestion, is placed at its natural standard and better fitted for its duties. It is impossible to have a doctor at our elbow at all seasons and places, but these Pills will supplant that loss, for they universally act beneficially in every ailment.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news from Bhootan which reaches us by the Calcutta Mail of the 10th March is, so far as it goes, of a favourable character. The Bhootahs are reported to have ceased from their vigorous outburst of attacks upon the British outposts, and of raids into British territory. Preparations for hutting the Europeans were in progress, and a road to the foot of the hills was being actively pushed on. The Indo-European Telegraph, however, places us in possession of intelligence as late as the 2nd of the current month, and of a highly satisfactory nature. Sir Bartle Frere states, on the authority of Sir William Mansfield, that on that day General Tombs re-captured the lately evacuated post of Dewangiri, with trifling loss. The enemy made a stout resistance, and lost 130 slain, and thirty taken prisoners, including two chiefs, while on the British side not a single officer, at least, was killed.

To the Telegraph we are again indebted for very important news from Calcutta, touching the financial statement made by Sir Charles Trevelyan on the 31st of March. Instead of the promised surplus of £800,000, there is a deficit of £144,000. Next year, however, there is to be really a surplus of half-a-million, although the income-tax is to expire at the end of July. The expedients devised by Sir Charles Trevelyan for restoring the balance between expenditure and income are strangely inconsistent with his English reputation as a Whig of the purest water. He imposes an export duty of 3 per cent. on jute, wool, tea, and coffee; and of 2 per cent. on hides, sugar, and silk. At the same time, the duty on grain is increased one anna per maund, and on rice it is raised from 2 to 3 annas. Grateful, however, for the pleasure and benefit he has derived in the Hills, from copious draughts of country-brewed beer, he reduces the import duty on hops to one per cent. The financial condition of India is declared to be prosperous, notwithstanding the substitution of a deficit for a surplus, and the adoption of a retrograde system of finance. Sir Charles Wood has been compelled to acknowledge, in his place in Parliament, that the news had taken him by surprise, and was quite opposed to what he had expected.

The three eldest sons of the Nawab Nazim of Bengal, under the excellent guidance of Colonel Herbert, are among the passengers by the present mail. It is much to be desired that other Mahomedan princes and chiefs would follow the example of his Highness of Moorshedabad, and send their sons forth to make the "grand tour" of Europe.

The Serampore Journal is again seized with a panic because it has been reported, on the authority of a native news writer on the staff of the Delhi Gazette, that the Russians have asked permission of the Khan of Bokhara to pass through his territories, in order to search for gold and silver mines in the province of Budakhshan, which is almost contiguous to Cashmere. "All roads lead to Serampore," and therefore a Muscovite editor may shortly arrive to take charge of a certain weekly paper, at present addicted to sensational spasms.

We regret to announce the death, on the 6th March, in the Officers' Hospital, Chowringhee, of Major G. E. Rose, of the 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade, and Aide-de-Camp to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. The deceased officer saw service in the Crimea and the Indian Mutiny; and was to have gone home in command of invalids and time-expired men in the ship Malabar, which left on the 7th March, for England.

Sir Harry Parkes, K.C.B., at present her Majesty's Consul at Shanghai, is spoken of as the successor to Sir Rutherford Alcock, K.C.B., as Minister in Japan. Sir Rutherford has succeeded Sir Frederick Bruce at Peking.

THE EVACUATION OF DEWANGIRI.

Hitherto, almost all the reliable accounts of the evacuation of, and retreat from Dewangiri, have been furnished from the garrison itself; but we are now in possession of details from this side of the passes, which throw an additional light upon the whole affair, and show how menacing and formidable were the dangers and difficulties which beset the defenders of the place, and rendered a further tenure of it impossible, if a man of the British force was to be saved from death or capture. It appears, according to our last information, that when it was known that Dewangiri was seriously menaced, Captain Cunliffe, of the 12th N.I., was ordered off with a party of forty men of his regiment, to escort supplies and ammunition to the garrison, and was instructed on no account to enter the pass until he should hear from Colonel Campbell, commanding in Dewangiri, that it was clear. This officer reached Koomrekatta by forced marches in three days, and on the fourth proceeded towards the pass, having heard that coolies and elephants had gone up with supplies unmolested. When half way up, a dak runner from Dewangiri was met, with a note from Colonel Campbell, stating that the Bhootas had established themselves on the east side of the position; that he could not dislodge them, and was at a loss what to do. On receiving this intelligence, and knowing that he could not get up the pass till night, Captain Cunliffe thought it better to wait till morning, and see what intelligence he could get as to the real state of affairs. In the evening the elephants and coolies returned, the latter saying that although they had got down the pass all safe, the Bhootas were collecting in considerable strength, and an escort had to be sent with them part of the way. In the middle of the night a letter arrived from Colonel Campbell, in answer to one which Captain Cunliffe had written in the morning, asking for instructions, which directed the latter officer to advance at all hazards, and to march during the night. As this was simply impossible at night, especially without a guide, the advancing party held its ground till daybreak, when it set off, and reached the foot of the hills a little after noon, coolies carrying the ammunition, and the elephants lightly laden with the baggage and supplies. Some coolies were sent up the pass to see if the road was clear, and they returned saying that it was, so that the party continued its course, and reached the top of the hill, when a tremendous yell was heard, and the Bhootas were seen running to a formidable stockade which they had constructed on the hill side above, and commanding the road. Nothing being visible beyond this, the party held on its way, until it got into a heavy fire of all kinds of missiles, to which it could not reply: and it was obviously impossible, with the small force at command, to force a passage. The enemy had a full command of the road for more than half a mile, whilst the shot and shell thrown at them by the Dewangiri garrison had no effect, as the enemy had plenty of cover, and the Bhootas were running round to get to the rear of the column. When the backward movement commenced, it was found that the coolies carrying the ammunition had bolted, and the boxes were all on the ground, but they were at once packed upon an elephant. They had not, however, gone far when the load broke and tumbled off, and at this time another elephant fell with his load. Upon this a party was sent to guard the pass in the rear, and the men carrying the boxes down, the elephants were reloaded and everything was brought away; the Bhootas not daring to come to close quarters, and the foot of the pass being reached at six o'clock in the evening, after twelve hours of incessant fatigue and anxiety, the road being simply the dry bed of a mountain torrent. The next morning the returning party reached Koomrekatta, and about noon saw the whole plain covered with scattered and straggling men, who, it was soon discovered, were the garrison of Dewangiri, which had evacuated the place during the night by an almost impassable road, which had been shown by some native. It is admitted on all hands that Captain Cunliffe's conduct was both bold and judicious, and that, had he persevered in advancing, not a man of his party would have escaped, and all the ammunition and supplies must, of course, have fallen into the hands of the enemy. In the letters giving the above details, every consideration is shown for the Dewangiri garrison, except the 43rd N.I., and full justice is done to the gallantry and self-devotion of Captain Cockburn and his artillerymen, who nobly brought away the sick and the howitzers, until, deserted by their cowardly escort of the 43rd, they could carry the latter no further, and, spiking them at the last moment, threw them down the Khud. Lieutenant Story, of the 43rd N.I., wounded by an arrow, and deserted by his own men, was carried away and saved by Havildar Nundram, of the 12th N.I., whose conduct has been reported to the Government.—Englishman.

MARRIAGE FESTIVALS AND INFANTICIDE.

Some time ago we reported the unions to be contracted between the family of the Rajah of Rewah and their Highnesses of Jeypore and Jodhpore. The Maharajah of Jeypore has married two daughters of the Rewah Chief, with each of whom he received a dowry of two lacs of rupees in silver, exclusive of presents proper to the occasion, and his rah-dar or travelling expenses. The Jodhpore Rajah has been promised an equally liberal reception, and has proceeded towards Rewah, accompanied by Lieutenant Roberts, the political agent, and a following of some three or four thousand troops: he will marry one daughter now, and unless on dit speaks falsely, he will woo and wed another a few months hence. This is a strange custom of marrying two sisters to one husband! It is also very expensive; it may be safely reckoned that the weddings of these four young ladies will cost their father at least one hundred thousand pounds, a noble sum, and one which, rightly applied, might have gone a great way towards giving Rewah a good system of roads, or towards improving the status of the people. A large family of daughters, however, thus becomes a very serious burden upon their father, for although the Rajah of Rewah has spent so large a sum of money upon his daughters, he is not considered in Rajpoot circles to have acted with anything like proper liberality, considering the antiquity of his own family and the rank and sangre azul of his sons-in-law. The evil of this extravagant outlay at marriages, which prevails all over India, and instances of which are as common in the metropolis as anywhere else, acts and reacts in Rajpootana on the poorer classes in a way which must ever be regretted. The Rajpoot, like most Oriental races, looks upon the birth of a son with pride, and upon the birth of a daughter with a feeling of regret; but when to this feeling is added the sense of the enormous sacrifices which the family must suffer to place the girl well in life, and to secure a proper alliance for her, it is scarcely to be wondered at that the father would rather see the babe dead; hence the custom of female infanticide. A girl is looked upon as a source of weakness and future expense, and is got rid of, before she can know pain, or gain a hold upon her father's affections. The practice is not confined to Rajpootana; it is more or less resorted to all over India, in spite of the laws and prohibitions of the English Government. If the Rajah of Rewah spends a hundred thousand pounds in the weddings of four of his daughters, a single zemindar of Sarun spends one-tenth of that sum on one daughter, and a man who earns only a few rupees per month will in Calcutta pledge his income for several years in order to waste a couple of hundred rupees in the nuptial festivities of his child. In Rajpootana the evil of infanticide was more rampant, because more unchecked, owing to the feebleness of the native governments, than in other parts of India: it became a fashion, and gave rise to a class of wretches whose duty it was to perpetrate the murders and gloss them over with pæans in honour of the families involved, and the right and justice of removing a formidable incumbrance. In order to effectually combat this custom General Lawrence, before leaving the Rajpootana Agency, prohibited the Bhats and Chammoors from entering any village where a marriage ceremony was being celebrated. These Bhats and Chammoors were in the habit of assembling in large numbers, at marriage festivals, and fastening upon the bridegroom's father until he satisfied their demands: should he be so unwise as to resent their importunities or refuse compliance with their requests, all the spots and flaws in the character of himself or his ancestors would be recited for the amusement and scandal of the guests and villagers. The Bhat had a most retentive memory for ancestral failings, and the Chamoor a wonderful recollection of hereditary faults. Pretending to be the popular heralds and genealogists, they made their knowledge subservient to the vilest purposes, and converted any marriage which they attended into an occasion for senseless extravagance and ruinous generosity: they dissipated its gladness, to replace it by the gloom of a heavy load of debt and despair. These men were once common in Bengal, and were the pest and plague of the marriage festivities of the people. Recognising in koolinism an institution capable of affording them singular opportunities for gain, they hung about the Brahmins and reaped a rich harvest. With the advance of knowledge, and the consolidation of the English rule in Bengal, the koolins found themselves in a position to withstand their exactions and refuse their requests; they were called Ghotucks, and were supposed to know the genealogies of the koolins. As, however, koolinism declined in popular estimation the Ghotuck found his occupation gone, and left Bengal for countries where Hindooism could still claim to exercise its cruel and revolting ceremonies in all their original purity, and capability of administering to the designs of a clever cheat. Along the Hooghly female infanticide has died out: we no longer hear of girls being thrown into the river as offerings to the Gunga—the people have adopted the simple plan of presenting the river with a few cocoa-nuts instead. The custom still obtains in Oudh and in Goruckpore; but although in Bengal men no longer sacrifice their daughters, the scarcely abated rule of extravagance at marriages still renders the birth of a daughter a misfortune. The Government has endeavoured to check the evil at the fountain head, but its efforts must of course prove more or less abortive so long as those most interested declined to throw themselves into the struggle for their emancipation from a most pernicious custom.—Hurkaru.

A NATIVE STATE AND ITS RULERS.

Major Malleon has favoured us with another excellent lecture at the Dalhousie Institute, and this time he has broken new ground. His Essay is entitled "A Native State and its Rulers," and is, in fact, the history of the rise of one of those independent States which we found in India, and which were formed on the disruption of the Mogul power. Nothing is more strange or romantic, or fuller of adventure and striking events than the history of the rise of these principalities, both great and small, which followed on the destruction of the empire of the Moguls, by the last terrible blow inflicted by Nadir Shah. The Mahrattas under Sivajee and his descendants struck fiercely for the sovereignty of India, which they were unable to hold; then followed the predatory hordes of Pendarrees, Holkar and his horsemen, Ameer Khan, the Mahomedan, the Jats from Bhurtpore, and thus a series of years passed in anarchy and confusion, the Mahrattas at one time levying their tribute or Ameer Khan plundering the countries he rode over. During these years many adventurers founded States, and many Governors and inferior authorities secured for themselves petty kingdoms, in reality, though still nominally recognising some paramount power. Thus the Nazim of Bengal and the Nizam of Hyderabad, the Nuwab Wuzer of Lucknow, were virtually independent, though originally the representatives of the Great Mogul. So was formed the strange principality of Sirdhunna by the German adventurer Sombre, and his Begum who succeeded him, protected by the British power. So arose the independent principality which Major Malleon has chosen for his lecture, and we owe to his industry the collation of valuable materials from the archives of the Foreign-office, and to his ability the clear narrative of the wonderful events and circumstances under which a principality was founded, which has escaped the storms and difficulties of an extraordinary period of anarchy and confusion, which exists and flourishes to this day, cherished and honoured by the British successors to the kingdom of the Mogul. Major Malleon shows how this success has been attained, and how, in the virtue, the bravery and the simple honesty of its governors, this State has weathered the storms of the past and remains now a gem set in the British Crown in the East. A small State governed by Mohammedans is this Bhopal, surrounded by Hindoo Sovereigns, powerful and unfriendly; yet for 170 years have these Moslem Princes held their kingdom, seeing all others rise and fall, and finally it rests an independent Power, respected and honoured by its powerful British allies and protectors. It is this marvellous tale that Major Malleon relates, from which he draws so many valuable lessons, and on which he moralises for the benefit of his hearers. We can only make the following extracts. Here is the character of Mooreed Mahomed Khan, the hereditary Lord of Rathgurb, when the Lord, of Bhopal resolved on choosing a dewan :—

"And now the two candidates stood together, waiting for the decision of the Nawab. There could not have been a greater contrast. The one, in the flush of manly youth, noble and handsome in appearance, possessing an open, generous, trustful nature, and master of the divine art of managing his fellow-men. He made no great professions, no splendid promises. This one thing alone he said; that he was ready to fight, and work, and die, for his sovereign and his country. But the other. More like a Hindoo merchant than an Affghan Chief, he creeps submissively into the presence of the Nawab. He addresses him in language as humble as fulsome; calls him his more than father; on the heir apparent, Gbous Mahomed, he lavishes the most exaggerated praise, praise of his accomplishments of mind and body, of his abilities, his courage, his acquirements; to the Beebe, or Lady Mother, whom he next visits, and who, by her influence with the Nawab, is the real dispenser of gifts, he is equally submissive. He calls her his aunt, declares to her that he will hear with his ears, and see with her eyes; that her opinions shall be his opinions, her enemies his enemies. The next day he acts even a more extraordinary part. When waited upon by the Hindoo merchants and bankers of the city, he refuses their usual offerings of money, makes them presents of clothes, and calls them his cousins. To the poor everywhere he distributes considerable sums in charity. The commonalty are delighted. Such a man, so meek, so humble, so charitable, so religious—for he had sighed away one whole day at the tomb of his ancestor—such a man was a marvel at that rude age—so beneficent a mortal had never been seen. The Court were equally pleased. His promises, his professions were still ringing in their ears. This man was to be their apt tool, their willing instrument, their slave in all things—a better substitute for the popular soldier. Mooreed Mahomed Khan was accordingly appointed Minister.

"I need scarcely add that he was a miserable hypocrite, 'a mean, base, fawning parasite.' Let us condemn him for that by all means, but before we include his nation in the condemnation, let us ask ourselves if we have never witnessed similar conduct amongst our own people; if we have never known or heard of men giving up their own convictions, merely to curry favour with their superior—advising him, not according as he ought to be advised, but according as they knew he would like to be advised,—doing this, too, without even the aim which this man had, to become Minister, but simply with a view to stand high in the graces of a great man. If we have heard of such amongst our people, we ought not surely to charge the vice on any nation in particular, though we may well regard the perpetrators of it as the offscourings of their kind—as the Pariahs of the human race."

The following remarks on Wuzer Mahomed will give some idea how Major Malleon uses his materials :—

"Eighteen months later, Wuzer Mahomed died. He was then only fifty-one, but he had spent his whole life in a turmoil of activity. He left behind him the reputation of being the greatest warrior, the most skilful and dashing leader, and the wisest politician, of that part of India. He had amply justified the title with which old Hiyyut Mahomed had saluted him on his first entrance into Bhopal, of 'Saviour of his country.' He alone could have saved it. A great French writer has remarked that 'where nothing great is to be done, the existence of a great man becomes impossible;' but Wuzer Mahomed's career is but one example out of many of the truth of the converse proposition, viz., that where great things are to be achieved, the existence of a great man is assured. Of his exploits I have been able to give in this place but a very faint outline. Those, however, who would care to read what one man, a native of this country, having no European education but wholly self-taught, may be capable of accomplishing, will find Sir John Malcolm's account of the career of Wuzer Mahomed as interesting as it is instructive. To many it will doubtless convey some new ideas."

Again, the allusions to the intrigues for power in this State :—

"It could not be expected that engagements so hollow would last long. There were now three parties in the State, intriguing for supreme power. There was Koodsia Begum, the Regent, striving openly to prolong her tenure of office; Jehangir Mahomed, now titular Nawab, struggling also openly to gain the power as well as the title; and Secunder Begum, his wife, secretly determined to become herself the ruler. It so happened that, at this period, Koodsia Begum had disgusted many even of her own party by her caprices, and the nobles of Bhopal had become weary of the domination of a woman. The British agent also had expressed himself in favour of the claims of the Nawab. Jehangir Mahomed had, therefore, only to wait. Power was fast coming to him, if he had only stood still to take it. Every day augmented his chances, and it was only requisite for him to maintain a cautious silence. This seemed the more easy, as it was certainly the natural course for a man to take in a contest with the more impulsive sex. But Jehangir was not more than half a man. He did not possess the divine faculty of knowing when to speak and when to be silent. He could not restrain the ambitious longings of his soul. Thirsting for power, and despairing of obtaining it by other means, he resolved, therefore, upon a coup d'état. It was the month of August, 1836, when the Nawab Jehangir and his wife Secunder Begum gave a grand entertainment to Koodsia Begum, her brothers, and all the nobility of Bhopal. Suspicion was asleep, and the utmost cordiality and good humour prevailed amongst the guests. Yet it was this evening, and this occasion, that Jehangir had chosen with a view to carry out his purpose of seizing Koodsia Begum. The troops in the Fort of Futehgarh and in Bhopal itself were at his disposal, and he had only to give the word to ensure success. Yet though the matter had been well thought over—though Saloolia Khan, his St. Arnaud, had been summoned, and was actually present with his troops in palace, yet the signal to act was not given. Jehangir was barely nineteen; his heart was not yet hardened; he had never yet committed himself to actual blood-shedding; and as he surveyed that banquetting room, crowded with the nobility of Bhopal, some of them his kinsfolk, many of them his friends, and the others, though devoted to the Begum, not personally hostile to himself, the thought could not but strike him that the attempt to seize the Begum in such an assembly would change the sounds of cheerfulness into shouts of anger, and could be accomplished only at the cost of the best blood in Bhopal. This idea paralysed and unnerved him. He ordered back his troops, and left the deed undone. Meanwhile the secret had transpired. One of the Nawab's chief instruments, furious at his master's weakness, had divulged it to save himself. The Begum and her daughter at once retired, and next morning the Nawab was besieged in his own house by the very troops who, the evening before, had been devoted to his person. 'Men and soldiers,' says Carlyle, 'love intrepidity and swift inflexible decision even when they suffer by it.' Infirmary of purpose is the one crime they cannot pardon."

"One word more. Let me ask now, taking a retrospective glance at this Native State during the hundred and seventy years of its existence, what is the conclusion that must be drawn? As we notice the working of the springs which set its rulers in action, do we not instinctively feel that we,—we Englishmen,—are liable to be acted upon by the same causes, that we are subject to the same impulses,—that we, according to our different natures, are to be equally moved by the passions of ambition, of avarice, of love, of hatred, of revenge? Do we not feel, in fact, that we and they are shaped in the same mould and formed of the same clay? Recollect, for a moment, that civilisation, as we know it, was unknown to those men; that education, as we regard it was, to them, as though it had never existed. Keeping sight of this fact, dare any of us who are here this evening, and who may have the boldness to examine himself,—to delve into his own heart,—dare any of us say, that he would have been braver and more politic than Wuzer Mahomed, more virtuous than his successor, more loyal and resolute than the present able ruler, more prescient than the series of men who adhered, through good and evil report, to the wise policy which Bhopal has followed? Dare any even stand up and declare that he would not have succumbed like some of the others? I, for one, having known and felt how true is the saying of one of our greatest statesmen, that 'not to aspire is to grovel,' I, for one, feel confident that there are few indeed who know themselves, who, recollecting all the circumstances of their position, would dare to stoop down deliberately in order to cast a stone at this native State and its rulers."

A history of India which would embody the history of all its States would require the powers of endurance of an Alison, but the history of these States, kingdoms, and principalities is a desideratum, and will employ the pen of many historians. Major Malleon has shown the way, and has presented his valuable quota towards the great and curious work, or series of works, which, it is to be hoped, will some day be laid before the world. The material is in existence; the Government archives contain an immense store of information, as yet untouched. To Major Malleon we owe many thanks for what he has already dug up, and more for what he has indicated can be found.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE REV. MR. BLAND.—We regret to hear of an accident which happened the other day to the Rev. Robert Bland, at Muttra. His horse, going at a hand-gallop on a hard road, stumbled and fell. Mr. Bland was thrown upon his face, and raised up insensible. It is stated that, though the reverend gentleman has not ceased to officiate, the accident, it is apprehended, may produce lasting results.

DURRUM is quite safe; the Bhootas have not made an attempt to molest its inhabitants or to disturb the peace of the district. The precautionary measures taken by Colonel Hopkinson are excellent. Assam has been drained of all its coolies and carts, and great difficulty is therefore felt in obtaining transport for the right columns.

NEW ROADS IN ASSAM.—The Official Supplement to the Calcutta Gazette publishes the papers which refer to the new roads in Assam. On the 5th of May, 1863, in a most valuable report, Major Briggs, Superintendent of Works, proposed the construction of a trunk road, 355 miles long, at a cost of upwards of 21 lakhs of rupees, to be completed by the end of 1867. The road was to be unmetalled, and to run from Dubaree, in the Goalparah district, or near the western extremity of the province, to Dibrugarh, near its eastern extremity. It was to be 24 feet wide, and bridged throughout, except at the Dihien and Dhunserree rivers, so as to be available for a light railway. The Government of India agrees with the Lieutenant-governor that such a road, in a province where labour is scarce, cannot be made under 40 lakhs, and sanctions two lines—one, a longitudinal trunk line, following the River Berhampooter; the other, a cross line from the Sylhet River at Chhattuck, the great line port, by Shillong, the hill station of Assam, to Gowhaty, its chief station on the Berhampooter. The first part of the trunk road is being made from Gowhaty to Shillong. Assam proper comprises an area of 34,345 square miles, and has a population of nearly 13,00,000 inhabitants, for whose wants and for so large a tract of country scarcely any means of land communication have as yet been provided.

COOLIE CORPS FOR ASSAM.—The Hon. the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has sanctioned the formation of a coolie corps for service against Bhootan for conveyance of baggage, &c., on the following terms. The contractors who bring the coolies shall receive five rupees for every man brought into the recruiting depot until examined and passed by the medical officer for service, and two rupees monthly for each while employed with the corps, one head sirdar for every hundred men is to be allowed Rs. 25 per month as salary, one gang sirdar for every twenty men, Rs. 12 per month, each coolie Rs. 10 monthly, the latter is also to receive subsistence allowance from the date of passing for service at the rate of one and a half annas per diem, and is to be supplied with one blanket and one brass lotah at the expense of the State. From the time that the recruit coolie is brought into the depot until he has been passed or rejected by the surgeon he is to receive four annas a day for food and other necessities.

A TURF SCANDAL.—Rumours of a somewhat grave scandal in the sporting world have reached us from Cawnpore, arising from an incident of our late meeting at this station. The publicity already given to the subject by those interested precludes any necessity for being mysterious. The rider of Bonnie Morn, one of the competitors in the Arab race on the third day, has been openly accused by a brother officer of having "pulled his horse"—i. e., prevented its winning. From careful enquiries among those present on the occasion, we are inclined to believe the charge is altogether a mistake, and that the race was really run on its merits. A glance at the "terms" of the race of itself affords strong presumptive evidence for concluding this, Bonnie Morn having given the winner no less than 1st. 12lbs. over a distance of three miles. Better than all, however, we have the hitherto unimpeached, and probably still unimpeachable, reputation of Captain Williams himself.—Pioneer.

COLONEL CROSSMAN is about to vacate the command of the Lahore Light Horse for that of the 12th Bengal Cavalry at Meerut. Major Delane will, it is said, get the Lahore Light Horse, and his appointment may be regarded as the first step towards converting it into the Viceroy's Body Guard.

THE 6TH BENGAL CAVALRY have received orders to march and be cantoned at Sealkote, thus completing the abandonment of the cantonments at Umritsur.

CASH BALANCES.—The following is the statement of Cash Balances in the Government Treasuries in India at the close of the month of December, 1864, contrasted with that of the previous years:—

According to the present limits of the several Governments.	1862. Dec.	1863. Dec.	1864. Dec.
Govt. of India	Co's Rs. 5,84,16,905	Co's Rs. 3,20,99,062	Co's Rs. 1,42,99,094
" Bengal	1,51,70,444	1,86,25,314	1,63,89,849
" N.W. Provinces	3,17,11,752	3,20,50,495	2,59,43,248
" Punjab	1,18,45,818	1,14,54,059	1,35,84,128
" Bombay	3,06,51,204	1,72,54,770	1,72,31,673
" Central Provs.	46,43,044	37,24,485	38,60,085
" Deccan	14,29,865	22,97,921	7,74,041
" Madras	2,27,69,473	3,10,79,703	1,96,96,363
Total.....	18,33,36,340	14,92,85,819	11,17,83,087

According to the above table there is an increase in December, 1864, as compared with December, 1863:—

Punjab	21,31,069
Central Provinces	1,35,600=22,69,659

The decrease is:—

India	1,77,30,964
Madras	1,13,82,740
N.W.P.	61,07,347
Bengal	22,85,465
Deccan	15,23,880
Bombay	7,33,095=3,97,71,391

The following is the total decrease:—

As compared with 1862	7,15,53,253
As compared with 1863	8,75,02,728

The subjoined table shows the comparison between November and December for the past three years:—

Month.	1862.	1863.	1864.
December	18,33,36,340	14,92,85,810	11,17,83,087
November	16,84,89,802	15,60,51,855	10,28,85,257

Increase for December ... 1,48,46,538 ... 1,42,03,955 ... 88,97,830

The largest increase was in 1862, the increase in 1863 was nearly equal to it, however, but in 1864 there is a large falling off, of which it is useless to expect the tables published to afford any explanation. As compared with 1862, the increase in 1864 is less by 59,48,708 rupees, and, as compared with 1862, the decrease is 53,06,125 rupees. Further comment is not required to show that these balances have not been judiciously used.

NORTH WEST AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.—As our readers are already aware, it was under the auspices of this Association that the recent exhibition was held at Agra. The constitution of this body is curious; the patron is the Lieutenant Governor, which is just as it should be; but then it has 576 members and 109 governors. The distinction between these two classes is due to each individual of the former paying only five rupees per annum, while each of the latter pays fifty, with this further difference, that all governing officers are chosen from among them only; as a natural consequence, there is a great deal of discontent, and under the orders of the Lieutenant Governor a general reference has been made to the entire constituency, whether the institution should not be remodelled, and the anomalous distinction done away with.

MONGHYR.—A large tiger, measuring ten feet two inches from the point of the nose to the tip of the tail, and four feet in height, was shot on the 2nd February, on foot, by three indigo planters with smooth bored guns, near Mungoul Factory. This ferocious animal had been prowling about the neighbourhood for some days, committing numerous ravages amongst natives and cattle; in fact, this beast was so much dreaded by the natives of the neighbourhood that they were afraid to go any distance from the villages, and the delight shown by men, women, and children at the death of this monster was surprising to witness.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.—Lieutenants Firebrace, Holdich, and Savi, of the Royal Engineers, just arrived from England by the Mooltan, have been ordered to proceed and join the head-quarters of the Engineers at Roorkee.

LITIGATION OUT OF THE MUTINY.—The case of Nadir Mirza v. the Secretary of State is of some importance as showing the kind of litigation which is now attracting considerable attention in Oudh, and which is regarded with dislike by the authorities, and with suspicion by the talookdars. Nadir Mirza is a descendant of that Begum of Gonda who, out of jealousy to the Nawab Vizier of Oudh, besought the interference of the British Government, and offered to make the Company her residuary legatee, if the English would acknowledge her independence. On her death her property, amounting to nearly a million sterling, was made over to the Nawab Vizier, who, on his part, furnished the Government with a sum sufficient to yield at six per cent. interest a fund capable of defraying the charges under the Begum's will for certain pensions, hereditary and otherwise. The plaintiff under this arrangement drew at the time of the mutiny a pension of Rs. 6,971 per month, but being unable to resist the temptation to ambitious spirits presented by the bouleversement in Oudh, he joined the mutineers, and particularly associated himself with a man who, with the usual Mahomedan disregard of the general interests, set himself up as the Nawab of Goruckpore. On the conquest of the country the plaintiff fled from Oudh, and was absent until after the period of grace allowed in the Queen's Proclamation had expired; he came in, however, under a letter written by Major Barrow, and he now claims that if annexed at all he should be annexed in estate as well as in person. The whole contention turns, of course, upon the construction put upon Major Barrow's letter and upon its sanction, express or implied, by the Supreme Government. The Secretary of State, in reply, denies the jurisdiction of the Court, considering the matter one of "State policy," pleads the sentence of a former Court in Oudh, and the Statute of Limitation, and winds up with the dernier resort of quoting Section 2 of Act XXXIV. of 1860. The case has been appealed, and is therefore to a certain extent still sub judice: we abstain in consequence from any comment as to the merits or demerits of Nadir Mirza's contention. The case is one of great interest and importance, as upon its decision, in all probability, will hinge the "to be or not to be" of a perfect flood of similar suits.—Hurkaru.

FATAL DRINKING MATCH.—A newswriter at Rawulpindee says:—"Evidently serious doubts, and perhaps much boasting, about the rum drinking capacities of the two corps here, led a few besotted fools of one to challenge an equal number of the same stamp of the other, and a regular rum (wherever a sufficient supply was obtained from) contest ensued. The result was that one man (who must have died of suffocation on the spot) was picked up a corpse in the morning, and a second, but for the timely pumping of about half a gallon, more or less, of rum from his stomach, must within a few minutes have been suffocated also."

LIEUT. WHISH.—We have stated elsewhere in the matter of the drowning of a Meywarree whilst acting as a beater for Lieut. Whish, of H.M.'s 103rd regt., it had been settled that the Lieut. should make a pensionary allowance to the family of the deceased. Considering the result of the inquiry, the Commander-in-Chief has negatived this proposal, and the matter has therefore been referred to the Supreme Government.

THE MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS for the suburbs of Calcutta lately suggested to Government that each of them be invested with the powers of a magistrate; this has been negatived by the Government.

MR. C. W. V. BRADFORD, M.A., lately arrived from England for employment in the Educational Department, is to be appointed temporarily to officiate as a Professor in the Presidency College.

SMALLPOX IN THE TRIBUTARY MEHALS.—South and west of Midnapore there is a large and but partially known tract of hilly country, known as the "Tributary Mehals," and inhabited by various tribes, as the Khonds, the Gondahs, Hulwas, Bhuttias, &c.; the principal tribes are the Ooryahs and the Mooryahs. Some years ago the smallpox made its appearance in these jungles and swept off numbers of the inhabitants; whole villages were depopulated, and the people were horror-struck at its ravages. We regret to learn that this fatal epidemic has again made its appearance in their villages in a very virulent form, and that numbers have resolved to abandon the country rather than stay and face the destroyer. It was amongst these hills that the Meriah sacrifices obtained, which have been put down with so much trouble. The priests, ever on the watch for a chance which might be turned to a profitable account, have not been slow to spread the report that the smallpox has been sent by the goddess to punish the tribes for depriving her of the human sacrifices her worship and honour demand. The district is one of the heaviest jungle tracts in India, and is celebrated for its fivers. We trust the Government will take some measures to extend assistance to these wretched tribes, although we are free to confess the duty is one of no ordinary difficulty, and even danger.—Hurkaru.

NATIVE PRINCES ON THEIR TRAVELS.—The sons of the Nawab Nazim of Bengal leave by the present steamer on a visit to England. Colonel Herbert has received instructions, in which, as is proper, a great deal is left to his own tact and judgment. To lay down minute rules of conduct would be to defeat the aim of the Government, whilst by leaving a wide margin to Colonel Herbert's own good sense, and the good feeling of his charges, room will be left for the establishment of a confidence and respect on the part of these young men which can only end to their benefit. They are to be spoken of and addressed as Mirza, but only during their stay in England, and as a special mark of favour; the distinction is not to be extended to the other sons of his Highness. Colonel Herbert will report himself as soon after his arrival as possible to the Secretary of State, from whom he will receive instructions as to the introduction of the Mirzas into society and as to their presentation at Court. Having regard to the position they may hereafter occupy, Colonel Herbert will have to keep them from hangers on, and unworthy or vicious pastimes, and to direct their attention to the English factories, dockyards, and especially to the agricultural systems most in vogue. We regret to find that his Highness the Nawab Nazim seems to regard the very liberal allowance granted to his sons as inadequate for the occasion.—Hurkaru.

PRESIDENCY COLLEGE.—In connection with the recent successful termination of the examinations for the degree of M.A., it was forced upon the attention of Mr. Atkinson that there was no fund from which students who had passed for B.A. could be provided with scholarships to enable them to continue their studies for the higher degree; under these circumstances he has determined to utilise the several funds attached to the old Hindoo College. From the invested capital of these funds seven scholarships have been established, and an M.A. class formed in the Presidency College. These scholarships are divided into three classes, two of fifty rupees, two of forty rupees, and three of thirty rupees per mensem; these scholarships are, however, only open to those B.A. candidates who may belong to the Presidency College.

THE SMALL-POX EPIDEMIC has spread all over Upper India. Advices from Rajpootana, Bhopal, the Punjab and Nepal speak of its ravages. We are glad to learn, however, that vaccination is being prosecuted vigorously, and that it is making good progress.

WOLF TRAPS.—A newswriter in Oudh states that the wolves in that province have carried off so many children, besides committing havoc among live stock, that the attention of the Chief Commissioner was directed to the subject. He has offered liberal rewards for the destruction of the animals, and has also ordered the entertainment of shikarees to trace and kill them. Moreover, a trap has been devised, which is said to answer the purpose of entrapping them admirably. A well 10 feet deep and 4 feet in diameter is dug, and covered over lightly with straw: a lamb or a kid is then fastened in the centre of it; the wolf is attracted to its prey, and in seizing it tumbles into the well, where it remains till destroyed. These wells are to be found in every district, and the number of wolves destroyed by this means is very large.

MR. ROBERT ABERCROMBIE, the Dacca Judge, has been appointed to the Behar Opium Agency. This case will help to illustrate somewhat the case of Mr. Buckle, which has created so much stir among the members of the Civil Service. Mr. Abercrombie is known to have declined an offer of promotion to the High Court Bench, for the reason that he did not believe himself possessed of the necessary judicial training. He has now been removed from the judicial branch of the service, and promoted at the same time. He is a most able and energetic officer, and, perhaps, unlike others, is content to be modest and own his weak points, and so his promotion is deserved; at the same time it shows that Mr. Beadon is resolved to carry out a reform in the judicial branch of the Civil Service under his control.

PERILS OF INDIAN SPORT.—Some disturbance took place a short time ago in Oodeypore, in consequence of a man who had gone out with Lieutenant Whish having been accidentally drowned in endeavouring to recover some game which that officer had shot; the villagers made a great hubbub, and insisted that the poor fellow had met his death by foul means. The case was investigated, and Lieutenant Whish entirely exonerated from blame. It has now been settled that he shall pension the family of the deceased. Officers when in the territories of native princes cannot be too careful and guarded in their intercourse with the natives.

OFFICIAL DIARIES.—In the Punjab the Government make it a point to require from civil officers, while touring through their districts, an account of what they see and hear about the people. The Chief Commissioner of Oudh has imitated this practice by instructing his subordinates to keep regular diaries during their tours through their respective districts. They are required to report on the condition of the population, the resources of the country, the capabilities of the soil, and such other matters of statistical interest as might come under their observation. It is strange that the necessity of such expedients for making themselves acquainted with the country should have only now become apparent to the officers of the Government.

OFFICIAL CHANGES IN DINAGPORE.—The district of Dinagpore is shortly to be denuded of all its principal public officers, and their places supplied by new ones. Privilege leave has already been granted to Mr. Edwin Sandys, the Civil and Session Judge: we now hear that Mr. H. B. Simpson, the Magistrate and Collector, also goes away on leave very soon, and that Mr. J. B. Worgan, the Joint Magistrate and Deputy Collector, has received permission to proceed to Europe on furlough for one year: he leaves India in April.

THE COSSIAH AND JYNTIAH TRIBES have taken up arms to decide some boundary dispute, and fighting has taken place in the hills. The Superintendent of the Survey Department has proceeded to the scene of hostilities to settle the differences, and to bring the chiefs to reason, if possible.

MAHOMEDAN PROGRESS.—We (Hurkaru) see from the proceedings of the last meeting of the Mahomedan Literary Society that the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has accepted the office of patron to the society, a fact in which the secretary, Moulvie Abdool Luteef, takes a justifiable pride, as marking the "permanence and stability" of the association he has had so much difficulty in firmly establishing. This society promises to be of the greatest use to the Mahomedan community. Its aim would seem to be to remove from the followers of the prophet the slur which has been cast upon them by their indifference to the great educational movement which is now permeating all Bengal with its influence. The committee feeling themselves in a satisfactory position, pecuniarily speaking, have determined to offer prizes for the best essays on certain subjects connected with Moslemism, or the history and well-being of India. Six hundred rupees will be given for the best essays on the following subjects:—1st. "The Life of the Prophet" (Persian). 2nd. "History of the Kaaba" (Persian). 3rd. "Life of Aurungzebe" (Urdu). 4th. "The Hindooism of Indian Mahomedans" (Urdu). 5th. "History of Locomotion" (Urdu). 6th. "History of Printing and its Influence on Civilisation" (Urdu). We could wish the suggestion of Moulvie Mahomed Abdool Ruwoof had been partially adopted, and prizes given for essays in English. It should be as much the aim of the society to enkindle in their co-religionists an interest in English science and learning, as to revive the drooping energies of their national literature.

SUTTEE IN RAJPOOTANA.—There have been lately two instances of suttee in Beekaneer: these complete six in that district within fifteen years. In general, on such occasions the immediate servants of the raj keep aloof, if they do not display any active interference to prevent the sacrifice; but in the instances now reported there was an unusual display of drums, flags, and officials of more or less influence. The Maharajah himself was away at one of his country seats: he did not hear of the suttees till after they had been completed. He will, however, be held responsible for them; unless, indeed, he has the firmness and courage to seize and severely punish the men about him, who, to further their own ends or gratify their revenge, use their opportunities to injure their master and his more favoured advisers in the estimation of the British Government.

THE RUSSIANS IN CENTRAL ASIA.—According to the Cabool correspondent of the Delhi Gazette, whose latest date is February 16, authentic intelligence has been received by a Cabool merchant from Toorkistan, to the effect that the Russians had marched for Oorgunge, and had been allowed by the King of Bokhara to go to Yarkund, Kashghur, and Buddukhsan. In their application to the King of Bokhara, the Russians are said to have stated that they were merely going to explore the mines at those three places. It is said that there are silver and copper mines at Yarkund and Kashghur, and ruby and crystal ones at Buddukhsan.

MR. J. S. SPANKIE, C.S.—It will be recollected that Mr. J. S. Spankie, of the Civil Service, was removed from public employment for contumacious behaviour towards the Lieutenant-Governor. It has since been discovered that at the time Mr. Spankie so misconducted himself he was labouring under temporary mental derangement, induced by repeated and violent attacks of congestion of the brain, when employed as magistrate and collector of the Chittagong district; thereupon a special pension of £250 per annum has been granted to him by the Secretary of State, on the recommendation of the Government of India.

THE RAJAH OF ULWAR has given his sanction to the construction of a line of railway through his territories.

BOARD OF REVENUE.—It was believed in high quarters some time ago that on the retirement of Messrs. Allen and Grote a change would probably be made in the constitution of the Board of Revenue, or, rather, that the Board would be abolished, and a new department created to carry on the work under a responsible secretary. The tendency now that the Government of the country is yearly increasing in efficiency and despatch is to do away with as much of the cumbrous machinery of the administration as possible. Mr. Allen has already retired, and we wait to see if the change will be carried out, or the Board continued in its old form.

THE MAHARAJAH OF GWALIOR.—His Highness has resolved on a pilgrimage to Kashee. Accordingly, pundits and astrologers having been sent for, the Maharajah desired them to consult their books, and to let him know the auspicious day on which he was to leave for Kashee. The astrologers made their calculations, and informed his Highness that the 20th February, about three o'clock, was the luckiest time for the Maharajah to start; tents were ordered to be pitched near the Jahnuck Tal, and a little while after the Maharajah, with about five hundred sepoys and sowars, went out to the camp.

AN AWKWARD PREDICAMENT.—Colonel Vesey, of her Majesty's 46th, was recently out shooting in the Shahjehanpore district. During one of his excursions he narrowly escaped being savagely mauled if not killed by a tiger a few days ago; the elephant having turned tail, caused the howda and its occupants to be thrown violently on the ground close to the tiger, who astonished, it is presumed, at the occurrence bolted into the jungle, and was seen no more, leaving the sportsmen to pick themselves up, no doubt very thankful for their narrow escape.

DARJEELING.—The local Government, on the representation of the late Deputy-commissioner of Darjeeling, Mr. H. C. Wake, has accorded its sanction to the expenditure of Rs. 10,000 for the establishment of a good and durable communication between the Runjeet, the post on the Teesta, and Dumong. Major Reid, the present Deputy-commissioner, has been authorised to advance Rs. 1,000 for the commencement of the work, and to disburse the remainder on the completion of the same.

COMPENSATION TO CAPTAIN LEWIS.—The Government has liberally sanctioned the payment of Rs. 3,350 to Captain H. Lewis, harbour-master at Rangoon, and formerly commander of the hospital ship Bentuck, as compensation for the loss of property, stores, &c., occasioned by the wreck of that vessel in the cyclone of October last.

MR. W. PURDON, C.E., is to be Superintending Engineer of the Punjab, Colonel Taylor succeeding Colonel MacLagan as Secretary in the Public Works Department of that province. Mr. Purdon is not the first civil engineer who has invaded the preserves of the commissioned officers of the Public Works Department.

SURGEON-MAJOR A. H. CHEKE, Civil Surgeon of Benares, who has just returned from sick furlough to Europe, is brought upon the list of deputy-inspectors-general of hospitals, and appointed to the charge of the Dinapore circle, in succession to Dr. R. B. Kinsey, proceeding to England on medical certificate.

MR. C. S. CARNAC, C.S.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has transferred Mr. C. S. Carnac, C.S., Civil and Sessions Judge of Jessore, to the district of Dacca, in the room of Mr. R. Abercrombie, appointed Opium Agent of Behar, vice T. C. Trotter, retired on annuity.

UNCOVENANTED SERVICE BANK.—This Bank has declared a dividend of rupees sixteen per cent., or rupees eight per share, for the half year ending 31st December last.

CROQUET MATCH.—A grand croquet match was to come off in the month of March at the station of Moradabad, to be played by some of the ladies resident there, for a prize of a gold pencil case. Major Pierce is to be the umpire.

DALHOUSIE.—The Rev. Mr. Lewin, whose management of the Landour Academy made him so deservedly popular, has opened a school for Christian lads at Dalhousie.

THE RAJAH OF BOONDEE has left his territories on a visit to Benares. He is accompanied by Captain Blair, the Assistant Political Agent of the Herowtie district.

LAND ASSOCIATION.—The Luckeempore Land Association of Oudh has declared a dividend of one thousand rupees per cent.!

THE NIZAM OF THE DECCAN.—His Highness's revenues are inadequate to the expenditure of the State, and the good faith of the British Government is likely to be appealed to, with a view to extricate him from his embarrassments. Under the able administration of Salar Jung, all that could be has been done to restore the finances, which years of mismanagement had thrown into disorder before he assumed the responsible and trying office which he holds; and he might have succeeded in ordinary times. But there have been unusual demands upon H.H.'s Government. According to a news writer in the Englishman, the dear-ness of provisions has led to the Government increasing its expenditure by twelve lakhs of rupees in enhanced salaries to the poorer classes of its servants; and, under good advice, customs and duties have been reduced; a measure indubitably beneficial to the country, which diminishes the income of the country by ten lakhs more. An enhanced demand upon the Government for twenty-two lakhs a year will be difficult to meet; and Mr. Yule is said to be anxious to provide against the coming difficulties; and for this purpose it is said that the Nizam's stamps have been substituted in the cantonment of Secunderabad for the English Government's. Other measures will in this way be devised, but whatever they may be, they will be long in creeping up to the amount of the existing deficit. The treaty of 1860 provides that, after deducting a certain sum from the revenues of the assigned districts to meet the expenses of the Contingent, the surplus will be made over to the Nizam. This surplus is now available, and the general presumption is that, as right and proper, it will be made over to the Nizam. There is, however, a talk that, under the terms of the same treaty, which gives the British Government unlimited power over the expenses of the assigned districts, the balance is to be expended on public works. There is no denying that public works are a necessity in any part of India, and as much in any part of British India as out of it. We believe, however, that the Financial Department look upon the income of the assigned districts as much a portion of the imperial revenue as the collections from Bengal or Madras, and there is no likelihood of the treaty being interpreted to the Nizam's benefit.—Hurkaru.

SIR WILLIAM DENISON'S MINUTES ON HIS LATE TOUR have been published, and form a very clear exposition of his policy as Governor. He has taken up very earnestly and at an opportune time the task of infusing some mechanical knowledge among the ryots of this country. He is justly of opinion that if the natives can be persuaded to use other implements than those they have been accustomed to, a little freedom of inquiry will have been acquired which may lead to adaptations of the machines imported from England to the special requirements of this country. The winnowing machine is in high favour among them, as are several ploughs and the scythe. The scythe will undoubtedly supersede the reaping-hook, but it will take some time to induce people who have grown good crops of paddy for years, with a plough, which, with modern improvements, can be purchased for one rupee, to invest in an imported article, the value of which cannot be completely tested for many months, perhaps years. The Governor was much disappointed at the sight of unfinished roads and bridges and culverts which he saw during his tour, and all of which were commenced as portions of useful works. So strong is his condemnation of the practice of stopping a work once begun, because an unexpected demand is made upon the exchequer, that he proposes to raise money on loan, if it be impossible to raise it by any other means, in order that the money spent upon unfinished works may not be utterly lost.—Athenæum.

A HARBOUR FOR MADRAS.—The mercantile world of Madras has lately been engaged in the discussion of a harbour scheme for Madras. The scheme has been brought forward by an engineer in the employ of a Cotton Press Company, and has received an amount of favour unintelligible, save on the ground that our merchants want to appear to be doing something for the oldest Presidency in India. A committee has been formed of members of "old and young" houses, whose duty it will be to consult with scientific men as to the feasibility of the project. Such an outline of the proposals of the engineers as has appeared will not recommend itself to those of our readers who are familiar with the coast.

It is proposed to carry a portion of the island away, leaving in its place a basin about thirty feet deep, reckoning from the level of high water. This basin is to be connected with the sea by simply cutting through the bar and throwing out on each side of the opening solid masonry piers about half the length of the screw pile pier, that is, within the breakers of a moderate surf. The water between the piers is to be kept at its proper depth by means of steam dredges and the flushing of the Cooum. Beyond the little exercise which it will afford to a few gentlemen in the business of committee men, we do not think that any good will come of it.—Athenæum.

A VEDA SAMAJ, corresponding to the Brahma-Samaj of Bengal, has been formed at Madras. Its chief object is to encourage a "pure theism free from superstitious absurdities." The members are to observe existing ceremonies only when they are indispensable, or when their omission would hurt the feelings of Hindus so as to be prejudicial to the interests of the Veda-Samaj; they are gradually to give up all distinctions and amalgamate the different branches of the same caste; they are to disregard sectarianism and tolerate the views of strangers; they are never to encourage nautches, or violate the laws of justice, veracity, temperance and chastity; they are to encourage the re-marriage of widows and discourage early marriages; they are to have but one wife; and they are to advance the cause of female and general education. These, with a few less important conditions, form the covenant which the members have to make.

HALF BATTAL OR FULL BATTAL?—The "G.O.G.G." abolishing half batta has been taken advantage of wherever possible by military men whose regiments are not at full batta stations. There is, however, a difference of opinion between military officers in civil employ and the Madras Government as to the extent of the application of the order. It seems clear to our mind that any officer who draws half batta in Madras now, and would if he were in civil employ at a full batta station draw full batta, is entitled to full batta in Madras. The general order was issued mainly to abolish local advantages with respect to pay. We quote the Government Order on the subject:—

"The Governor in Council is clearly of opinion that military and medical officers holding civil appointments, who have hitherto drawn only half batta rate of regimental allowances in addition to civil salary, are not entitled to the full batta rate of allowance authorised by the G.O.G.G. under date Jan. 6 last. Such officers must be considered to come under the category of officers holding staff appointments, who are expressly excepted from the operations of the order in question."

The last sentence in this is particularly unique. If these officers had been expressly excepted, the Governor in Council would not have been called upon for an opinion; they would have come under, instead of being "considered" to come under, the category, &c.—Athenæum.

"THE BANNER OF TRUTH."—A Madras society of native Christians called the "Sathia Veda Sanajam," or The True Veda Society, has started a monthly journal in English called "The Banner of Truth." The first number is favourably noticed by contemporaries.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TROMBAY ISLAND.—We are glad to hear that a strong company has already been formed, and will be brought out, irrespectively of any concession from Government of the right to make a causeway between the two islands, to connect Trombay with Bombay either by a railway or by a service of steamers, and to build residences on the slopes of the former island for the houseless office people of Bombay. We have strong doubts of the possibility of reclaiming land at a profit for the purpose of building dwelling-houses on it, and are much afraid that, if the land were reclaimed, whoever went to live on it would have an opportunity of verifying by personal experience the literal accuracy of the Scriptural parable about the foolish man who built his house upon the sand. "And the rains descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell, and great was the fall of it." But we have always been of opinion that a cheap and healthful suburb might easily be created on the Island of Trombay; and it is a good thing for the community that this long-talked of project has at last been taken up in earnest.—Bombay Gazette.

A STRANGE STORY.—Dhurrumdass Vullubdass, the well-known Naitcha and Goorakoo manufacturer of Kurrachee and Bombay, who is a native of Tatta, has recently been made the victim of one of the most extraordinary frauds that has ever come within our knowledge. To add to the man's misfortune, his caste people have converted the affair into a pretext for his expulsion from their brotherhood, as usual, to extort money from him, both by compelling him to support the instrument used to dupe him, and by imposing the giving of a certain number of caste dinners. With this prologue we shall proceed to narrate what we have to say. Dhurrumdass has a younger brother depending on him, whom he wished to get settled in life. The two accordingly went to their native place, Tatta, where Dhurrumdass, by the intervention of friends, succeeded in obtaining what he supposed to be a most eligible partner for his brother. Preliminaries over, a thousand rupees were laid out on the marriage ceremony, and everything augured well. The bride was brought home in due course, and, to the horror of Dhurrumdass, his brother rushed frantically to him, crying out, in the deepest distress, that the bride was neither a man nor a woman, but a fearful monster. Dhurum-dass, thinking his brother was under the influence of drink, quietly requested him to be seated, but was horrified to find his brother persisting in his declaration, and amplifying it by a frightful description of the being he had wedded. This lusus nature, though, when dressed, a most perfect and beautiful creature, is a malformation, to destroy whom in its infancy would have been a merciful deed. The parents, however, loved their offspring, and concealed its deformity so well, that nobody suspected it. There are, of course, all sorts of stories now current in Tatta, none of them correct, nor as bad as the reality actually is. One story runs that this singular being is covered with porcupine quills, and lives upon the flesh of the dead interred about the city; others again have it that it is covered with scales like a fish; and a third report is to the effect that its skin is like that of an alligator, its appetite being equally depraved. Neither the husband nor his brother can be induced to describe the creature, whom they, of course, turned out of doors immediately on their ascertaining that it was not human. The caste people, as we have remarked, have expelled the brothers from among them, and insist on their maintaining the monster. Under this accumulation of misery, the unfortunate men have sought our advice; it is, to institute an action for the recovery from the parents of the money laid out in the marriage; to persecute them for obtaining money under false pretences, and include in the criminal information as aiders and abettors the caste people themselves.—Our Paper.

THE FRENCH IN ADEN.—A letter in the Bombay Times explains the "insults" offered to French subjects in Aden, of which La Patrie complained, in a manner not very creditable to our allies. Last December the French transport Junon, from Saigon, with invalids and marine infantry, anchored not near the entrance of the harbour, the proper place for a ship with sick on board, but in the place usually occupied by the overland steamers. At night one of the chief officers, accompanied by others and guided by a clerk in the French Consul's office, visited the most disreputable quarter of the town, and, in the course of a brawl, wounded two women of bad character. The native police interfered and put the Frenchmen in prison, from which they were released the moment their position was known. The political agent examined the case, but the French Consul and agent were not satisfied, because Frenchmen had been struck, and reported the matter to the French Admiral. The affair has been disposed of by the dismissal of the police soubadar, and an official apology to the Junon's officers.

ELPHINSTONE LAND COMPANY.—A statement of the affairs of the Elphinstone Land Company, published by Mr. Fleming the day before the sale of its new shares by auction, gives us a clear idea of the condition of this, the soundest of the reclamation schemes. Established in 1859, by 1870 the company will have created an estate covering 1,773,165 square yards, and having a water frontage of four miles. Of this 445,510 square yards are to be given to Government as a site for the goods stations of the G. I. P. Railway Company, in return for certain concessions. Of the remainder, to reclaim which will have cost three millions sterling, the company have now reclaimed 424,000 square yards. Of this a fourth is at present available, and yields Rs. 2,26,600 a year. In a short time the completion of wharves and basins will greatly add to this. The directors mean to sell land for three millions, leaving the rest as a dock estate, a magnificent return for the money originally invested, which does great credit to the commercial sagacity of the projectors. But what of the shareholders who have bought the old shares at Rs. 1,70,000 premium, and intend to buy the new shares at Rs. 3,000 premium? The Bombay Gazette shows that, at the extreme estimate of the most sanguine speculators, persons who buy at this premium will be fools.

A MARATHI DRAMA.—The Bible story of Joseph, with especial prominence given to the part of Potiphar's wife, has been made the subject of a Marathi Drama in five acts, under the title "Jayapal," by Vinayak Jarnarden Kirtane. A critic in Native Opinion thinks that the author's English education has led him to concede too much to his female characters in action. "His notions of conjugal felicity, borrowed from European life, appear bordering on shamelessness, as in the frequent kisses which Jayapal bestows on his beloved partner."

OTHELLO IN BOMBAY.—An educational exhibition has lately taken place in Bombay, which reminds us of similar displays in the old Hindoo College of Calcutta. The junior students, native youths of the Elphinstone College, acted "Othello" throughout, without a mistake or a hitch, in a manner pronounced by a local critic highly creditable. The spirit of the play was wonderfully well interpreted, the shades of feeling and thought were cleverly followed, and the enunciation was in most cases perfect, and without any observable tincture of foreign adulteration. Sir Bartle Frere and the members of Council were present.

CANNIBALISM.—The Moofreool Coolb, an Oordoo paper published at Shikarpore, states that a Masulman fakir is in the custody of the police authorities of that city on a charge of cannibalism. It is alleged that shortly after a Hindoo funeral party had consigned a dead body to the funeral pit or pile and had retired from the burning ground, the fakir, who is reputed to be a magician, was seen taking handfuls of flesh from the dead body and making a repast of it as best he could; he was taken before the Fouzdar, and has been kept in confinement, pending an investigation into the unnatural offence.

LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA.—The directors of the Land Mortgage Bank of India (Credit Foncier Indien) (Limited) have issued their report preparatory to the general meeting on Wednesday. The accounts submitted, made up to the 31st December, 1864, comprise actual operations over eight months only, which show a net profit of £12,288, to which is added the interest earned in India to 31st March, £10,651, showing a sum of £22,939 available for dividend, &c. The directors therefore recommend that a dividend of 4s. per share (free of income-tax), being 5 per cent. on the paid-up capital, be now declared, payable on and after the 22nd instant. The capital in India on 31st March amounted to £611,933, of which £404,407 was invested on mortgages of real property, and £197,970 on Government securities, at an average rate of 9 per cent. The total applications for mortgage loans amounted, by last advices, to £1,318,500, of which £404,407 has been granted, and of the remainder under consideration a large amount will probably be accepted. Great caution has been used in making these advances, and the appraised value of the properties mortgaged to the company is double the amount actually advanced upon them. Every title undergoes the rigid scrutiny of the bank's solicitors and standing counsel at the presidency cities. Each property is carefully valued by inspector, sub-agent, or other competent valuer; and the chief agents only grant the loan on the satisfactory termination of the investigation. The Registration Act, now in force throughout India, also affords an additional security to the mortgages. The company is now, it is said, firmly established, and its investments in India are such that the directors feel themselves justified in anticipating that a large and safe business, with annually increasing profits, has been secured for the future.

Services under local Acts not permitted to count for Pension.

From the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Bart., M.P. and c.c.s., H.M.'s Secretary of State for India in Council, to H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor general of India in Council.—(No. 302, dated London, Dec. 16, 1864.)

Para. 1.—I have considered in Council your financial letter dated the 13th September last, No. 127, relative to a proposition made by the Government of Bombay to permit service on the establishments employed under Act No. XIX. of 1863 of the Bombay Legislative Council (Cotton Frauds Act) to count for pension under the Uncovenanted Service Pension Rules.

2. To this proposition you object on the ground that the Cotton Frauds Act is not a general but a local Act based on local fund, the income of which is connected with the operation of the Act. You state that the Government of Bombay had, without consulting our Government, appointed an establishment under the Cotton Frauds Act, consisting of a chief inspector, at Rs. 1,800 a month, a sub inspector at Bombay, whose salary is not stated, and six European inspectors, at Rs. 700 each; and you observe that, if the Local Governments are allowed to exercise the power of binding the Government of India to expenditure out of the general revenue under these local Acts, the full control over that revenue hitherto possessed by the Government of India must obviously cease.

8. It appears to her Majesty's Government that the proposition made by the Government of Bombay ought not to be sanctioned. If it were admitted that servants appointed under local Acts, whose salaries are paid from fees levied under the provisions of those Acts, were to be granted superannuation pensions out of the general revenue, the charge to the State for those pensions would be argely and indefinitely increased. The correct principle in regard to superannuation appears to be, that pensions should be granted out of the same funds from which the salaries have been paid.

4. In order to bring the Cotton Frauds Act, which was exceptional in its character, into speedy and effective operation, it was deemed expedient by the Government of Bombay to sanction the employment under that Act of some of their servants, their salaries while so employed being paid from the local fund. Under the peculiar circumstances of the case her Majesty's Government will not require that the time so occupied shall be excluded from the period calculating as service for pensions from the public revenues.

5. I have, however, requested the Bombay Government to take the earliest opportunity of restoring the officers referred to to their proper position in the regular service, and I should hope that any necessity for a similar employment of Government servants will be very rare. It must be regarded as a fixed rule that officers of establishments employed under local Acts will not be entitled to any pension or allowance from the State.

MADRAS.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, April 12, 1865.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

On Thursday last, April the 6th, a ceremony took place, the real value of which it would as yet be premature to determine. On that day the waters of the Mediterranean commingled with those of the Red Sea, and the continent of Africa was converted into an island. The gigantic work undertaken by M. de Lesseps has thus made decidedly greater progress than it was generally anticipated in this country it ever would make. The ship canal, indeed, is still in embryo, but it is no trifling achievement to have made a water course of any kind across the thirsty sands of the Egyptian desert. As yet it may be that no very practical benefit has been secured so far as Indo-European commerce is concerned, and that many long years of unceasing toil, and a vast expenditure of capital, will be required before a vessel of the most moderate tonnage will be able to sail or steam through what was once the Isthmus of Suez. Be that as it may, enough has now been done to prove that the construction of a navigable canal from one sea to the other is merely a question of time and money. There are no insuperable difficulties to be encountered. There are no obstacles in the way that cannot be removed by engineering skill, backed by sufficient funds. The thing can be done, and so far credit is due to M. de Lesseps for his boldness of imagination, his fertility of expedients, and his indomitable tenacity of purpose. But although the ultimate completion of the Suez Canal may be regarded as certain of accomplishment, the questions of utility to mankind in general, and of profitability to the shareholders in particular, still remain to be solved by an experience that will have to contend against jealousy and prejudice, and other more formidable opponents. The enormous outlay in the first instance will demand an equally enormous traffic to produce anything like a reasonable dividend. But whence is this mighty traffic to be obtained? Excepting at particular seasons of the year no sailing vessels whatever will be tempted to beat about the reefs and shoals of the Red Sea in the teeth of a wind that blows for weeks together from the same quarter. Large ships, moreover, are not partial to voyages, such as the run from British ports along the coast of Portugal, through the Straits of Gibraltar, across the fitful Mediterranean, to the low-lying shores of Egypt, then through the many-locked canal, the Red Sea, and the Straits of Babelmandel. But if sailing ships do not frequent the canal in large numbers, heavy tolls must be levied, and if the tolls are heavy the ships will certainly be few. The chances of good dividends for the shareholders are consequently exceedingly infinitesimal. Then, as for the benefits this canal is to confer upon mankind at large, we confess that they appear to us extremely apocryphal. That France will improve her position on the Mediterranean, and become the virtual dictator of Egypt, is self-evident, a contingency not to be regarded with much favour in this country. In that case it will be incumbent on the British Government to maintain a more powerful fleet in that sea, as otherwise direct communication with India might at any time be intercepted. A small body of troops hastily thrown into Egypt would effectually bar the passage, even though the naval supremacy of the Mediterranean remained undecided. That commingling of the two seas, so joyfully celebrated only a few days since, may, perchance, prove the source of a "stream of slaughter," which shall overflow the "isthmus idly spread below," and bring unnumbered woes upon the nations of Europe. It is well to be prepared for the worst.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

THE brief report of Sir Charles Trevelyan's financial statement, received by telegraph, is, to say the least of it, exceedingly unsatisfactory. It is not the amount of the deficit that need create any disquietude, however unpleasant may be such a contrast to the surplus of the last few years. But had the deficiency been very much larger, no serious apprehensions would have been entertained for the future had proper means been suggested for restoring the balance during the current financial year. Unhappily, the remedies prescribed by Sir Charles are worse than the disease itself, and which, besides, they are calculated to aggravate beyond all hope of immediate recovery. The actual excess of expenditure over income is no more than £144,000; but then we were assured, just twelve months ago, that the excess would be on the other side of the balance-sheet, and that it would amount to £823,288. The total difference between the estimate and the actual result of the year's operations is thus very little short of one million sterling. This is truly an error of some magnitude, and one very damaging to Sir Charles's reputation as a financier, unless it can be shown that it arose from extraordinary circumstances, which he could not reasonably be expected to have taken into calculation. And there is really some such excuse to be made for him, for although he had estimated the receipts from opium at the comparatively low price of £100 per chest, the actual average was not much over £80. But, after all, it is not the mere fact that a deficit has arisen where a surplus was predicted that need excite a graver feeling than one of mild regret. That which really gives cause for anxiety, if not for alarm, is the mode in which Sir Charles Trevelyan proposes to restore the balance between income and expenditure during the current year. And it must be borne in mind that it is not only the insignificant sum of £144,000 that has to be made good, but also the additional sum of £1,200,000, the amount produced last year by the income-tax. True to his Madras antecedents, Sir Charles turns a deaf ear to the remonstrances of the commercial community, and resolves that the income-tax shall cease and determine from the 31st July next. This, too, he does in the face of the very considerable expenditure that will certainly fall upon the public Treasury before the Bhootan war is brought to an end. It is true the income-tax was imposed for a definite period, and it is always wise to keep faith with such engagements, and especially so with our habitually suspicious fellow-subjects in Hindostan. Still, under the peculiar circumstances of the case it might have been safely renewed for at least another year, when it might possibly have been abolished with far less inconvenience to public interests. However, Sir Charles adheres to the letter of the bond, and accordingly from the 31st of next July the European residents and well-to-do Natives will be richer by three per cent. than they were last year. But it may be questioned whether they will feel particularly grateful for the boon. Many of them, we suspect, would gladly have gone on paying their three per cent. rather than accept the alternative of seeing the agricultural interests endangered by the imposition of export duties on the produce of the soil. Instead of fostering and encouraging the growth of the infant science of agriculture, Sir Charles has done his best to keep it in its present dwarfed and stunted condition. He has selected, too, for taxation the very articles that should most of all have been exempted. He proposes to lay an export duty of three per cent. on jute, wool, tea, and coffee; and of two per cent. on hides, sugar, and silk. Now, every one of these articles rather stands in need of protection than is capable of bearing any extra burden beyond the cost of production and transport. On two occasions jute has proved itself a valuable auxiliary to British manufacturers. When the Crimean war cut off the supply of hemp from Russia, it was discovered that an excellent substitute could be procured from the British possessions in the East. Again, when the American war put an end to the supply of cotton, the same substitute was found equally useful in the manufacture of textile fabrics. But it is not only in India that jute can be successfully cultivated. It grows abundantly in Syria, in Egypt, and on the west coast of Africa, from all of which countries there is quicker and cheaper transport to the British Isles than from the Presidencies of Madras or Bengal. The foreign grower is thus benefited to the extent of three per cent. against our own subjects, already struggling against many disadvantages. Wool, again, has to compete with that shorn from the countless flocks of Australia, while hides can be obtained either from that island-continent or from South America, on terms that will now, to some extent, drive the Indian article out of the home market. The duty on sugar will injure the East Indian growers without conferring the slightest benefit upon those in the West Indies; and the same may be said of coffee, which, as a new experiment, might well have been spared any unnecessary obstacle to its culture. In like manner with regard to tea, if there is any one branch of agriculture that deserves special favour at the hands of the Indian Government, it is this particular industry. The fine provinces of Assam, Sylhet, and Cachar—to say nothing of the spurs of the Himalayas, which will be less affected by this unwise burden—are yearly becoming more and more valuable, and almost entirely through their remarkable capabilities for the production of tea. But Sir Charles Trevelyan cares for none of these things. As Governor of Madras, his opposition to the income-tax rendered him guilty of a flagrant act of insubordination, and so, to be consistent, he takes the earliest opportunity to repeal it without reference to the exigencies of the State, and without the slightest consideration for the important interests which must suffer through his perverseness and over-weening self-conceit. He does not even appear to see that he is killing the goose that lays the golden eggs. For some years past the revenue from land has been steadily increasing, owing to the general prosperity of the country, and the introduction of new modes of culture. But one certain consequence of the imposition of export duties on raw produce will be to check all progress and enterprise, and to throw land once more out of cultivation. Could Mr. Massey have known beforehand to what sort of retrograde policy he was about to be committed by his predecessor, it is hardly probable that he would have consented to undertake the ungrateful task of carrying out measures repugnant to the sense and experience of the best economists of the day. As for Sir Charles Trevelyan, it is earnestly to be hoped that he will now retire into private life, content with the mischief he has already done through his crotchety disposition and angular temperament. A man may be the brother-in-law of a genius and yet possess very mediocre abilities.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—APRIL 5.

Petitions were presented by Mr. VANSITTART, from Major Henry Menars, of the Madras Army, and Major Henry Oakes, of the Bengal Army, praying for redress, &c.; by Captain JERVIS, from Captain T. Keer, late 60th Bengal Native Infantry; Captain W. C. Green, late 60th Bengal Native Infantry; Lieutenant W. V. F. Jacob, late 6th Bengal Native Infantry; Major-general W. R. A. Freeman, Madras Army; Major Lewis Grant, 32nd Madras Native Infantry; Major E. L. Grant, 1st Madras Fusiliers; Major D'Aguiar, late 4th Bengal Native Infantry; Major T. J. D'Ansey, 16th Bengal Native Infantry; Captain A. Darling, late Bengal Artillery; Captain Macleod, late Madras Artillery; Captain and Brevet-major Cahusac, 11th Bombay Native Infantry; Lieutenant-colonel Hampton, 2nd Bengal Native Infantry; and Lieutenant-colonel Harris, of the Bengal Army, to the same effect.

OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

Colonel SYKES, on behalf of Captain Jervis, gave notice of a motion, to be proposed on the 2nd of May, for an address to the Crown praying for the redress of certain grievances complained of by officers of the Indian army.

ORDERS OF THE BATH.

Mr. HANBURY-TRACY gave notice that on Friday, the 5th of May, on the motion for going into Committee of Supply, he should ask the First Lord of the Treasury whether it was the intention of her Majesty's Government to recommend to the Crown the amalgamation of the Civil and Military Orders of the Bath, and should move for returns.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—APRIL 6.

Petitions were presented, by Mr. TORRENS, from Lieutenant-Colonel W. M. Leckie, 13th Regiment Bombay Native Infantry, Lieutenant-Colonel J. S. Kemball, Bombay Staff Corps, Lieutenant E. G. Jenkins, 1st Regiment Bombay Light Cavalry, and Lieutenant A. W. Godson, 12th Regiment Bombay Native Infantry, complaining of violation of rights secured to them by Act of Parliament, and praying for redress; by Colonel SYKES, from Lieutenant W. R. Adams, 23rd Regiment Bombay Native Infantry, Lieutenant A. H. Davis, of the late 2nd Bombay European Regiment, Lieutenant and Adjutant A. P. Currie, 3rd Regiment Bombay Light Cavalry, and Lieutenant M. M. Carpendale, 1st Regiment Scinde Horse, to the same effect.

THE PEGU PRIZE MONEY.

Mr. H. COLE asked the Under-Secretary of State for War when the extraordinary delay in the distribution of the Pegu War prize money was likely to terminate, and why the prize rolls of the 51st Foot, which served in that war, had not been received at the Royal Hospital, Chelsea.

Sir C. WOOD said the prize rolls for her Majesty's 51st Foot had been sent to Chelsea Hospital for payment. The rolls of the 102nd, late 1st Madras Fusiliers, had been received, and the prize money was now in distribution; the remaining prize rolls of the Madras portion of the force were expected shortly.

THE BHOOTAN EXPEDITION.

Lord DUNKELIN asked the Secretary of State for India whether the present invasion of Bhootan had been undertaken with the consent and sanction of the Home Government; whether it was true that two of her Majesty's European Regiments had been ordered up to support the invading force; and whether it was the intention of the Indian Government to keep the troops in the unhealthy country of Bhootan during the coming rainy season; and if so, what, if any, arrangements had been made for putting them under cover.

Sir C. WOOD said that when the failure of the mission that had been sent to Bhootan was known, three courses were suggested for the Government to follow. One was permanent occupation of the country; the second was a temporary occupation; and the third was to take possession of a small portion of the country, including the passes leading therefrom. He had been averse from a permanent occupation of the whole country, and equally so from a temporary occupation, because he did not see how it would be possible to withdraw when we had once taken possession, and therefore the Government of India and himself were of opinion that the third course he had mentioned was that which they ought to adopt. At the end of December all the passes had been occupied, and our loss, except by one unfortunate accident, had been only five men. We remained in peaceable possession until the end of January, when the Bhootanese assembled in great force and attacked our troops. He would not express any opinion upon what happened then, as it was a subject of pending inquiry, but the result had been that it had been thought desirable to send forward a regiment and a half of British troops. He could not say what arrangements had been made or would be made, but in the last despatch he had received there was this statement:—"We shall spare no pains to provide shelter for the troops and to secure their health as far as possible."

ENGLISH SUBJECTS IN CHINA.

Colonel SYKES wished to put a question to the Attorney-General, but in order to make it intelligible he would state the circumstances which had rendered it necessary. A mercantile house at Ningpo had long been in the habit of sending up the river a boat laden with dollars for the purchase of silk. During the occupancy of that region by the Taepings the boat had never been molested, but lately the boat was attacked and plundered by Europeans in the Imperial service. The men were traced—one to Shanghai and two to Hong Kong, where they were seized and committed to prison. Mr. Kent, the merchant, now informed his partner in this country that the judge at Hong Kong had released the prisoners, upon the ground that there was no law to punish Europeans who committed crimes in the interior of China. He wished to know from the Attorney-General whether it was true that the state of the law was such that Europeans might with impunity commit robberies or murders in China.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL said the only answer he could give was that Europeans who committed in China what would be crimes in this country were amenable, if they could be caught and the facts proved against them, to the consular authorities in China, and also to the Criminal Court at Hong Kong. He presumed that in the case referred to by the hon. and gallant gentleman there was a difficulty in obtaining evidence.

INDIAN OFFICERS.

Sir H. VERNEY asked the Secretary of State for India whether it was necessary to retain the present regulation by which officers serving in India forfeit their Indian allowance if they come to Europe while on furlough of six months, and whether he would direct that where non-commissioned officers of regiments in India are sent home on the completion of their first period of service, and others are appointed in their places, the acting non-commissioned officers shall receive the rates of pay due to the rank they fill from the date of their appointment, without waiting until the discharge of the men in England is notified.

Sir C. WOOD in reply, pointed out the injustice of burdening India with the pay and allowances of officers who were amusing themselves in London. With regard to the second question, the measure suggested would simply amount to the keeping up of a double set of non-commissioned officers.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—APRIL 7.

THE BHOOTAN EXPEDITION.

Lord LYVEDEN asked what measures of security for the future the Government intended to take in consequence of the events recently reported to have occurred in Bhootan. He did not approve the annexation of the country to the Indian empire.

Lord DUFFERIN stated the reasons that had compelled the Government to send a military force into Bhootan, and added that the Government had no intention to annex the district. A sufficient force had now been ordered up to keep possession of the forts on the frontier.

Lord ELLENBOROUGH censured the manner in which the expedition had been conducted. The force sent was inadequate and inefficient. He hoped the House would soon take into its serious consideration the whole subject of the present organisation of the Indian army.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—APRIL 7.

Petitions praying for the redress of grievances occasioned by the alleged violation of the Parliamentary Guarantee were presented, by Lord STANLEY, from Major Day and Major Power, of the Indian army; by Lord J. MANNERS, from Major-General G. A. Baillie, of the Madras army; Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Barber, 29th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; Lieutenant-Colonel M. T. French, 34th Regiment Madras Light Infantry; Major W. Barber, 33rd Regiment Madras Native Infantry; and Major William S. Davis, 15th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; by Mr. MALINS, from Major J. P. Briggs, 40th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry; Lieutenant J. H. Prendergast, 38th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; and Lieutenant C. A. Porteous, 27th Regiment Madras Native Infantry; and by Colonel NORTH, from Colonel Manson, Bombay army; Brevet-Major E. Loch, Bombay Cavalry; Lieutenant-Colonel Birdwood and Lieutenant-Colonel H. R. INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

Mr. A. MILLS gave notice that on Tuesday, May 16, he would call the attention of the House to the existing regulations for the examination of candidates for the Civil Service in India, and would move a resolution on the subject.

THE BHOOTAN EXPEDITION.

Mr. H. SEYMOUR called attention to the recent news from Bhootan, giving a brief narrative of the occurrences in the expedition to that country, and of the original cause of it. He thought the circumstances were of so exceptional a character that the House should have some explanation before separating for the holidays.

After observations by Mr. VANSITTART, Mr. GOSCHEN, and Mr. TORRENS on the conduct of the war,

Sir C. WOOD, discrediting some of the accounts referred to by Mr. Seymour, said he thought the best course upon the whole was to give the House a statement of what had really taken place between the Indian Government and Bhootan. He accordingly gave a narrative of the transactions, beginning with the mission of Mr. Eden, who, he said, had not been guilty of any indiscretion, and explaining the choice of measures at the option of the Bengal Government to punish the Bhootecas for the insult offered to the British envoy. He detailed the operations of the British force sent to occupy the dooars, and stated the condition of affairs at the date of the last advices.

INDIAN GRIEVANCES AT THE POLICE-COURT.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET, APRIL 6.

Mrs. Farrell, of No. 13, King-street, was summoned by Major-General North for detaining private letters.

Major-General North said he was chairman of an association for the purpose of remedying the grievances of Indian officers. The association hired an office in the house of the defendant, and after occupying it for some time paid up all the rent that was due, and vacated the place. The defendant received several letters addressed to him in his capacity of chairman of the association, and these letters she refused to give up, unless a demand of £3. 2s. was paid. This demand he believed arose from a charge for fires during 62 days, at 2s. a day. The amount he refused to audit and pay, and it was consequently reduced one-half, which sum was paid to the defendant.

Mr. Knox asked if the charge of 2s. a day was for one fire only.

Major-General North replied that it was. Miss Farrell, who attended for her mother, said the claim was for rent, not for firing.

Mr. Knox said the production of the receipts would show if any rent was due, and he recommended that they should be sent for.

Some papers having been sent for and produced,

Major-general North said the papers would prove that the rent due up to date had been paid. He admitted there was a sum of £3. 8s. in dispute, but that arose from overcharge for fire.

Mr. Knox said the charge of 2s. a day for one fire appeared to him preposterous.

Miss Farrell said the Indian officers kept an unusually large fire, but she repeated that the demand was for disputed rent.

Captain Hamilton said every claim for rent had been fully discharged. The only dispute had reference to an overcharge for a single fire.

Major-general North said the detention of the letters had put the society to great inconvenience, as they contained petitions to be presented to the House of Commons.

Mr. Knox said it was clear to him, from the evidence, that no unsettled claim for rent existed. He should make an order for the delivery of the letters, and if the defendant wished to carry the matter further she could go to the County Court.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for £300,000 in bills on India took place on the 5th inst., at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were—to Calcutta, £174,210; and to Madras, £22,000. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 11½d. on Calcutta and Madras, and 1s. 11½d. on Bombay. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at and above the minimum will receive in full. On Bombay all the tenders were below the minimum. These terms show a reduction of more than 1 per cent. from those obtained on the last occasion, and indicate a further rapid diminution in the demand for means of remittance from this country.

LUCKIMPORE TEA COMPANY.—A prospectus has been issued of the Luckimpore Tea Company of Assam, with a capital of £150,000 in shares of £10 each, to purchase two estates in Assam for £112,000, the vendors taking one-fourth in shares, and the remaining three-fourths in cash, by instalments, and guaranteeing a dividend of 10 per cent. for the present and three following years.

FAILURES IN UPPER INDIA.—The Delhi Gazette regrets to hear that, owing to the recent highly unfavourable news regarding the condition of the cotton market in England, there are likely to be some heavy failures in the N.W. Provinces and in the Punjab. At Umritsur business was completely paralyzed and the discount market closed: one house of respectability had already closed, and others were likely to follow.

BY DAVID THOMAS ANSTED, M.A., F.R.S., &c.

AND

ROBERT GORDON LATHAM, M.A., M.D., F.R.S., &c.

The Illustrations drawn on Wood expressly for the Work, by PAUL J. NAFTEL, Member of the London Society of Painters in Water Colours.

"The 'Channel Islands' is an excellent book of its class—well conceived, well written, well illustrated, well printed. It is the produce of many hands, and every hand a good one. Nearly every thing which a man can desire to know about Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark—about their history, Geography, and natural history—Professor Ansted and Dr. Latham have contrived to tell. Altogether the contents of the volume are as varied and interesting as a well-sustained drama; and to this drama no more graceful and picturesque scenery could have been furnished than we find in the illustrations so profusely given by artists worthy of the subject and equal to their worth—Paul Nafel and M. Petere Le Lièvre. The result is not a merely handsome volume of the old 'Keepsake' style, made to sell and be looked at, but a book of rare merit and value, made for instruction and delight, to be read with pleasure and to be referred to with profit."—Athenæum, Nov. 15, 1862.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—WOUNDS,

SCALDS, BURNS, AND IRRITATING SORES.—The peculiarly mild, soothing, anti-inflammatory power excited by this Ointment strongly recommends its use to all persons who have charge of children. Accidents will occur in the nursery on spite of the greatest caution and utmost vigilance. The scorch, the burn, or the scald, treated early with this Ointment, assumes no angry aspect, and never long tortures the little sufferer, whose every cry excites each by-tender's compassion and pierces the parent's heart. Every nurse should consider this invaluable Ointment an essential to a well-appointed nursery. This Ointment is applicable to any sore, whatever its character. It conducts to health as surely as the compass points to the north.

In India and the Colonies it is extensively used to prevent taking complaints incident to Tropical Climates, and as a renovator of the system after sickness invaluable.

"A superior preparation, that may always be relied on."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

"I latterly, in consequence of much debility, &c. subsequent to Cholera, I have freely used 'Bridge's' 'sarsaparilla' myself, with complete benefit and success."—J. Poett, F.R.C.S.

Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter pints. One pint is equal to eight pints of the ordinary preparation.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The public are cautioned against cheap preparations of Sarsaparilla, which, instead of being what they profess, are nothing but a decoction of common herbs, sweetened with molasses, and flavoured with American Water Green. MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTH-

ING SYRUP, FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR

TEETH. This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when in night past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to procure the teeth with ease; and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parts should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pain in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bills, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE are in receipt of our usual files of papers from Bombay to the 28th of March and from Calcutta to the 22nd of that month.

The recapture of the Bala Pass by the force under the command of Brigadier-General Tytler appears to have been effected in gallant style. On the morning of the 15th of March the 19th N.I.—formerly the 7th Punjab Infantry—led on by Captain Ruggles, dashed at the enemy's position, and swarmed up the palisades, sword in hand. Captain Winson, with 100 Ghoorikas of the 18th N.I.—the old Allypore Regiment—also joined in the assault, but the post of honour was taken and held by the Seikhs. The Bhootahs lost a chief and 34 men, while the loss on the side of the assailants was five killed and a dozen wounded, including among the latter Captain MacGregor, Major of Brigade, who received a slight wound in the hand.

The 43rd Bengal N.I. are to be disbanded, in consequence of their dastardly conduct in connection with the retreat at Dewangiri.

In consequence of the excessive heat, Sir John Lawrence purposes to hasten his departure from the Presidency. The 2nd of April is now spoken of as the probable date of his Excellency's flight from the City of the Shadow of Death.

Sir Hugh Rose was to leave Calcutta on the 23rd by the Mooltan, but with the intention of landing at Madras, and thence proceeding to Bombay. A farewell banquet was given to his Excellency by the Bengal Club on the 20th, and on the following day by the Viceroy; and on the evening of the 22nd Sir Hugh was to have been entertained at a public dinner by the European residents of Calcutta, civilian, military, and mercantile.

Sir William Mansfield was still in the Punjab, and at the date of the latest accounts was on his way to Lahore, where his Excellency was to assume the chief command. In the usual place for such documents, we give Sir William Mansfield's Farewell General Order on the recent changes in the Bombay Army, and also a Government General Order on Sir William's resignation, in which the Governor-in-Council "tenders to him the acknowledgments of Government for his unremitting and successful exertions whilst in command of the Bombay Army to promote its efficiency." The command of the Bombay Army devolved on General Van Straubenzee on the 14th March, and will be held by him for four months, until the expiration of Sir Robert Napier's leave of absence. Sir Robert left Calcutta on the 10th, and was succeeded in the Viceroy's Council by Mr. G. N. Taylor, of the Madras Civil Service. The seat about to be vacated by Mr. Harington will be filled by Colonel Durand.

Dr. Cotton, Lord Bishop of Calcutta, has also commenced a tour of visitation. His Lordship proposed to officiate in Umritsur on the 2nd of April, and in Lahore on the 9th. It is said that his Lordship intends visiting Cashmere by way of Jummoo before proceeding to Murree, where he will pass the summer months.

The Indo-European Telegraph has already proved unequal to the Herculean labour it has undertaken to perform. The necessity for the speedy construction of a second line is day by day becoming more and more manifest. Complaints, too, are made of the time wasted in forwarding messages from Kurrachee to Calcutta. A message from London will reach Kurrachee in twenty-four hours, but two or three days are occupied in sending it on to the other side of India.

We regret to state that cholera has broken out in the 4th Madras Native Infantry, and that from 250 to 300 deaths have taken place, chiefly among the women and children. Some fifty sepoy are reported to have been carried off, and also the Sergeant-Major and the acting Quarter-Master and Interpreter, Lieutenant G. A. Young, formerly of the 52nd N.I. Two other officers and two ladies had likewise been attacked, but were gradually recovering. The ill-fated corps was on its march from Madras to Secunderabad, the disease first making its appearance at Ongole.

A very destructive fire occurred at Maulmain on the 1st March, and was not got under until 400 houses had been consumed. The total loss of property is estimated at half-a million sterling, Messrs. Hobday and Co. being among the largest sufferers.

Mr. Justice Levinge, who was raised to the Calcutta bench in the early part of 1863, died at Penang on the 2nd of March. At the sitting of the Court on the morning of the 15th, the Advocate-general alluded to this sad event in the following terms:—

"Before the Court proceeds further in the day's business, it may not be out of place for me to take this opportunity of expressing, on the part of both branches of the profession, the deep regret with which we have received the news of the death of one whom, I think, I may truly call 'our friend,' Mr. Justice Levinge. It is not my province to pass an eulogium on the decisions of the deceased judge; I only venture to express our deep sense of the uniform patience, attention, and courtesy which distinguished his judicial conduct. We feel, as I am sure every member of your lordship's bench must feel, that by the death of Mr. Justice Levinge the High Court has sustained a heavy, I might say, an irreparable loss."

In reply, Mr. Justice Macpherson said that the bench as well as the bar entertained the greatest esteem for the friend whose loss they now deplored; and that, whether regard were had to the high judicial qualities and great legal ability of Mr. Justice Levinge, or to his more social and private qualities, which made him universally beloved, it was a loss all must deplore; and it would be difficult to supply his place.

THE BOOTAN REPORT.

One of the reports "on the state of Bootan and the progress of the Mission of 1863-64," by the Honourable Ashley Eden, the Envoy, has lately been published at the Bengal-office. The other gives an account of what the writer terms the "ill-treatment to which we were exposed," and fully details "the insolence with which we were treated at Poonakh by the Amla, their assumed willingness to accept the terms offered them by the Government of India, their subsequent refusal to have anything to say to those terms, their threats to confine me in the Fort unless I signed an agreement to return to them the attached Assam Dooars, for which we had regularly paid them revenue, their withholding supplies, their attempt to seize and detain Cheeboo Lama, and the difficulty which we had in getting away from Poonakh by forced night marches to Paro, even after complying with their demands under protest." This "confidential" report is withheld from the public with what would be pronounced wisdom if nothing were known of its contents. But the truth, sad as it was, had been so exaggerated in native durbars, that its publication could not have at least added to the disgrace which Mr. Eden has entailed upon his countrymen in the East as well as on the Government which selected him. Even the report which has only now seen the light, though written in July, last year, will give little information that is new or true to the Indian public, though it may enlighten the few members of Parliament who take an intelligent interest in India. Much of it has already appeared, in one form or another; and much of that part of it which is new has been proved by recent events to be so untrustworthy that the critical reader finds no difficulty in accounting for the comparative failure of the first part of the war which we have above described. The two merits of the report are, that it brings together, in a hundred folio pages of "official" English, such a view of our relations with Bootan as would be supplied by the précis of an Under-Secretary; and that it publishes authoritatively an account of recent politics in Thibet.

Our relations with the Bootans began, so far as records show, in 1772, when they were driven out of Cooch Behar, which they had invaded, by Captain Jones, who not only took the three forts of Darling, Chichacotta, and Passakha, but forced the savages to ask the assistance of the Teshoo Lama who was acting as regent of Thibet. He sent a friendly letter to Warren Hastings in 1774, accompanied by such presents as gilt leather stamped with the Russian eagle. In return the Governor-General despatched Mr. Bogle to Lassa, through Bootan, and he returned entrusted by the Lama with money to build a temple on the Hooghly. When the Grand Lama succeeded to power, nine years after, the well-known mission of Captain Turner was sent to congratulate him on the event. That officer's account of the state of Bootan was too glowing to be correct. In 1787 the Dharma and Deb Rajas sent a vakeel to Calcutta to adjust some boundary disputes, and from our weakness on that occasion, in purchasing the continuance of their friendship by sacrificing our own subjects, just as we have lately done in restoring Dhar and Raichore, all our future troubles are to be dated. In the face of documents, and the decision of our own collector, the Government of the day made over to the Bootans the lands of the Zemindar of Bykantpore, and to this hour the present owners speak of them as having been presented by the East India Company for the support of the temples of the idol Mahakul. From that time till the present day hardly a year has passed without serious aggressions on our territory, borne by us with unusual forbearance. In 1815 Kiahen-kant Boso was sent to settle boundary disputes; and has left us an intelligent account of the country. Again in 1837 we deputed Captain Pemberton with the botanist, Dr. Griffith, and twenty-five sepoy under Ensign Blake. His report, of which we gave an account when Mr. Eden's similar mission set out, is most full and interesting. But the results were so unsatisfactory, and he so narrowly escaped the treatment Mr. Eden suffered, that in 1841 the Governor-General replied to the urgent entreaties of Colonel Jenkins, Commissioner of Assam, that he was averse to sending another agent to that country. "Fruitless Missions of this kind," said Lord Auckland with almost prescience of the fate of Mr. Eden, "will only tend to aggravate our embarrassments, and are not creditable to the British power." From that time the aggressions of the Bootans went on increasing, and on different occasions the Government of the day, like a favourite operadancer, warned the Deb Raja of the consequences "once more, avowedly for the last time." In 1856 Lord Dalhousie threatened permanent annexation, but though the insolent attacks still continued, Sir J. P. Grant thought no immediate action was needed. At last, in March, 1860, the Fallahcotta territory was seized by Lord Canning. This, too, failed, and only in January, 1862, did Lord Elgin agree to send an envoy.

If the declaration of the Governor-General in 1841 was true, that a Mission would only tend to aggravate our embarrassments and was not creditable to the British power, much more was such a course to be deprecated after other twenty years of unchecked insolence and cruelty. This report conclusively proves that action of some kind was imperative; that, to use Lord Granville's words in the House of Lords, a war with Bootan is "just and necessary." But it shows clearly that to send a mission was only to increase the Bootans' impression of our weakness. The proper course was the alternative contemplated by Lord Dalhousie, of annexing not only the Dooars, but part of the upper hill country which has the advantages of Darjeeling. And if there had been any doubt of this it would have been removed by the obstacles which met Mr. Eden at every step. In spite of the want of a settled government, of the fact that a rebellion was going on in Bootan, of the warnings of some subordinate officials through whose jurisdiction he passed, of the studied impertinence and insults of others, and of the necessity which forced him to leave so many of the escort and stores behind, Mr. Eden went on. The world would have applauded his resolution and devotion to duty, but that unfortunately these not uncommon English virtues failed him at the very point where failure involved disaster and disgrace.

Perhaps the humiliation of the envoy would have been forgotten, or at least its effect on the prestige of his country would have been removed, had Mr. Eden obtained such information as would not have prevented our army from triumphantly wiping out the disgrace. To him, in the absence of all other intelligence, Government looked for facts. The value of what he supplied we leave to be estimated from these statements, contrasted with the truth which we have since bought at so dear a price. Of Tongso Penlow, who took and holds Dewangiri, he says:—

"We were told much of the strength of his forces, but we saw him march out on his way back to Tongso, and he had only some 300 men altogether, of whom about 110 were armed with clumsy matchlocks. He possibly may have altogether some 400 men and perhaps 200 matchlocks, but a portion of these he was obliged to leave to protect his own fort at Tongso."

The report estimates the hill population from which the soldiers are taken at 20,000, which would give only 4,000 fighting men if all the male adults were engaged. The military strength is thus described:—

"The Bootanese have no organised or disciplined force. At each of the Forts of Paro and Poonakh there are about 400 Poes or Sepoys, and at Tongso about 600; the Poonakh force has also to protect Tassiahjung. Of the whole about 600 are armed with old matchlocks; they have, however, scarcely any ammunition, and it takes three men to fire a matchlock. They told us that they had no confidence in fire-arms, and scarcely ever used them except in taking forts. Their chief arms are stones, a long knife, a shield, and bows and arrows; the latter they can scarcely use. The catapult which they also employ is a clumsy contrivance by which twenty or thirty men, with an immense deal of trouble, throw a stone about 180 yards. Round their outposts they put little spikes of bamboos, which may possibly be effective against naked feet on a dark night, but would be little or no impediment to our Sepoys. The leaders, and some of the Poes, wear coats of mail and iron helmets. They admit themselves to be the most despicable soldiers on the face of the earth."

No wonder that we undervalued our enemy, and that, on the approach of the rainy season, two European regiments must be sent to do, at a disadvantage, what ought to have been accomplished, without any mission, years ago. —Friend of India.

AN EYE TO BUSINESS.—A few Sundays ago a scandalous piece of business took place in St. James's Church, Anarkullee, Lahore. The facts are related by the Rev. Kilbee Stuart, chaplain of the station. The Adjutant of the 6th N.I. was leaving the place, and wished to have his things disposed of by auction. Accordingly he made the job over to one Newson, who had the necessary placards printed announcing

A GRAND AUCTION.

These, on the Sunday in question, were found by the congregation scattered all over the seats, to the horror and indignation of those who came to forget for a while all the meaner concerns of this life. To whom the profanity is exactly due no one will confess, especially after the reverend gentleman's determination to "brand him as a profane person, a heathen man, and a publican." The chuprassee who brought the notices to the church says he was ordered to do so by the Adjutant saheb; but the Adjutant denies it altogether, so there is an end of the matter so far as he is concerned. Mr. Newson has not yet put forth a disclaimer, and when he does, the whole blame will unquestionably descend on the capacious shoulders of the chuprassee, who will be held responsible for all the worldliness and heathenism of his betters.

UMBALLA WATER SUPPLY.—According to the Pioneer, the station of Umballa suffers greatly from want of water, but two enormous wells have been constructed a short distance beyond the cantonments, and leading from those wells are ducts, which convey it to the artillery and cavalry lines. This, however, can be but a temporary expedient. A project of a permanent nature has, for a long time, been before Government for introducing a supply from certain fresh-water lakes which exist in the neighbourhood, and it is, as we hear, a perfectly feasible one. We can scarcely think that the amount of outlay—estimated at something under two lacs—need long deter Government from adding the one element wanting in this dullest, but otherwise most desirable of stations.

THE FORT GLOSTER MILLS have been put up for sale at the office of the Company in Hasting's-street, and knocked down to Capt. T. E. Rogers, for four lakhs and ninety thousand rupees. The shareholders will thus receive 1,225 rupees per share.

C BATTERY 22ND BRIGADE R.A. left Agra March 14th by train for Delhi, en route to Meer.

THE LATE MR. GOODEVE.—We (Englishman) observe with great regret the announcement, in the home journals, of the death, at Clifton, of Mr. Joseph Goodeve, formerly of the Calcutta Bar, and for some time officiating as Master of the late Supreme Court. Mr. Goodeve came to this country at a somewhat advanced age, with a matured reputation for sound legal acquirements, and his merits as an English lawyer were at once recognised, both by the profession and by the public. To the latter, however, he is probably best known as the author of the useful elementary treatise upon Evidence, which he published about three years ago, and which, although without pretensions of much originality, has, from the clearness and fullness of its matter, taken its place as a standard work upon the subject to which it relates. For a considerable time previous to his leaving this country, Mr. Goodeve had held the professorship of English Law in the Presidency College, for which appointment his great good sense and extensive attainments especially qualified him. To all who knew him in private life, Mr. Goodeve was endeared, by the simplicity and geniality of his manners, as well as by the sterling goodness of his disposition.

MR. F. MACNAGHTEN, of the Civil Service, who has been placed out of employ by the local executive, has stated in his appeal to the Supreme Government that he was exonerated by the commissioner, Mr. Cockburn, from the charges brought against him, and that he was promoted immediately afterwards by the Bengal Government. With reference to his letter to the High Court, which seems to have given offence to the judges, he submits that it was not considered insubordinate or petulant by the Government, and that had the High Court expressed its opinion sooner, he would have been glad to apologise, or to make any amends in his power. In reply to the charge of his having, on the most frivolous and childish excuses withheld the papers required by the magistrate of Midnapore, he has stated that his answer to the earlier application was that he had appealed the case, and therefore considered himself justified in withholding the papers. With reference to the charge of disingenuousness and bad spirit, he has declared that he never stated the papers had been forwarded to the Government, until they had actually left his hands.

CABOOL.—The Ameer has lost Kelat, which has fallen into the hands of Sirdar Mahomed Ameen Khan. In the meanwhile the Delhi Gazette correspondent gives the following summary of a letter received by the Ameer, from his agents in Toorkistan, regarding the progress of Russian intrigues. On the application of the Russians, the King of Bokhara has allowed them to have their cantonment in Chahar Joee, a place in the Bokhara territory, close to Murve Shahjehan, situated on the bank of the Hamoon. The Shah of Persia has also given his consent to their locating their troops in Murve Shahjehan, so the Russian troops will be cantoned there. The Russians are about to lay out their cantonments in those places, and will not meet with any interference from those Powers. The Russians are said to have assured the King of Bokhara that they will give him all the places they may take from the Mohammedan rulers, and will only keep their troops there.

JUDICIOUS CLEMENCY.—The Oudh Gazette informs us that the Government of India, on the recommendation of the Chief Commissioner, has sanctioned to the two sons of the Rajah of Boundee and the Rajah of Akowna 5,000 acres each of waste land in the Baraitch district, on the condition that the grantees support their immediate relations from the proceeds of the land. The grounds on which the request was made are, that when the Begum mother of Brijis Kudr, the pseudo king of Oudh, was driven across the Gogra in 1858, she took up her residence at the fort of the Rajah of Boundee, a powerful chief of the Baiktwar Rajpoots in the Baraitch district. Considering himself compromised by this circumstance, he fled into Nepaul, and soon afterwards died there. His two sons, who were very young at the time, returned to the province in 1859, and have since been living on the bounty of the Rajah of Kuppoothulla, on whom the valuable confiscated estate of their father had been conferred. The Rajah of Akowna, head of the Jamoor clan of Rajpoots, having been in arms against us, took refuge in Nepaul, under much the same circumstances as the Boundee Rajah, but, more fortunate than he, lived to return to Oudh in 1859, after the term fixed by the amnesty had expired. His estate also was confiscated, and bestowed on the Rajah of Kuppoothulla, from whom he too receives a charitable allowance for the support of himself, his young family, and two brothers. Neither of these rajahs was suspected of the maltreatment of Europeans, or of participation in any atrocities; bad advice alone prevented their acceptance of the offer of pardon which was made when we took possession of the Trans-Gogra districts.

LANDLORDS AND TENANTS.—Though the pleadings in the famous Rent Case were closed a week ago, the Judges of the High Court are still sitting in private, and are likely to do so for some time, to consider a judgment which will affect the conditions of millions. Any decision short of confirming that of Sir B. Peacock, which gave the landlord a due proportion of net profit, or the highest market-rate of rent, will be productive practically of gross injustice. On the "proportion of produce" principle, those who had long ago raised their rates will now get a very high rent—the case of the native zemindar; while those who allowed their tenant to sit at a very low rent from whatever reason, will still get a low one—the case of the English zemindar. Such an example as this represents the state of thousands of tenants in Kishnaghur. A peasant's profits were Rs. 2-8 of which he paid annas 5-4 as rent. The price of produce has doubled; he now gets Rs. 5, but pays only annas 10-8; but a peasant on the next estate, with the same profits, has been paying double this rent, or annas 10-8, and he will now be required to pay Rs. 1-4. This reduces the "proportion of produce" principle ad absurdum. Either the landlord in the former case, or the tenant in the latter, is treated unjustly. The moment we leave the market-rate we are in a sea of wrong. There may not be a market-rate based on considerable competition for land to the same extent as in England. But there is hardly a village in Bengal in which there are not idle tenants who, paying the philanthropic rent of Act X. to the landlord, sublet their land at a high figure. The market-rate in India is the highest rent which a landlord can obtain for his beegahs. If there is little competition as the "proportion of produce" advocates say, there is the less likelihood of the landlord's self-interest allowing him to drive his tenantry off the soil.—Friend of India, March 16.

CHITPORE SMALL-POX HOSPITAL.—The Right Honourable the Viceroy, on the recommendation of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, has granted to Dr. Goodeve Chuckerbutty a salary of Rs. 2,400 per annum as Superintendent of the Small-pox Hospital opened at Chitpore, for the reception of natives afflicted with that disease, with a subordinate staff of officers and servants to assist him in the duties of the hospital, amounting to Rs. 671 per mensem.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL F. CROSSMAN, heretofore commanding the Lahore Light Horse at Barrackpore, has been appointed by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to the command of the 12th Regiment of Bengal Cavalry at Meerut, in succession to Major P. R. Hockin, who is absent on sick leave in England, but will not return to this country.

THE CALCUTTA RECLAMATION COMPANIES.

—At the present time there are three projects before the public in Eastern India which are engaging much attention, and being kindred undertakings we propose to group them together. These are the Port Canning Scheme, the Salt Water Lake Reclamation and Irrigation Company, and the project for reclaiming and cultivating the Sunderbunds. With regard to the Port Canning Land Investment Reclamation and Dock Company, the parent project of the three, its capital is Rs. 1,20,00,000, or £1,200,000 sterling, in 6,000 shares at Rs. 2,000 each. The Company, says the prospectus, is formed to secure valuable landed property near Port Canning, to build upon it, and then let or sell it, as may be most advisable. The property thus secured is equal to 134,590 acres, and the annual rental of that portion of the property at present leased out amounts to upwards of Rs. 1,30,000, subject, however, to immediate enhancement. The average cost of the above land is Rs. 32-8 per acre; 8,526 acres of it are in leasehold, and 126,064 acres are redeemable in freehold, at a cost of about Rs. 2,50,000. Another object of the company is to build docks and wharves along the entire foreshore of the new port, and to erect storehouses for the storage of goods. When the company's operations commence, or when any of the buildings, docks, or wharves are to be ready for public use, is not stated. The objects of the Salt Water Lake Reclamation and Irrigation Company are to reclaim and irrigate the plain partially submerged by the Salt Water Lake, within two and a-half miles of Calcutta, and the clearance of the surrounding jungle; and to utilise the sewage of Calcutta. The area available amounts to upwards of 250,000 beegahs, or about 130 square miles, of which 87,000 beegahs are the land of the Salt Water Lake and Tardah jungle. The first operations will be on the Lake lands, comprising 24 square miles, which will be brought into fertility forthwith. The clearance of the jungle will be commenced simultaneously with the drainage and irrigation of the Lake lands, and this will be done this year immediately after the rains. There is a population on the spot sufficient to lease the lands as drained. The capital is sixty lacs of rupees, and the number of shares is 3,000, at Rs. 2,000 each. The prospectus of the project for cultivating the Sunderbunds has not yet been published; but it appears that the alluvial tract in question extends about 150 miles from west to east, and about 50 miles from north to south. It is for the most part covered with jungle; yet there is perhaps not any patch of a thousand acres in extent which may not be described as "promising soil capable of producing every cereal fruit and spice peculiar to the tropics, and to the semi-tropical portion of the adjacent zones." The Sunderbunds were once in an excellent state of cultivation, and most of this vast tract is susceptible of cheap and rapid reclamation.

DEATH BY LIGHTNING.—Mr. Colliss, the indigo planter at Monghyr, was travelling on an elephant when he was overtaken by a violent thunderstorm. He held a large umbrella over himself, supporting the end of the handle on his palm; it was struck by lightning, which made its way through Mr. Colliss's hand, scorched the back of the mahout, and passing into the elephant killed it on the spot. Mr. Colliss and the native lay stunned for some time, and were eventually carried home. To Mr. Colliss the accident ended fatally. No danger was apprehended by his medical attendant, but mortification of the hand and arm eventually ensued, which rapidly terminated in death.—Delhi Gazette, March 11.

FRAUDULENT TELEGRAMS.—Charles Payne, a signaller in the Calcutta Telegraph Office, has been committed to the sessions for obtaining the sum of Rs. 700 from Messrs. Gregory and Co., by sending to them false telegrams which he concocted in the office.

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY.—Mr. Premchund Roychund's gift of two lakhs of rupees to the University of Calcutta, announced on the 11th March by the Vice-Chancellor, is most opportune. The money was entrusted to the Hon. Mr. Anderson to be spent on some public object in Calcutta, and he has shown the discrimination which was to be expected of him in selecting the University. The fact that, in spite of many eloquent appeals, this is the first endowment offered to the University, is another of those commentaries on the selfish apathy of the Bengali millionaires which we have now come to accept as ineradicable. Yet, surely, men who count their Government papers in bundles of eighty lakhs, and spend more on a single marriage than the Jain speculator has given, will be stirred up by this example. The University has not even a mace for its senate, and all its arrangements are destitute of either dignity or pomp. The building promised by Government is as yet only spoken of. It will fall to the senate to decide on the object to which this endowment is to be devoted. Their own recommendation, that a chair of physical science should be established in the new building for all the neighbouring colleges, they will now be able to carry out. No mere official difficulties as to the supervision of the professor should prevent this. The syndicate can very well appoint him and inspect his work, without raising the question as to how the Government of India, which has no educational department, can do so.—Friend of India.

DACCA LUNATICS.—The Dacca News of the 18th of March is glad to notice that the poor inmates of the Dacca Lunatic Asylum, numbering about 230 patients, partook on Tuesday last of an abundant feast provided for them at the expense of the deeply regretted civil surgeon of Dacca, the late Dr. Simpson, according to directions contained in his will. Kindness towards these poor creatures was one of the amiable traits in Dr. Simpson's character, and before quitting this transitory existence he appears to have wished to enforce on his successors the necessity of adopting a similar course towards these patients. The food had been cooked by the lunatics themselves, and after Dr. Beatson had tasted it and pronounced it to be unexceptionally good, they were allowed to partake of it, which they did with the highest relish and gratification. Mr. Abercrombie, the executor in India to the doctor's will, Mr. Ballett, and others, were present, and on tasting the food thought it excellent. The feast, as it may be natural to suppose, had the effect of strongly recalling the kind-hearted liberality of the good doctor to their memory. Everything was well managed.

UNCONVENTED PENSION RULES.—The Home authorities have decided that, in verbose official language, "an Unconvented Servant appointed prior to the promulgation of the new Pension Rules on the 8th June, 1863, may, if those rules render it necessary for him, in order to obtain a pension, to serve for a longer period than was required by the old rules, be allowed, in the event of ill health rendering it necessary for him to retire from the service, to complete the period of service required by the old Rules, provided that he shall not at any time have availed himself of the benefits conferred by the new Leave Rules." The question was raised by an appeal from Mr. J. G. Ferraud of the Madras Military Department. The decision is simple justice.

FREE PASSAGE FOR EUROPEAN WORKMEN.—We see it mentioned in the Indian Daily News that a company is to be started for the purpose of enabling European workmen to secure a free passage home in case of sickness by the payment of a small monthly sum. The company is to be called "The Free Passage Assurance Company (Limited)." This, if well managed, will be a very great boon to a class which is too much neglected in India.

CALCUTTA WATER SUPPLY.—The Engineers' Journal describes Mr. Clark's scheme for supplying Calcutta with water, which is to be at once carried out at a cost of £600,000. The water is to be taken from the Hooghly, at Pultah, above Barrackpore, and 16½ miles from Calcutta. There is a depth of 60 feet there. "It will be drawn 100 feet from low water mark, and pumped up twice in the day during five hours at each period of low water. It will be conveyed by the river water aqueduct to the settling tanks, where it will remain quiescent for a period of 36 hours, after which it will be drawn off from the surface into the filter, from which it will be conveyed by a brick conduit (capable of conveying, by a constantly running stream, 9,000,000 gallons per 24 hours) laid along the side of the Barrackpore-road, 66,600 feet in length, and at an inclination of 1 in 5,500, to Tallah, on the Circular Canal, where the water will be received in a covered reservoir, with a capacity of eight million gallons. Here three fifty-horse power engines will be erected for the purpose of lifting the water to a sufficient height to distribute three millions of gallons in the northern division of the town during the day time, and three millions of gallons in the night into a covered reservoir to be constructed in Wellington-square. Adjacent to Wellington-square, engines will be erected to distribute water under a pressure of 100 feet, to the European and mercantile portion of the community and to the shipping." From Tallah the water will be conveyed into the town by pipes extending altogether for fifty-two miles. The cost of the water delivered in Calcutta will be about one rupee per 3,000 gallons.

THE EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT IN BENGAL suffered so much under the contempt of Sir J. P. Grant, that the best men were eager to leave it, and few could be attracted to their places. Appointments formerly held by trained Cambridge men were necessarily filled by natives, whose accent was bad, knowledge of idiom imperfect, and training partial. This evil has now been corrected by Mr. Beadon. We are far from sympathising with him in the belief that it will be a very long time before the State can, according to the provisions of the Despatch of 1854, hand over its monopolist colleges to non-official teachers. But since the teaching part of the educational department must be maintained for some time, and the inspecting part always, we rejoice that English gentlemen will no longer be frightened from it. The Indian Council has sanctioned a plan by which the higher appointments, which will generally be filled by University men, will be ranged in grades reaching from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,500 a month. Where there is no want of merit, teachers, professors and inspectors will be advanced through each grade with an addition of Rs. 50 a month, each year, to their salaries.

OFFICIAL SALARIES.—News has come from home that will gladden the hearts of some men in these parts, being no less than that an order has been issued by the Secretary of State directing that the salaries attached to civil offices shall be equalized, or put on the same footing, in Bengal, the North-West Provinces, and the Punjab. In the Punjab this will principally affect the Deputy Commissioners, who are to receive at the rate of Rs. 17,000, Rs. 20,000, and Rs. 23,000 per annum, according to their relative standing in the service. Seventeen Deputy Commissioners of the 1st class, who at present receive Rs. 1,500 per mensem, will hereafter receive Rs. 1,916. Eight Deputies of the 2nd class, now Rs. 1,200, in future Rs. 1,666. Seven Deputies, 3rd class, now Rs. 1,000, to be increased to Rs. 1,416. No change is to be made in the pay of Commissioners, who will continue to draw Rs. 2,750 per month and travelling allowances, nor we believe will any alteration be made in the pay of Assistant Commissioners.

THE HOOGHLY COMMITTEE.—At the twelfth sitting of the Hooghly Committee, Mr. W. Grant, of Messrs. Grant, Smith, and Co., was examined. In the course of a lengthened examination he showed the advantages, over unhealthy wet docks and mere jetties, of a wharf wall, which would add to the width of the strand by reclaiming the foreshore, would be a sanitary improvement and an ornament to the city, and would provide more accommodation. Ships usually discharge from three hatchways at a wharf wall, which could not be done in the case of jetties. Mr. Bradford Leslie designed a combined project of a wharf wall and docks, the former extending from Chandpal Ghat to Armenian Ghat, and the latter occupying that space of ground between the railway jetty and the Burning Ghat, embracing a length of 1,600 yards by 160 yards in breadth, which would afford space for about 40 acres of docks besides a half-tide basin. The cost in either case would amount to £1,400,000, and the undertaking would be completed in two years. The trade of Calcutta has increased from 181,485 tons in 1833-4 and 410,310 in 1853-4 to 917,102 tons in 1863-64. Mr. Grant showed that Port Canning is necessary to relieve the trade, especially in the bulky articles of rice, seeds, and jute, which come from its vicinity, and last year amounted to 795,528 tons. Mr. Pendleton, agent of the Calcutta and South Eastern Railway (Mutlah), was examined at the thirteenth sitting. He would approve of any site selected by the East India line for its Calcutta terminus as best for his own. He thought there would be no pecuniary advantage in continuing the united railways to Dalhousie Square unless the projected suburban lines were constructed—from Dum-Dum on the Eastern Bengal Railway to Chitpore, and from Ballygunge on the Calcutta and South Eastern Railway to Kidderpore. Mr. Pendleton anticipated a large traffic from Mutlah, both of exports and imports. He said that off Port Canning there is deep water frontage for three miles. He thought that, taking equal lengths, the Mutlah would accommodate more ships than the Hooghly. There is room for at least 150, and possibly 200, ships in the Mutlah in three or four tiers, besides those which could anchor in the stream where there are no "bores."

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAM.—The following is the reply of the Pasha of Bagdad to the message of the Viceroy, congratulating the Pasha on the completion of the telegraphic communication between London and Calcutta. (Telegram.) From Namick Pasha, Bagdad, to the Viceroy and Governor-General of India. "I have received your Excellency's telegram, to which I now do myself the pleasure to reply, begging you to be kind enough to accept my thanks for the flattering terms in which your Excellency has condescended to express yourself, and, at the same time, to permit me to congratulate your Excellency on the accomplishment of an undertaking as important as it is highly beneficial to the two Empires. And I ventured to express a hope that the efforts of his Imperial Majesty's Government to secure the utmost possible regularity in the telegraphic communication with India may always afford complete satisfaction to her Britannic Majesty's Government."

THE GRAND JURY OF CALCUTTA have made a presentment to the Court, in which they object to the abolition of that institution in the Presidency towns. "They view with regret the entire removal of one of the most honoured safeguards of British liberty, which has also provided one of the most legitimate and constitutional methods of bringing the wishes and opinions of the governed before the governors of the country."

THE 4TH SEIKH INFANTRY, under Major Boisragon, has arrived at Peshawur from Kohat to replace the 41st N. I., which has left for Allypurrh.

THE GRANT-IN-AID SYSTEM.—The Supreme Government have addressed to all its subordinate Governments a circular requesting them to consider the working of the Grant-in-aid system, and report thereon if alterations in it are required. This is done in order to meet the requests of Sir C. Wood that the Grant-in-aid rules, which date from July, 1854, should be revised if they were proved to have failed. By the deputation from the Church Missionary Society to the Indian Secretary in Nov. 1863, it was alleged that such failure was notorious, that the amount of aid granted to schools bore a very small proportion to the direct expenditure of Government on education, and, moreover, that great obstacles were thrown in the way of voluntary and independent educationists receiving grants for their schools. The circular from the Governor-General is chiefly important as enclosing a reply to these allegations, drawn up by Mr. Atkinson, the Principal of the Bengal Educational department. This is an exceedingly comprehensive document, and throws much light on the position of the Indian Government towards popular education. Mr. Ashley Eden, who, as secretary, forwards this document, gives his official opinion that it affords "a complete refutation of the statements of the Church Missionary Society," especially as regards the lower provinces of Bengal, and that it embodies "a masterly defence of the existing and recently amended grant-in-aid rules." In direct refutation of the missionary statement it is shown that the increase during the last four years of grant-in-aid expenditure has been eight times that in schools directly under Government. It is stated also, that while the attendance in missionary schools is only 16½ per cent. as compared with native schools the aid received by them stands at 24 per cent. as compared with native schools. The bias of Mr. Atkinson's report, as in favour of secular education pure and simple, as against State aid to missionary efforts, is supported by the Indian press generally.

THE CALCUTTA MISSIONARY CONFERENCE have addressed an appeal for more missionary agency in India to "ministers, students, and all such as desire to be engaged in the spread of Christian truth." The address, signed by 35 missionaries, states that there are about 525 European and American missionaries now labouring in India, aided by 140 ordained native missionaries, and 1,400 catechists. This gives one ordained native or European missionary to every 300,000 of the population. Imagine eight ministers labouring in London, assisted by 17 Scripture readers. The missionaries remove the bugbear of the climate by saying that the greater proportion of Europeans with regular and temperate habits may expect to live in India almost as free from disease as in England.

NEW BARRACKS.—According to the Englishman, the labours of the Sanitary Commissions in India and in England have, as regards the army, resulted in a well-matured scheme for building sufficient barracks on the most improved principles all over India. The money required for this immense reform will have to be borrowed. Also the works of irrigation are to be extended and improved. For these purposes, too, the Government of India proposes to raise loans. It is intended to open a loan in England for twenty-five to thirty millions sterling, to be taken at the rate of four or five millions a year, as may be required for these extensive public works planned for India.

THE INDIAN MINTS.—In January last the Calcutta mint coined Rs. 31,31,502; the Madras mint Rs. 6,76,000; and the Bombay mint Rs. 15,99,539.

THE CASH BALANCES of all India in Jan. last amounted to Rs. 12,51,61,419 against Rs. 14,61,59,791 and Rs. 19,74,67,152 in the same month in 1864 and 1863 respectively.

THE SOI-DISANT RAO SAHEB.—A Mahratta Brahmin was some time since chased from Hyderabad for being engaged in a conspiracy against the British Government, and was captured in the assigned districts. He gave himself out to be the notorious Rao Saheb, of the Peishwa's family. He is now to be sent to Cawnpore for trial. When captured, a batch of registered letters from several rebels and disaffected men was found in his possession.

LIBEL.—In the Allahabad Observer, a daily paper now extinct, an article lately appeared reflecting on the honesty of Mr. Elias, a contractor on the Jumna Bridge Works, and also on the officers of the Railway Company who give contracts. Mr. Stewart Reid, the Sessions Judge, awarded very heavy damages, with costs—Rs. 2,500—against Mr. Hamilton, who supplied the information libelling Mr. Elias, and Rs. 8,000 against both Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Honigberger, the proprietor of the paper, for libelling several officers high in the service of the Railway Company.

CALCUTTA POST OFFICE.—Orders have been issued to expedite the works of the new Telegraph, and the Post Office building, and the contractors, or rather the sub-contractors, have offered to complete them even before the time previously agreed upon, so that the building may, in all probability, be fitted up for use in December next, and the Telegraph and the Post Offices will probably be removed to their new quarters by the commencement of the year 1866.

MIRZAPORE.—A large mill is about to be established in Mirzapore on the joint-stock principle, for the manufacture of cotton goods and gunny.

THE PUNJAB CLUB.—All the shares in this club have been taken up. The institution was to open on the 1st April (unfortunately All Fools' Day) with a grand dinner.

COLONEL J. L. WALKER, lately appointed to the command of the 38th N.I. Barrack-pore, died suddenly on Saturday, the 11th of March, when on a visit to Calcutta.

ASSISTANT SURGEONS after a service of six years are to be permitted to retire on the half pay of a captain, if disqualified for further service.

THE DEATH OF MR. JUSTICE LEVINGE at Penang, on the 2nd March, is reported. Mr. Levinge, a barrister judge of the Bengal High Court, had not been three years in India.

PISCICULTURE.—An attempt is being made to introduce European fish into the waters of the Neigherry Hills. A medical gentleman in the Madras Presidency has, for some time past, been interesting himself in a scheme for introducing European fish into the waters on the Neigherry Hills, and, in a letter to the Madras Government, he now states that he believes the scheme perfectly practicable. In reply, the Governor in Council has requested that, in order to test the success of the experiment, the necessary arrangements might be made for the safe conveyance of trout and char ova from England.

BREACH OF DISCIPLINE.—We regret to learn that Captain Wood, R.E., is about to be removed from Bangalore, owing to a breach of discipline in connection with the respect which is due to the orders of the officer commanding the Mysore Division. Capt. Wood, we are told, was desired by General Spenser to attend a committee with a view to calculate the "cubic contents of a certain building at Bangalore;" but he refused to do so. It is well for him that he subsequently apologised to the Major-General for such conduct; notwithstanding, however, it has led, we understand, to an arrangement for his early transfer to another station.—Carnatic Telegraph.

DEATH OF DR. RATTON.—The Central India Times announces the death of Dr. Ratton, of the 3rd Madras Light Cavalry, which took place at Karinja Dak bungalow from cholera. The deceased officer was on his way from Kamptee to Bombay, whence he intended proceeding home on medical certificate.

AN ADVENTURE.—We had a little excitement here (Secunderabad) the other morning. The 10th regiment was out for instruction in picquet duties to the ground in front of the Rev. Mr. English's house. The sentries were just posted, when we heard two shots fired behind Mr. English's house, and were told by some natives that there was a big tiger there. The regiment was broken up. We got guns, and on going back to Mr. English's house found that a large panther had taken up his quarters inside the house. Mr. English, his wife, and four children were obliged to lock themselves up in a room. By this time a lot of the K. D. G.'s officers came up armed with carbines and breechloaders. Several holes were made in the roof of the house in different parts, and at last the brute was seen under a small table. On overturning the table with a long pole, out he bolted, smash through a window. Several of the K. D. G.'s fired at him, but, probably, in their excitement, none of them hit him. He then bolted into the house again, into the drawing-room. A sepoy of the 32nd walked into the room with a spear, and was at once attacked, the brute tearing a large piece out of his arm. The man, however, succeeded at last in turning it out, when it charged out and caught an unfortunate native, knocking him down, and holding him over the edge of a small artificial tank. Colonel Macdougall then fired at him, and hit the brute behind the shoulder, which made it drop the man and charge Lieutenant Hatfield, of the K. D. G.'s, who gave it both barrels in the head, and rolled it over. As it was sprawling about in its agony, he walked up to it with his rifle clubbed, and as this was very dangerous, Colonel Macdougall took one more shot, and finished the animal. The brute has wounded the following:—Major Alexander, of the K. D. G.'s, also a ghorawallah of Major A.'s, who has since died; a private of the K. D. G.'s, one sepoy of the 32nd regiment, and the camp follower over whom the brute was when Colonel Macdougall fired. This man has his stomach and belly ripped open. The animal has been very bold, and has done a deal of damage in the cantonment, and everyone is thankful that it has at last been killed.—Bangalore Herald, March 22.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—Information has reached us that two gentlemen, Messrs. Thompson and Linton, whilst out elephant shooting last week in the neighbourhood of Cholady, South-East Wynaad, came upon a "rogue," (elephant) when Mr. Thompson fired and wounded him in the head. The brute now turned and charged, seizing Mr. Linton by his belt. This fortunately gave way, but not before Mr. Linton was elevated considerably in the air, from which position he fell with great force. The elephant next tried to crush Mr. Linton with his feet, in which attempt he seems to have been frustrated by the blood from the wound running over his eyes and blinding him, so that Mr. Linton had an opportunity of making his escape, a very providential one.—Neigherry Excelsior.

CHOLERA IN THE 4TH M.N.I.—Owing to the family system a Madras regiment on the march is like a town emptying itself of inhabitants. Cholera frequently seizes the crowded camp and makes great havoc. The Madras Athenæum mentions that the 4th M.N.I., on the march to Secunderabad, has thus lost a large number of sepoy and camp followers, and also the Quarter-Master, Lieutenant Young.

THE MADRAS HUNT, which seems to flourish as vigorously as that other admirable institution, the club, has resolved to give a dinner on the 21st March to Sir Hope Grant, Major General McCleverty, Mr. Clake, and Captain Macleod, members who intend to leave Madras permanently. After a month's tour in British Burmah, inspecting the troops, Sir Hope Grant returned to Madras on the 5th.

PORT PHAYRE.—Mr. O'Riley, deputy commissioner of Bassein, has discovered a new port between Sandoway and the Bassein district, which he has dubbed Port Phayre, after the chief commissioner of British Burmah. It is at the mouth of a fine broad navigable stream, with a clear entrance for vessels of considerable size. The village is at present called Kyeintalee, and is two days distant by boat, or across the Arracan hills from Bassein. The people are described as industrious; tobacco, indigo, sugar-cane, turmeric, ginger, and cotton are produced in abundance. Each family has a patch of cotton for its own use. The whole coast at the head of the Bay of Bengal was once the scene of a flourishing trade, which seems likely soon to be restored to it, if we may judge from the progress of Chittagong and Arracan.

MAJOR DIXON, one of the Madras officers now serving in Mysore, has been called upon by the home Government for an explanation of his conduct in neglecting to provide for the support of his children in England.—Hurkaru, March 17.

MADRAS UNIVERSITY.—Eleven out of twenty-nine candidates obtained the degree of Bachelor of Arts at the last examination of the Madras University. One was in the first class.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. MERWANJEE FRAMJEE PANDAY, broker to Messrs. Campbell, Mitchell and Co., has contributed one lac of rupees, with the object of providing house accommodation at reasonable rents for Zoroastrians residing in Bombay. This donation was made at the performance of the third day's funeral ceremonies, consequent upon the death of Mr. Merwanjee's mother. Trustees have been nominated to take charge of the above sum, with instructions to purchase extensive lots of land in Girgaum, Grant-road, or the Bellasis and Falkland-roads, to build chawls and houses thereon, and to resell the land in small portions, or the houses separately, at cost price, to Parsees only. The trustees are to purchase and re-sell lands and houses according to their discretion, until the whole fund of a lac of rupees shall have been expended. At the performance of the ceremony in question, the relatives of the deceased lady contributed an aggregate sum of Rs. 81,475 for various charitable and religious purposes.

FIRE AT EGUTPOORA.—A fire broke out on Sunday evening in a large shed erected by the G. I. P. Railway Company at Egutpoora, in which a large quantity of stores were deposited. The origin of the fire is unknown, and no alarm was given by the ramoosee in charge of the building. A number of Europeans and natives were soon on the spot after the fire was discovered, and used every exertion to subdue the flames, which they managed to get under in five or six hours. The building was a large one, and had cost the company about 17,000 rupees. There was a number of carriages in the building at the time of the accident, and about ninety of them were saved. By great exertions about an eighth of the whole building was isolated from the remaining portion, and so escaped the conflagration, but the portion consumed with its contents will cause a loss to the company, it is said, of about two and a half lacs. More of the building would certainly have been saved but for the great want of water, only a very small supply being at hand. The ramoosee who was in charge of the building, and who says he can give no account of the origin of the fire, has been taken into custody.—Times of India, March 28.

H. BIRDWOOD, Esq., Secretary to Government, is to be appointed Acting Senior Magistrate.

MR. JOHN O'LEARY, Barrister-at-Law, has been appointed Reporter to the High Court on its Original Jurisdiction side.

COTTON FRAUDS ACT.—In the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, at a recent meeting, the results of the Cotton Frauds Act were discussed. The general estimate of the merchants seems to be that no circumstantial evidence is a match for the ingenuity of cotton dealers: the terms of the Act when compared with the subtle devices adopted to controvert it cause the English lawyers who drew it up to appear but as children in the ways of the wicked world of Western India. It is, however, admitted that gross imposition, such as packing bales with stones and clods, has been checked by the few penal convictions obtained. It is probable that a falling market and a natural desire to sell will prove far more efficacious in checking fraud and even in improving the staple than any legal device that can be invented. Cotton is being sent down in large quantities from the Mofussil, and the stock at Bombay is rapidly accumulating. It is much too soon to form any reliable estimate as to the breadth of ground likely to be sown with cotton for next year; and news of American prospects as anxiously looked for in order to the guidance of cultivators and merchants.

JACOBABAD, March 10.—The 1st Sind Horse, Jacob's Rifles, and the Mountain Train Battery returned from Sukkur on the 3rd leaving His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief at Shikarpore on account of the rain which fell the previous night having made the roads very dirty. The following morning Sir William Mansfield arrived in the station, and was received and escorted in by a squadron of the Sind Horse. H.E. went to Colonel Green's residence, where he was a guest during his stay here. On Monday, the 6th, the Sind Horse were paraded before him, and the following day there was a grand review of the entire field force in cantonments. The Commander-in-Chief was highly pleased with their soldier-like appearance, the perfection of their equipment, and the rapidity and precision of their movements, and expressed his satisfaction accordingly. Wednesday evening he attended the ball-practice of the Rifles, which also satisfied him very much. Sir William took his departure from among us at noon yesterday, on a visit to the new frontier outposts, the 3rd Regiment Sind Horse preceding him at 3 A.M. The Political Superintendent and Major Malcolm Green accompany His Excellency. They go through Kusmore, and then to Mitree, where His Excellency will take the steamer for Mooltan.—Sindian.

PUBLIC CONVEYANCES.—Bad as Calcutta is, Bombay is still more scandalously deficient in proper and cheap public conveyances. The enterprising American firm, Messrs. Stearns and Hobart, who have run a steamer from Bombay to Suez to compete with the P. and O. Company, have resolved to introduce street tramways for horse carriages. The Municipal Commissioners have agreed to allow them to lay down the first line of rails from the ordinary landing place at Apollo Pier to Byculla, four miles off, where the clubs and hotels are. In October next they hope to run, every five minutes, carriages now being built in America at one anna for an outside and four annas for an inside passenger. Prices are now so high in Bombay above the tariff rates, that the hack carriages refuse to be hired unless at so exorbitant a rate as six rupees a day.

MR. CHISHOLM ANSTEY revels in "scenes," and few days would seem to pass in which the tedium of the Bombay High Court is not relieved by one. Mr. Justice Arnould lately called on a case in which the G. I. P. Railway Company were the defendants. Mr. Crawford, their attorney, stated he had been unable to engage counsel, which the plaintiff's attorney had also failed to do, and asked to be heard because the bar refuse to take any briefs, unless when two or more counsel are employed. Mr. Anstey replied,—"I say it with all respect, but the only persons to blame are the Judges of this Court. Your lordships, against the wishes of the bar, have thought fit to require our appearance daily at three divisions of this court, sitting simultaneously in exercise of one and the same original jurisdiction. Unless there are more than one counsel on either side in each case it must be impossible for us to obey that requisition." On this the Judge said:—"Let us not indulge in the luxury of personal feeling, but let us look into the law of the case." But he was finally forced to decide that, till the attorneys made a formal application to the Court through counsel, they could only "appear and act" but not "plead."

HIS HIGHNESS THE GUICOWAR, though already possessing several wives, was married at Baroda on Monday, the 6th March, to another. It was but the other day that a star-crossed daughter of one of the Deccan Sirdars travelled all the way from Poona to Baroda for the purpose of being married to his Highness, and was received with pomp and ceremony at the latter place. The day for the nuptials was appointed; costly preparations were made to give eclat to the occasion; but at the very last hour, acting under the advice of one of the Court astrologers, his Highness expressed his determination not to marry the lady, because it was prognosticated that the union would be an unlucky one.

DEATH OF THE REV. MR. CHAPIN.—The Bombay Guardian announces with great regret the death of the Rev. Mr. Chapin, at Ahmednuggur, of diphtheria. Mr. Chapin was the youngest member of the American Mission in this Presidency, having arrived in May last. He had made extraordinary progress in the acquisition of the language, and gave the highest promise of usefulness.

THE HON. RUSTOMJEE JAMSETJEE JEJEEBHROY, with his characteristic generosity, has resolved to distribute the aggregate amount of the premiums on one hundred shares of the United Victoria and Colaba Reclamation Company (about four lacs of rupees), which have been allotted to him, for the relief and assistance of poor Zoroastrians in Bombay and other places.

THE BOMBAY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, in a full meeting, has passed a series of resolutions repudiating certain imputations cast upon the character of the merchants here by the agent for Lloyds. In a letter to the committee of underwriters in London, the agent had asserted that it was a frequent practice, amongst the surveyors of piece-goods at Bombay, to report as "sea-damaged" goods only injured by mildew, the owners thereupon claiming the amount of loss from Lloyds.

SHIPWRECKS.—The ship Glensamox, 1,004 tons, from Liverpool to Bombay, coal laden, ran ashore on the S.W. Prong, Bombay harbour, on the night of the 12th March, and is expected to become a total wreck. The ship Lord Brougham, 1,078 tons, Coleman, master, was wrecked off the Laccadive Islands, on the night of the 7th, owing to disarrangement of her chronometers.

PARSEE ENLIGHTENMENT.—By the last overland mail steamer Mr. Dalabhoj D. Camajee proceeded to England with his wife. This is the third instance of a Parsee gentleman going to England with his family. The first instance was that of Dr. Burjorjee Dorabjee, who has made a permanent residence in London with his family for the past few years; and the second was that of Mr. Manockjee Cursetjee, Judge of the Small Causes Court. We hear that two more Parsee families will leave for London in a short time.

TAMPERING WITH THE TELEGRAPH.—Four Hindoo merchants, indicted at the Bombay Criminal Sessions on a charge of bribing some young telegraph clerks to purloin messages for them, have been found guilty and each sentenced to six months' imprisonment, and to be fined five thousand rupees.

A FRACAS.—At a display of fireworks in Bombay a few evenings ago a fracas unfortunately took place between the Chief Commissioner of Police and some native gentlemen. A misunderstanding had arisen about some seats, and in the darkness, failing to recognise each other, high words ensued, and one native gentleman highly connected was arrested by the police, but subsequently released. The aggrieved gentlemen have entered an action against Mr. Souter, Commissioner of Police, for unwarrantable arrest.

THE LIBERALITY OF THE JAMSETJEE FAMILY seems to flow with a deep and continuous current. The School of Arts founded by the late Baronet, and which it is expected will soon be developed in a very efficient practical form, has just received the following additional endowments:—From the Dowager Lady Jamsetjee, Rs. 150,000; from her daughter, Rs. 15,000; and from the Hon. Mr. Rustumjee, Rs. 55,000,—in all two lakhs and twenty thousand rupees.

THE MUNICIPAL BILL.—Since the last mail the new Municipal Bill for the Island of Bombay has been finally passed. General satisfaction is expressed as to its provisions, but it is doubted whether the Chief Commissioner to be appointed under the Bill will have available the magisterial power requisite to give proper effect to his decisions.

NORMAN W. OLIVER, Esq., Chief Magistrate of Police at Bombay, died on the 25th February. He had intended to leave for Europe by this mail, having been seriously ill for several weeks. His funeral was attended by his Excellency the Governor, and several officers and gentlemen.

PLETHORA OF TELEGRAMS.—The necessity of another telegraphic line between Bombay and Kurrachee, in order that the Indo-European line may be made more available, is daily becoming more apparent. One day recently so many European messages were awaiting transmission that Colonel Douglas refused to receive any more telegrams of any description.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY has established a Branch Bank at Ajmere, under the management of Mr. Alexander Don.

DISBANDMENT OF THE SOUTHERN MAHRATTA HORSE.

No. 173.—Under instructions by the Govt. of India, the regt. of Southern Mahratta Horse will be disbanded from April 30.

The regt. was raised by Maj. J. Ramsay in 1850 from the cavalry in the service of the Sattara and Kolapoor States, and of the Jagheerdars of the Southern Mahratta country. Some of the men had previously done good service to the British Govt. at the capture of Badamee, and in the campaign in the Southern Mahratta country of 1844, including the capture of the Hill Fortress of Punalla.

The regt. has always proved itself a body of faithful and gallant soldiers, they volunteered for service in Persia in 1856, and one troop landed and did duty at Bushire. Themselves inhabitants of the Southern Mahratta country, and surrounded by disaffection, the zeal and alacrity of officers and men in 1857-58, under the command of Colonel G. Malcolm, C.B., largely assisted in maintaining the British authority in the Sattara and Southern Mahratta districts. The rapid march of the detachment under Lieut. Kerr to Kolapoor, in September, 1857; their gallant conduct at the Pagah against the mutineers; the subsequent conduct of the detachment at Kolapoor under Russuldar Bahadur Sheikh Rahimon; their behaviour at Beejapoor, and at Hulgullee, at which place they drove the enemy into the village, and then on foot joined a detachment of native infantry in storming it; their share in the forced march to Sholapoor, and the capture of that fort, and again in the occupation of Nurgood, for which the regiment, and especially Russuldar Major Sew Pursad Sing received the high approbation of Government, and Duffedar Sheikh Ahmed received the Order of Merit for scaling the wall and opening the gate; their service in Central India against Tantia Topee, and their gallantry in action at Chota Oodeypoor, are some of the most notable services of the regt. at that critical time.

H.E. the Gov. in Council particularly acknowledges the valuable services of Russuldar Major Sew Pursad Sing, and of Russuldar Sirdar Khan, and of the other native commissioned officers.

The arrangements for disbandment follow:—

The European officers will receive their present staff allowances as a minimum rate of staff pay for 6 mo. from May 1 next.

No. 174.—The Govt. of India has sanctioned, subject to confirmation by H.M.'s Govt., a separately organised escort for the Gov. of Bombay, to be formed by selection from the Southern Mahratta horse on the disbandment of that regt.

The corps will be styled the "Governor's Body Guard," and the number of men and rates of pay will be as follows:—

	Pay Monthly.
	Rs.
1 European officer	200
1 Russuldar	107
1 Rassaidar	60
1 Jemadar	47
1 Kote Duffedar... ..	88
5 Duffedars	34
1 Trumpeter	40
1 Farrier... ..	30
60 Sowars... ..	15
1 Puckal Bheesty	9
1 Hand Bheesty

Each native commissioned, non-commissioned officer, and soldier will receive Rs. 10 monthly in addition whilst serving in the body guard.

The usual contingent allowance will be given for repair of arms.

The officer comdg. the Southern Mahratta Horse, under the direction of the maj. gen. comdg. the forces, will select for the Gov.'s body guard, commissioned, non-commissioned officers, and sowars of proved good character, and fit in every respect for the duty by their intelligence and personal appearance.

The whole of the men will be one horse silladars, providing their own horses, arms, accoutrements, and clothing. They are expected to be mounted on horses of a superior kind, both as respects appearance and power.

The body guard will in the first instance be provided with a complete set of arms and accoutrements, and clothing of such pattern as may be approved by H.E. the Gov.

The body guard will be under the same conditions of service as the men of silladar cav. regts., being subject to the Articles of War, and enjoying all privileges as regards pension, compensation for the dearthness of provisions, &c.

The officer to command the escort will be selected by H.E. the Gov.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDER.

Bombay Castle, March 15.—H.E. Lieut. Gen. Sir William Mansfield resigned the command of the Bombay army on the 14th inst.

The services of Sir William Mansfield, previous to his taking command of the Bombay army, are so recent and so well known, that it is unnecessary to recapitulate them. They have been so frequently honoured with the notice and approval of the Viceroy of India, of the Parliament of England, and of her Majesty the Queen, that any comment on their eminent character would be superfluous.

But the Governor of Bombay in Council in notifying H.E.'s resignation of his present office, tenders to him the acknowledgments of Government for his unremitting and successful exertions whilst in command of the Bombay army to improve its efficiency.

Sir William Mansfield has exercised a vigilant and acting control over all that relates to the personnel, to the materiel, to the permanent quarters, and to the discipline of every arm of the service; to the health, comfort, and well being, moral as well as physical, of the soldier, to the efficiency of the fortifications and communications of the army, and has given to the Governor in Council the aid of a sound and experienced judgment in a series of measures, the result of which will constitute the best and most permanent record of his administration.

SIR W. MANSFIELD'S FAREWELL ORDER.

GENERAL ORDER. BY H. E. THE C.-IN-C.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Poona, March 14, 1865.—When Sir William Mansfield assumed the command of the Bombay army, he was aware that great and radical changes were impending over it as consequences of the termination of a state of war, and of the transfer of the Government of India from the late Hon. East India Company to the Crown, under Act of Parliament.

H.E. then expressed a confident hope that the discipline of the army would not suffer under his command. Sir William Mansfield, now that his command of the Bombay army has closed, has the warmest satisfaction in recording his belief that that hope has been amply justified.

It may be well to cast a glance at the changes which have been effected.

Firstly, there was the reduction of the army from a war footing to a peace establishment, which may be stated in numbers as a reduction in all the arms from 70,000 to 40,000 men.

Secondly, there was the measure of the amalgamation, which, while extending by Official Gazette the privileges attendant on military rank on account of the Indian officers to all the world, instead of being restricted as they had been heretofore to India, included the formation of the Staff Corps, the abolition of the local character of the British portion of the forces of the late Hon. East India Company, and the early retirement of many field officers and others owing to the grant of liberal pensions.

Thirdly, there was the measure of the re-organisation of the army, by which the regimental position of the officers, British and native, has been raised, a more direct responsibility thrown on both classes, while the roll of a regiment now presents the name of officers actually serving with it, instead of a long list of gentlemen of whom but a portion was interested in the corps, or ever present in its ranks.

Such are the extraordinary changes of the last five years, according to which the entire body of the Bombay Army has not only been re-modelled in form, but has been re-organised according to ideas absolutely different from those under which it was originally constituted.

To carry through such difficult duties in a satisfactory manner as those alluded to would have been impossible without the most cordial and intimate co-operation of the Head Quarter Staff, during the term of H.E.'s command. It is evident that that staff has had to perform duties unexampled in the history of the Bombay army.

Sir William Mansfield begs to return his most sincere thanks to Lieut.-Colonel Stock, the Adjutant General, who has been his most confidential adviser throughout for the last five years; to Lieut.-Colonel Phayre, the Quarter Master General, to Colonel Skinner, the Judge Advocate General (now on leave of absence), to Lieut.-Colonel Field, the Acting Judge Advocate General, to Colonel the Hon. F. Thesiger, 95th Foot, who acted as Deputy Adjutant General British Troops prior to the amalgamation of the staff offices, to Lieut.-Colonel Kirby, Deputy Adjutant General, and to Major Flood, Military Secretary.

H.E. would further tender his best thanks and acknowledgments to the major gens. comdg. divs., Major gen. C. Van Straubenzee, K.C.B., N.D.A.; Major gen. Green, C.B., N.D.A.; Major gen. Honner, C.B., S.D.A.; and Maj. gen. M. W. Smith, C.B., P.D.A. To Brig. gen. Lucas, late comdnt. and now insp. of royal art., to the brigadiers gen. comdg. brigades, and to the several officers comdg. brigades of art. and regts. of cav. and inf., for the zeal and discretion with which they have performed their respective duties, and their share in affording superintendence and execution to the reforms which have been adverted to.

H.E. would further beg the Principal Inspector-general, Dr. Stovell, and Deputy Inspector-general British Troops, Mr. Canning, to accept his warm acknowledgments for the excellent manner in which they have presided over their respective medical departments, and the energy with which they have directed the efforts of the medical officers under their orders for the improvement of the health of H.M.'s troops, and for the spread of sanitary reforms.

H.E. would request the Commissary-general, Lieut.-Colonel Dunsterville, and the Superintending Engineers of Circles, to accept his assurance that their zealous co-operation in the execution of the orders of Government for the provisioning and lodging of the troops has, in like manner, been of the greatest advantage to the public service.

In conclusion, H.E. would express his high opinion of the state of the several regiments, British and Native, serving in the Bombay Presidency, and of their very good conduct, which has rendered his command so pleasant to him.

Subject to the confirmation of Government, all reports from this date will be made for the information of Major-general Sir Charles Van Straubenzee, K.C.B. By order, H. Stock, Lieut.-col., Adjutant-general.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE MYSORE RAJ.

As the case of the venerable Rajah of Mysore is likely to be brought before Parliament in the course of the present Session, it may be worth while to give a brief outline of the dealings of the British Government with this native State. Maha Rajah Mysore Kistna Rajah Oodiaver Bahauder is the lineal descendant of the ancient princes of that country. Towards the middle of the last century, however, the power passed from the hands of the sovereign into those of his Prime Minister, an hereditary officer, who constituted himself a Mayor of the Palace. Some years later the regal functions were usurped by Hyder Ali, though the mockery of the royal title was still bestowed upon the feeble representative of the ancient rulers of the land. At the death of Tippoo Sahib it was discovered that the throne was both nominally and virtually vacant, for the Rajah had died some months previously while the Sultan was too much occupied in preparing for his final struggle with the British to pay any attention to his royal puppets.

The territory that, by right of conquest, became the joint possession of the East India Company and their faithful ally the Nizam, in superficial area exceeded Ireland, and from its comparative elevation is one of the most delightful regions of India. Lord Wellesley's counsellors, including Sir Thomas Munro, were eager to divide this fine country between the conquerors, reservation being made of a small slice for the Peishwah as the reward of his neutrality during the war with Tippoo. The Governor-general, however, took a more provident view of the question. He saw that a mere extension of the frontier was by no means an advantage, and in the present instance the principal northern passes leading into Mysore would be placed in the custody of the Nizam. The British possessions would thus always have been open to attack, while the power of the Nizam would have been dangerously augmented. At the same time he recognised the in-pediency of placing upon the throne any member of the usurping family, the inveterate enemies of the English, and, consequently, inclined towards a close alliance with the French, at that time dreaded all over the world. Luckily a third course suggested itself, and was at once adopted by the Governor-general. Without any unnecessary delay the representative of the ancient Hindoo rulers was raised out of the abject poverty into which the Royal race had sunk, and was declared the Sovereign of Mysore. The ceremony of installation was performed with much pomp and circumstance. The infant prince, for he was no more than five years old, was received at the entrance of the building temporarily erected for the purpose by the British Commander-in-Chief and the chief officer of the Nizam's forces; and taking him, one by the right hand, the other by the left, General Harris and Meer Allum conducted him to the ivory throne of his ancestors, on which he seated himself under a Royal salute from the artillery and three salvoes of musketry from the infantry.

The new kingdom thus happily inaugurated was somewhat less extensive than the one that had formerly existed under the sway of the Rajah's forefathers. Equal portions had been abstracted for the benefit of the Company and their ally, while a third tract had been set aside for the Peishwah, of which two-thirds were subsequently yielded to the Nizam. Two Treaties were drawn up on the occasion, the one ancillary to the other. The Partition Treaty defined the limits of the new kingdom of Mysore, and of the respective acquisitions of the East India Company, and their ally; while the Subsidiary Treaty regulated the future relations that were to subsist between the Rajah and the British Government. His Highness engaged to receive a military force from the Company for the protection of his dominions, for the maintenance of which he undertook to pay the annual sum of £245,000. On the other hand he was to keep on foot at his own charge an effective body of 4,000 horse to serve wherever the British Government might think proper to send them. He further pledged himself not to hold any communication whatever with any foreign State, or to suffer any European to enter his service, or even his territory, without the Company's consent. And if at any time there was a failure in the funds destined to pay the subsidy, or if the British Government had reasonable grounds for apprehending such failure, power was given to the Governor-general in Council "either to introduce such regulations and ordinances as he shall deem expedient for the internal management and collection of the revenues, or for the better ordering of any other branch and department of the Government of Mysore, or to assume and bring under the direct management of the servants of the said Company Behauder, such part or parts of the territorial possessions of his Highness Maha Rajah Mysore Kistna Rajah Oodiaver Behauder as shall appear to him, the said Governor-general in Council, necessary to render the said funds efficient and available either in time of peace or war." It was further agreed that "whenever and so long as any part or parts of his said Highness's territories shall be placed, and shall remain under the exclusive authority and control of the said East India Company, the Governor-general in Council shall render to his Highness a true and faithful account of the revenues and produce of the territories so assumed." It was likewise stipulated that in no case whatever should "his Highness's actual receipts or annual income arising out of his territorial revenue be less than the sum of one lac of star pagodas, together with one-fifth of the net revenues of the whole of the territories ceded to him." Finally, his Highness promised to "pay at all times the utmost attention to such advice as the Company's Government shall occasionally judge it necessary to offer to him, with a view to the economy of his finances, the better collection of his revenues, the administration of justice, the extension of commerce, the encouragement of trade, agriculture, and industry, or any other objects connected with the advancement of his Highness's interests, the happiness of his people, and the mutual welfare of both States." This treaty, as stated in the preamble, was to be binding upon the contracting parties "as long as the sun and moon shall endure."

As the tender years of the Rajah incapacitated him from taking any part in public affairs, the actual administration was entrusted to a Brahmin, named Poorniah, who had been Finance Minister to the late Sultan, and was an adept in the collection of revenue. If a full treasury is an index of prosperity, Mysore, under his rule, ought to have been singularly prosperous; but Poorniah appears to have thought much more of accumulating money than of "developing the resources of the country." He was also fortunate in having large stores of sandalwood to dispose of; and thus, on his forced resignation in 1811, upwards of two millions sterling in hard cash were found in the royal coffers. The young prince, though only sixteen years of age, took the reins of government into his own hands, and, his education having been altogether neglected, things very soon went utterly to the bad. For twenty years a reckless and improvident system was carried on, without thought for either the prince or the people; but all this time the Madras

Government looked on supinely, only occasionally offering a feeble remonstrance. In 1830, however, a rebellion broke out in the north-western districts of Mysore, for the suppression of which the aid of the British troops was applied for and granted, according to the treaty. But this insurrection was converted into a justification of the assumption of the entire management of the country, although, so far from there being any apprehension of a failure in the funds destined for the pay of the troops, the subsidy was actually in advance. Lord William Bentinck, in after times, deeply regretted the hastiness with which he had acted with regard to Mysore, and more than once said that it was the only act of his Indian administration that he looked back upon with regret. Sir Charles Metcalfe also qualified the supersession of the Rajah as a "harsh and unprovoked" measure, and both he and Lord William were in favour of reinstating his Highness, care being taken that the country did not again fall into the hands of unprincipled administrators. The Court of Directors, however, were averse to any sudden cancellation of the sequestration of the country, although they expressed their desire that respect should be paid to native usages, and that no system should be introduced which could not be worked afterwards when the country was restored to the Rajah. That despatch was written in the autumn of 1835, and the country has not yet been restored, in spite of the urgent petitions of the Rajah to each successive Governor-general. The Home Government indeed—using Sir William Denison as their mouth-piece—affected to be puzzled as to the possibility of even placing his Highness in his former position, because no provision was made in the Treaty for such a contingency. And yet the Treaty clearly enough indicates that only a temporary occupation was ever contemplated, for it provides that so long as any part or parts of the Mysore kingdom shall remain under the control of the Company's government, the Governor-general shall render to his Highness a true and faithful account of the revenue collected in his territories. Lord Auckland was more reasonable, though particularly careful not to commit himself to any precise date for the restoration of the country to its rightful Prince. The administration, he wrote, was to remain on the existing footing until the arrangements for the good government of his Highness's territories should "have been so firmly established as to be secure from future disturbance." Twenty-nine years have elapsed since that intimation was given, but apparently the arrangements are not yet satisfactorily established.

And now it is pretended that the Rajah is excluded from the right of adoption accorded to all the other Princes and chiefs of India ranking above a Jagheerदार, because his territories were not personally governed by him at the time of the proclamation of the Adoption Despatch. But if the treaty did not contemplate the reinstatement of the Rajah, if once superseded, nor the Adoption Despatch confer upon him the right to name an heir, how came it that Lord Canning was so anxious that his Highness should "bequeath his kingdom to the British Government?" If he had power to will away his territories, surely he had power to adopt an heir. The noble earl, however, attached great importance to the bequest of the country "in full sovereignty to the Crown, by the free will of the ruler, and in a spirit of loyal attachment to the British power." In truth, the Rajah has never been backward in testifying his "loyal attachment," and even Lord Canning sent him his "warm thanks" for the good services rendered by him during the critical period of the Indian mutiny. The only valid objection to the reinstatement of the Rajah lies in the fertility of his kingdom, and its general desirableness as a British possession. The spirit of annexation still sits in the Council Chamber, and perverts the judgment of otherwise upright and incorruptible statesmen. But there is one point which seems to have been overlooked by each successive Viceroy. If the native kingdom of Mysore, constituted in 1799 out of the joint spoils of the East India Company and the Nizam is to cease and determine on the death of his Highness, it is not the British Government alone that will come into the inheritance. The Nizam will certainly be entitled to reclaim his moiety, and if that claim be not allowed, her Majesty's Government will simply be guilty of a gross act of robbery and spoliation. But it cannot be that the British Parliament will carry its culpable indifference on the subject of Indian questions to such an extreme as to silently acquiesce in the absorption of this native kingdom. It would be an act that would shake all faith in the sincerity of the Queen's Proclamation, and would go far to undo all that has been done and won by the liberal policy inaugurated on the final suppression of the mutiny. And Parliament must do something more than record its votes. It must see that its decrees are carried into execution. It is useless to order the restoration of Mysore unless that order be executed. The principality of Dhar is still kept back from its lawful ruler, and so will it be with this fine table-land unless very peremptory injunctions are issued for its immediate restoration to its venerable Rajah.*

BOOKS.

Studies in Biography. By L. J. Trotter, late Captain 20th Bengal Fusiliers. Moxon and Co.

This clever and thoughtful volume of essays is the best practical refutation of Mr. Trevelyan's caricature of the British officer in India. It is abundantly manifest that Captain Trotter must have employed his leisure hours on something more useful and intellectual than Bell's Life, cigars, and brandy-panee. Even if his table were "rickety," his chairs "invalided," and his "couch with broken springs," it is clear as the sun at noonday that his shelves must have exhibited other works than Aids to Faith, or the "third volume of the History of the Inductive Sciences," though it is likely enough that he was familiarly conversant with both. Without affecting to throw any new light on the history and character of the great men whose lives he has made his study, Captain Trotter places clearly and forcibly before his readers the salient points in each, and has evidently spared no pains to arrive at a sound and impartial judgment. And he is one of the few who have learned to think for themselves. He does not blindly follow in the footsteps of any leader, but searches out a path for himself with patient diligence and a resolute oneness of purpose. His aim is the Truth, but the truth tempered by charity. In his eyes Mahomet is rather a mystic than an impostor—self-deceived rather than a wilful deceiver. If indignant with the arrogance of Becket, he can still make ample allowances for the exaggerations of party spirit and theological rancour, and honestly recognises the obligations our England of the present day is under to her Norman kings and barons. Yet more fiercely does his anger burn against the insatiable greed and overweening pride of the mediæval Popes, while his generous sympathies are as naturally enlisted on the side of the heroic but ill-fated grandson of Frederic Barbarossa, the greatest of the Hohenstaufens. Nor does the fervid zeal of Savonarola—priest, patriot, martyr—fail to make a deep impression on Captain Trotter's feelings and imagination. His language, always choice, scholarly, and appropriate, rises at times to real eloquence as he echoes the burning words of the Dominican. Reverencing the genius of Bacon, he nevertheless refuses to be dazzled by the illusive halo with which Mr. Hepworth Dixon has sought to encircle the brows of a fallen idol. The pure patriotism of William Pitt, and the wonderful influence he exercised over the British Parliament in the interests of his country, form the subject of another careful and instructive essay, and the pleasant octavo of memoirs closes with a light and graceful sketch of the brilliant wit, dramatist, and politician, Richard Brinsley Sheridan. It will be seen that there is no lack of variety in this handsomely got-up volume, and the manner is throughout worthy of the matter. In short, the eulogy passed by Captain Trotter upon Mr. William Muir may without flattery be applied to himself—"This author has lent new lustre to the name of a service fruitful in men of high attainments."

DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR APPOINTMENTS.
—Foreign-office, March 28.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Sir R. Alcock, K.C.B., now H.M.'s Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary and Consul-general in Japan, to be H.M.'s Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, and also Chief Superintendent of British Trade in China. The Queen has also been graciously pleased to appoint Sir H. S. Parkes, K.C.B., now H.M.'s Consul at Shanghai, to be H.M.'s Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary and Consul-general in Japan. The Queen has also been graciously pleased to appoint C. A. Winchester, Esq., now H.M.'s Consul at Kanagawa, to be H.M.'s Consul at Shanghai.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for £300,000 in bills on India took place on the 19th inst., at the Bank of England, but the amounts taken were only £27,000 on Calcutta and £3,500 on Madras. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 11d. on Calcutta and Madras, and 1s. 11½d. on Bombay. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at the minimum will receive in full. On Bombay all the tenders were below the minimum. These terms show another reduction of more than 1 per cent., and indicate a rapid subsidence of the demand for means of remittance to India in return for produce.

FAILURE OF MESSRS. BUCHANAN AND CO.—The failure was announced on the 20th inst., of a firm of old and high standing at Glasgow—Messrs. Buchanan, Hamilton, and Co., in the East India and China trade. Their direct liabilities are stated at £750,000, and their assets at £630,000; but as the latter in a great measure consist of distant consignments to be realised, it may be feared that some considerable reduction must be submitted to. The Eastern connections of the house are Messrs. Hamilton, Gray, and Co., at Singapore, and Messrs. Jarvie, Thorburn, and Co., at Shanghai, and the principal losses have been in rice and tea. The senior partner, Mr. Walter Buchanan, has for the past eight years represented Glasgow, his native city, in Parliament, and there has rarely been an instance of mercantile disaster which has been regarded with more regret.

COOLIES.—In the year 1864 467 immigrants into British Guiana returned to their own country, and took with them, or had remitted home for them through Government agency, £13,939. This includes £1,000, the estimated value of the jewels on their persons, and a draft for £494, which one coolie took with him. From British Guiana alone the amount thus taken home by 5,879 returning coolies in the last twenty-two years has exceeded £88,000. The total number of immigrants and liberated Africans arriving in the West India colonies in the twenty-two years has been 173,666, and in Mauritius 313,538. The return of 78,878 from Mauritius is recorded, and of 10,403 from British Guiana, Trinidad, and Jamaica.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST-INDIA STOCK.

SIR,—As a Proprietor of East-India Stock, you were presented, we believe, by the East-India Company with a copy of Mr. EDWARD THORNTON'S "HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA," the sixth volume of which, bringing down the history to 1844, was issued in the year 1846.

Indian history since the recall of Lord Ellenborough has been so fruitful of great events and striking episodes, that we cannot but think the time has fully come for adding another volume to Mr. Thornton's unfinished work. The two campaigns on the Sutlej, followed by the conquest of the Punjab, the second Burmese war, crowned by the annexation of Pegu, the splendid reign of Lord Dalhousie, illustrated by the establishment of railways, the swift growth of the electric telegraph, the gradual settlement of the Punjab, all these things, followed as they were by the annexation of Oude, and the mighty explosion of 1857, which annihilated the old Sepoy army of Bengal, nearly shattered to pieces the power founded by Clive and Hastings, and brought about the political death of the great East-India Company, seem to furnish abundant matter for at least one interesting volume, written with due conciseness and a careful regard for truth.

The history of a time so fraught with stirring incidents and momentous issues can hardly fail, with fair handling, to interest Englishmen of very diverse tastes. We have therefore arranged with a gentleman of some literary culture, Captain L. J. TROTTER, late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers, for the production of a volume which shall bring the history of British India down to its natural halting-place—the death of Lord Canning.

We annex herewith a Prospectus of the volume; and, as only a limited edition will be printed, we shall be obliged by an early intimation of your wish, if any such you should have, to complete your copy of "Thornton's History."

We have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servants,

WM. H. ALLEN AND CO.,

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and, combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Seidlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Seidlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travel by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for it taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.; 270, Regent-street London, W.

MRS. JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, FOR CHILDREN CUTTING THEIR TEETH.

This infallible remedy has preserved hundreds of children when the night past recovery from convulsions arising from painful dentition. As soon as the Syrup is rubbed on the gums the child will be relieved, the gums cooled, and the inflammation reduced. It is as innocent as efficacious, tending to produce the teeth with ease, and so pleasant, that no child will refuse to let its gums be rubbed with it. When infants are at the age of four months, the Syrup should be rubbed on the gums, and parents should never be without the Syrup in the nursery where there are young children; for, if a child wakes in the night with pains in the gums, the Syrup immediately gives ease, thereby preventing convulsions, fevers, &c. The great success of this medicine during the last twenty-five years has induced unprincipled persons to imitate it, under the name of American Soothing Syrup, and copying parts of Mrs. Johnson's Bill, &c. Parents will, therefore, be very particular to ask for JOHNSON'S AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP, and to notice that the names of BARCLAY and SONS, 95, Farringdon-street, London (to whom Mrs. Johnson has sold the recipe), are on the stamp affixed to each bottle.

Sold by all chemists and medicine vendors.

Earl Russell sent to the College of Physicians a communication received by him from Manila (where Cholera had been raging fearfully), to the effect, that, of all remedies tried, Chlorodyne was the most effective.—See Brit. Med. J., Dec. 31, 1864.

CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S). Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cramp, Ague, Consumption, Asthma, Cough, Colds, Bronchitis, Sea Sickness, &c., immediately relieved by a dose of TOWLE'S CHLORODYNE, which is admitted to be a most wonderful and valuable medicine, and preferred by the profession for its known composition and moderate price.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.

Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.
Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay, and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marseilles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

(Signed) GEORGE ALLEN, Chief Officer.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. A French line of mail packets now leaves Marseilles on the 19th of every month for Alexandria. Postage for letters and papers to India and China the same as is charged by the English mail via Marseilles. Letters intended to be forwarded by these packets must be specially addressed "By French mail packet from Marseilles."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE have received our usual Calcutta papers up to the 22nd of March, while our news from Madras comes down to the 28th of that month.

Considerable uneasiness appears to pervade the mercantile communities in all three Presidencies, and from Madras we learn the failure of the highly respectable firm of Messrs. Line and Co. The recent intelligence from America is likely to cause a still further depression in the price of both exports and imports, though some time must elapse before any very considerable supplies of really good cotton can be regularly obtained from the United States.

Among the passengers to Madras per steamer Mooltan we observe the name of Sir Hugh Rose, who is now at last on his way to Europe, whither he has been banished by the Indian press about once a quarter for the last three years. A careful review of his Excellency's career will probably appear in our next issue.

The old rumour is revived as to the intention of the Indian Government to establish an official journal, to be called the Calcutta Times. Mr. Talboys Wheeler is spoken of as the editor, and a better man for the post could not be found anywhere. It is said that he will be assisted by civilian and military collaborators, and there can be no question as to the abundance of literary talent available for such a purpose in both branches of the Indian service. We sincerely hope that this rumour may be well founded, for the desirableness of a direct means of communication between a despotic Government and its subjects has long been manifest.

The opening of the Lahore and Mooltan Railway, which was announced to take place on the 20th March, has been postponed to the 10th of the present month—the local management being properly averse to making a false start.

The Duke of Brabant, whose tour through Upper India caused so much excitement among all classes of society illuminated by the presence of his Royal Highness, has reached Hong Kong in good health and spirits. The Prince is the honoured guest of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co., as the Government House was not in a fit state to receive the heir apparent to a European throne,—Sir Hercules Robinson being on the point of starting for Ceylon, where he arrived on the 30th March.

OUTWARD CALCUTTA AND CHINA MAILS.

GIBRALTAR, April 25.

The Pera, from Southampton on the 20th inst., reached Gibraltar this day at one A.M., and left at nine A.M. for Alexandria.

PEOPLE'S PARK.—The subjoined statement will give our readers an idea of the popularity the People's Park enjoys. The zoological branch is continually receiving accessions to its already interesting collection, and the whole arrangements of the park are now gradually developing into completion, that day after day an amazingly large number of visitors resort to it. It was thought that a bona fide estimate of the number of visitors to the park might interest the public, and on Sunday last peons were stationed at each of the four entrance gates, and enjoined to reckon the exact number of persons entering the park. The following is the result:—

Salt Cotaur Gate..	2,948
General Hospital Gate ..	6,000
Vepery Gate...	5,265
Bear Cage Small Gate...	2,543

Total number of visitors on Sunday from 10 A.M. to 8 1/2 P.M. ... 16,756

BENGAL.

THE NATIVE CHIEFS AND THE SUPREME GOVERNMENT.

The Meywar chiefs seem to be growing every day more insolent and insubordinate in their communications and connection with the European officials. We have already reported several instances in which the chiefs of Central India have not appeared in a very loyal or advantageous aspect. Ever since Lord Elgin's action in the Oodypore affair drew attention to the doings of the men, who under the present arrangements are no better than an incubus on the energies and prosperity of a glorious country, the chiefs have been constantly before the public in a more or less unfavourable light. The attack on Colonel Eden's house indicated the passive dislike of the chiefs as much as the more active disaffection of their tenantry. It would seem to have marked a point of departure in a career of insubordination which should be promptly and sternly checked. If we cannot allow European officials to be treated with disrespect or insult in Bhootan, a foreign and independent state, still less can we permit subjects of the Queen, no matter how high their rank, to forget what is due to those who may have the honour of representing her. Very recently the Major-General commanding the Mhow division, whilst passing through Meywar, was waited upon, as usual, by the officers of the chief. Their behaviour was, however, far from respectful. Taking advantage of some question of the supply of necessities, they offered the General what can only be considered an insult of a very grave character. We believe the matter either has been, or will be, reported to the Supreme Government. We hope it will be taken notice of in a way to prevent such scandals for the future. The followers of the native chiefs must be taught a lesson which shall have a good effect in every Court in India. Whilst on this subject we may mention that we have heard of a case very similar to that of the Meer of Kotah. The Jagheerdars of Gurgaon in the Punjab, impressed, as they said, with an idea of the certainty of the advent of Imam Mehndee, thought it best to take the precautionary measures in time, and so built a tower which might answer as many useful purposes as the Peel of the Anglo-Scottish borders. The authorities, however, took, as usual, a different view, the builders were arrested, and their handiwork levelled with the ground. It was discovered that the work was a defensive one; and as there is nothing, or was nothing in the law to prevent the erection of defensive works, the Government were under the necessity of allowing the excuse, and the Jagheerdars escaped. A native clings to the idea of a fort: it is to him an asylum and the foundation of his greatness at the same time. In Indian history it is curious to see how quickly every man who determined to throw for power sought out a site, and built him a fort. The possession of a fort at once advanced him to the dignity of a territorial lord, and not unfrequently elevated him to the prouder rank of a native prince. In Oudh the possession of such retreats by the Talookdars would in a few years, and supposing the English had not intervened, have converted them from mere wealthy land-owners into independent chiefs and princes. A man, we will say, like Maun Singh would soon have achieved independence of the sway of a Wajid Ally, and would have transmitted to his son an acknowledged claim to be considered in some way entitled to the exercise of sovereign rights. The destruction of the forts has done more to pacify Oudh than the presence of an army would have done, and this brings us to the consideration of the question whether the dismantling of the forts, which ought to be a natural consequence of our policy, would not be the most effectual way of teaching the rajahs and chiefs of Central

India the reality of their dependence on the Crown of England and India. With forts at their disposal, and with a warlike and soldierly race at their back, they are always in a position to give us trouble, even whilst to do so would be fatal to themselves, and not very dangerous to the Power they would rashly brave. A fort is a visible sign of sovereign rights which might have been tolerated by a weak Power like that of the Kings of Delhi, but which is as incompatible with the present state of India as the existence of the Rhine castles in all their feudal power would be in the present state of Germany. Fortresses should be condemned throughout India, except at certain strategic points where they could be held by British garrisons. India now-a-days has nothing to fear from plundering Pindaries or reckless Rohillas. The Mahrattas no longer sweep from one side of the peninsula to the other, nor do native chiefs any longer summon their followers to minister to their ambition or their revenge. Walled towns and forts are needless, and are likely to serve only as rallying points for the disaffected. All Indian towns should be open towns, except such as Allahabad, Agra, and Delhi, and even these should be defended rather by forts distinct from the city than by long lines of fortifications converting the whole place into a fortress. There are not wanting signs to show that our policy towards Rajpootana and the native chiefs generally requires changing, and when this comes to be re-considered, we trust the question of allowing any subject of her Majesty to vaunt himself in the possession of an armed and defensible residence will not be overlooked.—Hurkaru.

A SPECIMEN OF NATIVE RULE.

Central India must be a very happy place, and a very desirable locality for the pitching of one's tent. It is not so much the exactions of the chiefs, or the rogueries of their kardars which make a residence there a penance of a somewhat severe description, as the absence of a strong central power in any one of the so-called states, able to restrain the passions and impulses of the mob. The vagaries of despotism are familiar to an Indian mind, and are matters of every-day experience to the fortunate dwellers beyond the pale of the British law. But in Central India despotism would seem to retain only its vacillation and wilfulness, whilst losing all its directness of action, and its concentrated strength. Bheels and dacoits infest the roads, as a matter of course, and as they can always shelter behind one chief from the wrath of another, it is practically no one's business to bring them to punishment, or to undeceive them as to their being able to rob and murder with impunity. Then, again, riches seem to be acquired only to rouse the cupidity of the Durbar, or the envy and hatred of all one's neighbours, and the Rajah or Nawab enjoys the exalted privilege of borrowing at pleasure from his people, taking their money and conferring an honour at the same time. A disturbance took place recently in Bhopal which will show the beautiful way in which, if occasion demand it, chiefs and kardars can work into each other's hands. The Hindoo inhabitants had constructed a temple, for the worship of Shiva; the work was carried on without interruption, and a considerable sum was expended upon it by reason of the confidence experienced by the Shivites of their being able to perform the ceremonies of their religion without molestation. When the temple was finished, and when the rites of Shiva had been duly complied with a few times, the Mahomedans discovered the clang of the gongs, and the wailing of the conches to be an insufferable noise, an affront to Islamism, and a contempt of the holy precepts of the Koran. They had doubly sinned, by allowing a heathen temple to be built, and by permitting it to be used when completed. The Hindoos offended the fine sense of his religious duties, which always distinguishes a follower of the prophet, and grievously assailed his ears at the same time. The worship of Shiva was bad enough when carried on under their very noses, but to this offence, sufficiently grave as it undoubtedly must have been, was added the irritating worry of a dreadful noise kept up with the most cheerful energy, and the most joyous perseverance. This combination horrified the Moslems, and placed their fault before their eyes in an aspect at once novel and convincing. By destroying the temple they would be serving God, and securing their own ease and peace at one and the same time. They, therefore, rushed full of contrition, and full of woe, to the native authorities, and preferred a complaint, which wound up with a petition for the removal of the temple. The representation was successful, and the order was issued by the native Government for its destruction on religious grounds. Such an order would anywhere in India be certain to lead to a riot, if not worse. The Moslems armed themselves for the work of destruction, the Hindoos armed themselves for the task of protection. The fracas would have assumed serious proportions, as throughout the Bhopal territory the people were at one wave of the sceptre converted into two camps, one determined upon doing honour to the true faith, the other resolved upon withstanding persecution. As usual, however, a British officer was quickly on the spot, and after great exertions and some difficulty the people were quieted, and the resident then had the unpleasant duty of representing the matter to the Begum Qaadnessa. In reply to the question why she had ordered the destruction of the temple, she remarked that irrespective of the question of religion it had been constructed without her consent. This was intended to close the discussion, but Englishmen consider the chief bound by the doings of his officers, and the Begum was therefore told, "it must have been erected by the permission of your kardars, and you are therefore not acting legally to order its destruction!" After some talk the lady was convinced, and the order recalled, when according to Eastern custom the disturbance was quashed as if by magic!—Hurkaru.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CONVERSION.—A Mahomedan of education and position has been converted in Nagpore. His name is Sufdar Ali, and it is doubly creditable to him that he became partly convinced by self-examination. At this stage he began as it were to struggle with himself to arrive at the truth,—as a drowning man struggles to the surface of the waters,—and finding himself beset with the difficulties of the narrow way he sent all the way to Benares for a Christian friend,—also a native by birth,—and, with his aid, arrived at the goal of his researches; and, in accordance with his own wishes, that he should be baptized by immersion on Christmas-day, he was baptized into the Christian faith by the Rev. E. Champion, the Church of England Missionary located at that station. Moulvee Sufdar Ali is the Deputy-inspector of Schools at Jubbulpore, and he has succeeded in converting a native schoolmaster to Christianity also. The Moulvee, who, a short time back, was highly respected by his brethren in consequence of his gentlemanly bearing and education, is now discarded by most, his own wife having deserted him.—Hurkaru.

THE REWAH STATE.—We learn from the Pioneer that Lulloo Singh, friend and protégé of the Rajah of Rewah, has just murdered the only son of the faithful Rajah Dyah, who did so much for breaking up the notorious gang of dacoits and mutineers which, under Ruttun Singh, the father of Lulloo, so long infested the borders of our territory.

COOLY IMMIGRATION.—The demand for emigrants for the colonies and the tea districts has clashed with the demand for labourers by the railways, and the public works in Bengal, and it would seem that the supply had been to a certain extent checked. Contractors have found the rates rising, men getting scarce, and their profits getting beautifully less, as it became slowly apparent that the tea districts had only entered upon their demands upon the labour markets of the outlying districts of the lower provinces. Some adventurous spirits resolved in this state of things to strike out a new line for themselves, and to go to the mountain, albeit that it was planted beyond the limits of districts benefited by the Immigration Act. A descent was made upon the neighbouring districts of the N.W.P., and men found in numbers who were willing to tempt fortune by a trip to Assam or Meritch. When, however, acting upon the dustoor in Bengal, the recruiter took his gang of labourers to the magistrate, he found to his disgust that official flatly refused to register the coolies, or to have anything whatever to do with the matter. The magistrate of Azimghur did not, of course, feel himself bound by the Acts of the Bengal Council, and he, in the absence of any immigration law for the North-West, was perfectly justified in the line he adopted. His decision, however, has given rise to the question whether recruiting operations under Act III. of 1863 can legally be carried on in districts out of Bengal. As far as the North-West is concerned, the law is altogether silent on the point, and in the absence of any specific provision on the subject, there is nothing to prevent the recruiting of labourers for Assam in the North-Western Provinces. When, however, the men have been gathered, and have reached a Bengal district on the way, they are met by Act III., which first of all requires the recruiter to produce his licence, and next compels him to enter into an engagement with his recruits in that district, and to register them there with all formality. Some contractors recruited emigrants for British Guiana in the Azimghur division, but found their proceedings checked by the refusal of the magistrate to register the coolies. The matter was referred to the Bengal Government, and Mr. Beadon observed that whilst, under Sec. 30 of the Act, registration is compulsory, and to refuse it is practically to suspend the Act, yet no registration by a magistrate of the North-Western Provinces would have any legal value in Bengal. Mr. Beadon considers that it is hardly worth while to legislate on the subject, as the difficulty may be got over by the Government N.W.P. permitting recruiters to collect labourers in the provinces under its control for Assam or the Colonies, with a view to their being registered in the nearest district of Bengal.—Hurkaru.

COL. WALKER, R.E., superintendent of the Great Trigonometrical Survey, has returned to England, authorised to commence pendulum experiments in connection with the astronomical and geological operations of the Great Indian Arc, for determining the absolute values of the three magnetic elements at the Indian stations. He was assisted with instructions by the Royal Society, and has deputed Captain Bas-vi, R.E., who took lessons at home, to open the work.

JUBBULPORE SCHOOL OF INDUSTRY.—For some time past the public have ceased to hear of this institution, whose name had become associated with the manufacture of "superior kyanised tents" by a respectable and thriving colony of rogues and thieves. We learn its days are at last numbered. A central jail is to be formed at Jubbulpore, which will absorb the "school," with its inmates; and Major Ranken, who is in charge of the latter, will become available for other employment.

FLOODING OF THE JUMNA.—We are informed that at Delhi, on the 5th March, the Jumna had risen three feet nine inches in a few hours, and that it was still rising when the telegram was despatched. This might, under certain circumstances, contain a formidable menace for the Jumna Bridge works here. The highest floods at Delhi, which correspond to a rise of forty-five or fifty feet at Allahabad, seldom exceed seven feet, so that the late rise of three and three-fourths feet there would represent, in the height of the rains, a rise here of fifteen or twenty feet—quite enough seriously to delay the completion of the railway bridge. But we are, luckily, not in the rains, and we have a staunch friend in evaporation. M. Babinet (de l'Institut) lately calculated that not a drop of the Seine's water, as seen at Paris, survives to pass the bridge at Mantes. The whole volume has been evaporated, and the stately Seine, as it appears at Mantes, is entirely the produce of tributaries. Were the Jumna to receive no reinforcements on this side of Delhi, its bed would be dry here, notwithstanding the formidable rise registered there. The question of danger depends on the level of the several affluences of the Jumna above Allahabad, as that level depends upon the extension and continuousness of the late rains. But, though showers have, no doubt, fallen almost everywhere, we do not apprehend that the rain-fall has been so widespread or lasting as to do much more than satisfy the demands of evaporation. We shall be surprised if the rise here is of more than six or seven feet; at any rate, since, at the present velocity of the stream, the flood will take more than nine days to traverse the course from Delhi to Allahabad, our railway engineers will have had time to take precautions against any great disaster.—Pioneer.

TONK.—Abdool Kureem Khan, brother of the late Nawab of Tonk, has preferred a claim to the chieftainship of that district. The Government, however, has already bestowed it on Mahomed Ally Khan, so that Abdool Kureem's ambition has manifested itself too late. The allowance of Rs. 12,500 per mensem enjoyed by the late Nawab does not pass on to his successor, but ceased with his death.

DHAR.—During the British administration of this State the project was conceived of constructing a road leading from the city of Dhar to the Bombay and Agra road, in the direction of the Nerbudda river, in place of the existing track across the Vindhya mountains, which was almost impassable for any vehicle but those of very light burden, whilst the call for a good highway was urgent, since Dhar lies on the direct route between Rajpootana and Bombay, and many merchants even preferred risking damage to their goods by descending the old Dhar ghat to paying the heavy tolls demanded by Holkar on merchandise passing through his dominions. Below the hills over which the new road is almost complete runs a deep ravine called the Konkrah Koh, or vale of separation, down which, during the monsoon, the waters rush in great volume and with immense impetuosity, and across this a bridge has been thrown, called now the Anund Row Bridge, after the name of the present Rajah. It consists of five arches of forty feet span each, but for elegance of build and beauty of situation will be surpassed by few in India. Dhar, it will be remembered, has now been restored, and the Rajah Anund Row, hearing that the bridge was complete, and being well versed in the manners and customs of Europeans, his Highness expressed a wish to open it in due form, and accordingly proceeded, attended by his Prime Minister and a numerous suite, to a village situated near the works. The bridge was gaily decorated with flags, and at four o'clock p.m. the Rajah, accompanied by the superintending engineer, Rajpootana circle, the executive engineer, the Prime Minister, and by other persons of note, arrived there mounted upon elephants and escorted by a regiment of cavalry. Upon a signal being given, the cavalry formed up at each end of the bridge, and the Rajah after viewing the work and complimenting the engineer and his subordinates, read a proclamation, which is too long to detail here, but the purport of which was, that the bridge was to be called henceforth and for ever the Anund Row Bridge, cocoanuts being broken upon the parapet when the name was pronounced in lieu of our custom of breaking a bottle of wine. At the end of the proclamation it was decreed that marble tables were to be let into the parapets, bearing inscriptions descriptive of the virtues of the Rajah and his executive engineer. The work-people, who had all attended dressed in their gala clothes, then scrambled for the remnants of the cocoanuts, and the meeting ended.—Hurkaru.

MANGOES.—An excellent crop of mangoes is expected this year in the country about Moradabad, which will be welcome intelligence to the community at Nynsee Tal. In Bengal there will be scarcely any at all during the approaching season, owing, first, to the destruction of full grown trees by the cyclone, and afterwards to the damage done by the recent hail storms to the blossoms on the few that had been spared.

MR. HUGH D. SANDEMAN, C.S., has been confirmed in his officiating appointment of Accountant-General, Bengal, in the room of Mr. J. L. Lushington, Madras C.S., appointed permanently to the Accountant-Generalship to the Bombay Government. The duties of Civil Paymaster (Mr. Sandeman's late substantive post) may now be considered to have been finally abolished.

MR. TEMPLE positively leaves for England in April, and Mr. Campbell, the Judicial Commissioner, will officiate as Chief Commissioner during his absence. Major Maxwell, chief engineer, has arrived at Nagpore and assumed charge of his duties.

AHMED-ULLA, who was recently convicted and sentenced to be hanged for the Wahabee affair at Patna, has, it is said, no intention to appeal against the sentence, his object being now to obtain martyrdom by a seeming acquiescence.

THE BUDDHUCKS AT JUBBULPORE.—There is a Thuggee Department in this interesting locality, "connected" with which, we do not understand how—are a set of people called "Buddhucks." They are characterised as "thievish," from which it is inferable that they are used as a sort of "decoy ducks" for getting hold of the real game. They seem to have privileges and immunities of their own, which must commend themselves to the admirers of the "non-regulation" mode of administration. The Buddhucks occupy quarters which constitute quite a sort of sanctum sanctorum, surrounded by a wall; and no police officer is authorised to enter the enclosure to search for property or thieves when a theft is reported. The police are compelled to abide their time when the stolen property is taken about for sale, and the chances are then many that one or more of the Buddhucks are found to be concerned in retaining the stolen property, if not in actually stealing it.

THE HIMALAYAS.—"The hills near are crowned with snow, and look like huge iced cakes, with trees and houses for their decorations. Cakes intended, no doubt, for the christening festival of some Titanic baby! Halfway down the hill sides nestle lovely downy clouds, making me think of the good old days when the Titans warred with the gods, and Jove pelted his antagonists with his beautiful fleecy clouds."

FAILURE OF MESSRS. LINE AND CO.—We (Athenæum) are very sorry to say that the state of our money market has not improved during the past fortnight. The American news still operates very unfavourably at the three presidencies, and has caused immense losses to speculators, particularly in cotton. The amount spoken of is almost fabulously large. One of our oldest mercantile firms, that of Messrs. Line and Co., has unhappily succumbed to the pressure, and it is said for a very large amount, but the loss will fall mainly on a wealthy China house, and be little felt at Madras. Messrs. Line and Co. state, in an explanatory circular, that their misfortune has been brought about, in a great measure, by recent and unlooked for depreciation in the value of Indian produce in the Home market. Their loss is deeply sympathised with by all classes here, and has caused considerable alarm in the trading community, especially among the natives, who speak freely of other failures likely to follow. We trust, however, the ill-rumours have arisen from a kind of panic, and will pass away, but there can be no question that many, perhaps most, of our merchants have burnt their fingers smartly with cotton.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE COOUM RIVER.—Colonel Boileau, R.E., Superintending Engineer of the fourth division, has brought again under the notice of the Madras Government the question of the improvement of the Cooum river, the provision of a proper outlet for its surplus waters during the rainy season, the retention of those which it is expedient not to have discharged, and the erection of a wrought iron lattice bridge near the mouth of the stream. Government, however, are of opinion that these projects must be regarded simultaneously with the following collateral questions which had been previously referred to Mr. Fraser for investigation:—

First. The supply of water to Madras from the Red-hill Lake.

Second. The supply of water from the Adyar river.

Third. The construction of a fresh water canal from the Adyar to the Cooum, in continuation of the Southern Canal, but at a higher level.

6. Mr. Fraser, C.E., will be directed to bring these subjects together as speedily as possible, so that the whole question may come before the Government, and the bridge over the Cooum be dealt with as part of the general project, and not as a separate matter.

We regret that Sir William Denison should persevere in his determination to defer the commencement of any of these important works until the whole complicated scheme shall have been examined and reported on, as a considerable time must needs elapse before Mr. Fraser can dispose of all the branches of it, and Madras will thus be further kept waiting indefinitely for those improvements which are so essential to her welfare. The Red Hill water supply project, to which his Excellency himself affords the foremost place, has been amply considered and reported on, and might be put in execution forthwith independently of the other branches of the Governor's comprehensive plan, the carrying out of which will involve an expenditure so vast that it is very unlikely means will be found for the purpose; especially if the apprehensions entertained of a deficit in the Exchequer should be verified by the event.—Athenæum.

COMPUTATION OF SERVICE.—Mr. G. A. Harris, Civil and Session Judge of Coimbatore, recently requested to be favoured with the ruling of the Government upon the following point, viz., whether or not he is entitled to retain his present appointment five years from date of appointment, i.e., October, 1863. He was informed (demi-officially) by the Civil Paymaster that such is the case, under paragraph 199 (Section XXIX.) Covenanted Service Rules; because in September, 1863, he was appointed to the new office of Civil and Session Judge, Ootacamund, and was subsequently permitted to exchange to his present appointment. The following order, dated March 8, was passed on Mr. Harris's letter:—"The Governor in Council is clearly of opinion that Mr. G. A. Harris will not be entitled to retain his appointment after the 25th July, 1866, on which date he will have completed 35 years' service; the period of service in such cases being taken to commence from the date of arrival in India, as laid down in the despatch of the late Court of Directors, under date the 19th December, 1855, re-published in the Port Saint George Gazette of the 28th March, 1856. The transfer of Mr. Harris in 1863 from the Civil and Session Court at Chittoor, first to the Court at Ootacamund, and subsequently to that at Coimbatore, both which transfers were made in accordance with his wish, forms no ground for extending, in his case, the period to which the retention of office by Covenanted Civil Servants is limited."

Mr. T. I. P. Harris, Civil and Session Judge of Trichinopoly, on the 28th February, requested the Chief Secretary to submit the following for the consideration of the Right Honourable the Governor in Council:—"Being desirous of ascertaining, the date on which my thirty-five years' service in India expires, I addressed a demi-official letter to the Civil Paymaster on the subject, and beg to enclose copy of a reply from the Chief Assistant Civil Paymaster in charge. It will be seen therefrom that the time is computed, by the above officer, from the day I was appointed a Covenanted Civil Servant on the Establishment, viz., the 22nd April, 1831, and that, in his opinion, I shall have completed the said thirty-five years' service on the 21st April, 1866. In conformity with chapter 2, paragraph 201 of the 'Civil Auditor's Manual,' my time of service counts from the date of my arrival in the country, viz., the 5th November, 1831, and on the 5th November, 1866, 35 years will have expired. On the other hand, a reference to the last published Civil list shows that my actual residence on service amounts only to 30 years, up to the 31st December last, and that 35 years service will not be completed till the 9th December, 1869. I would, therefore, request Government will be pleased to decide as to the exact date when the period in question actually ends." Government ruled that the period of service referred to in the rule, which limits a civil servant's retention in employment to 35 years, counts from the date of arrival in the country. In Mr. Harris's case, from the 5th November, 1831.

COCHIN LIGHTHOUSE.—We are informed by the Madras Times that the Government have taken into practical consideration the advisability of erecting a new lighthouse at Cochin, one of the most rising ports in Southern India. It appears that for many years the light was exhibited from the topmost cross-trees of a flag-staff erected on a tower which forms a solitary and interesting relic of a spacious church, said to have been built by Vasco de Gama, and to have been for a short time the resting place of his body. When the Dutch seized the town they converted the building into a granary or godown, and subsequently on the British capturing the place the venerable pile (with the exception of the tower) was ruthlessly destroyed by gunpowder, simultaneously with the fortifications that surrounded the town. Since then, or for about sixty years, the tower has been made use of in the manner described, although it has been frequently represented that a port like Cochin deserved some more efficient provision for the convenience of the shipping. In December 1863 the flag-staff was destroyed by lightning, and since then the light has been exhibited as a temporary measure from a lower elevation. Captain Castor, the zealous master attendant at the port, recommends the erection of an entirely new light-house, and the purchase with that view of the materials of a light-house now lying for sale at Galle, originally intended for the Besses, and as the Cochin Port Fund shows a balance at its credit at the present time of nearly Rs. 14,000, the collector of the district strongly supports the scheme. The Superintendent of Marine suggests the erection of a granite column, in height about eighty feet, at a point near the sea, not intercepted by coconut trees, and recommends that a Cladioptric light should be obtained to be visible over 180 degrees of the compass. Orders have accordingly been issued to the superintending engineer to report on the strength of the old tower, the nature of the foundation, what additional weight it is calculated to bear, and whether a light iron frame to carry the light would not be sufficient. He is requested to bear in mind that the Government are not disposed to expend any considerable sum upon the work from Imperial funds.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE HON. W. E. FRERE, brother of the Governor of Bombay, and member of the Legislative Council of the Presidency, is about to return to England after a very lengthened residence in India, and the Bombay branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, of which he was the president, and of which he had been a member for thirty-three years, has presented him with an address on the occasion of his resignation of the society's chair. The society has also requested him to sit to the sculptor Woolner for his bust, which is to be placed in the society's rooms. Mr. Frere has been president for eleven years, and to him the museum owes many of its possessions, and it is also to his zeal and painstaking industry that the society's collection of coins has been classified, and that it is hardly to be surpassed in India. Steps are being taken to present the honourable gentleman with a more substantial token of his connection with India.

CLERK OF THE CROWN.—The Hon. the Chief Justice of the High Court has appointed Mr. John Marriot, barrister-at-law, Clerk of the Crown, in room of Mr. A. R. Scoble, resigned. The appointment is subject to the sanction of his Excellency the Governor in Council.

MR. MANECKJEE CURSETJEE, Third Judge of the Bombay Small Cause Court, has obtained one year's leave to proceed to England by the first mail steamer in April next.

MR. SAMUEL MANSFIELD, Commissioner in Sind, it is believed, will be called into the Bombay Council on the departure of the Hon. Mr. Frere.

A COSTLY ARTICLE.—It is stated that the most elaborate and exquisite specimen of the jeweller's art ever exhibited in Bombay is now on view at the office of Messrs. F. N. Wadia and Co., Borah Bazaar-street. It is a Miroir de-Toilette, set in a perfect blaze of gems, produced by the most tasteful combination of jewels of every name. While there is no class of precious stones which is not represented in this master-piece of jewellery, diamonds, rubies, emeralds, sapphires, and royal opals are most conspicuous; and the profusion of them is such as not only to give an enormous value to the article, but to produce the most brilliant effect that can be conceived. The Miroir de Toilette was made to order for the Pasha of Egypt, and exhibited at the last International Exhibition in London. It has been entrusted to the Messrs. Wadia for sale.

THE BAR GRIEVANCE.—The following is the finding of the judges in reference to the question recently raised as to the right of an English barrister to address the High Court on the appellate side in the English language when a vakeel is opposed to him:—"In the case of the appeal No. 49 of 1863 the chief justice is of opinion, in which all the judges concur, that the acting registrar was not warranted in placing the case in the barristers' list until he had ascertained that the pleading on each side could be held in English, or until he had a special order from the Court, and that this mistake should have been rectified by ordering the cause to be removed from the list in which it was into that of the other Court, the language of which is the vernacular, and we, accordingly, now order this to be done."

DOGS AND BHATTIAS.—With a view to destroy those pests in every native city, the street dogs, the police of Kurrachee have taken to poisoning them, which has awakened the active sympathies of the Bhattia community on behalf of the persecuted animals. These people held a meeting the other day, at which it was resolved to raise a fund to pay rewards to persons who should bring live dogs to a depot they have established in the town, at the rate of four annas for a full-grown pariah and two annas for a pup. This depot is near the hay stacks. Already a sum of Rs. 300 has been subscribed. As soon as two or three hundred dogs are collected together, they will be shipped by country boat to that canine Eden, Cutch. The Bhattias have placed the sum of Rs. 50 at the disposal of the Fouzdar to reward persons who may bring in live dogs.

THE RAMPART REMOVAL COMMITTEE.—The Government of India have sent an order to the Bombay Government for the abolition of the office of the Rampart Removal Committee.

BOMBAY MECHANICS' INSTITUTION.—Government have granted a site on the Esplanade, near the infantry lines, for the erection of a spacious building for the accommodation of the Bombay Mechanics' Institution.

BRIGADIER GENERAL HEYLAND, C.B., commanding at Ahmednugger, is posted to the Belgaum brigade.

H.M.'s SCREW STEAMER "RAPID", Commander C. S. Jago, 11 guns, arrived in harbour on the 14th March, from the coast of Africa.

THE HON. A. J. LEWIS, Advocate General, has been granted six months' leave, on private affairs, to proceed to Europe.

WE (Standard) understand that Mirza Synd Hussain Ali, Mirza Synd Hoosein Ali, and Mirza Synd Mahommed Ali, the Moorshedabad Princes lately arrived in this country, with Lieut.-colonel Herbert, will honour the Civil Service Rifle Volunteers with their presence at the annual regimental ball to be given at Willis's-rooms.

MADAGASCAR.—Mr. Consul Pakenham has transmitted to the Foreign-office an account of Madagascar and its trade. This island, in area somewhat larger than France, has a population estimated at 5,000,000, of whom about 5,000 profess Christianity. Madagascar is traversed longitudinally by two principal chains of mountains; the climate on the table lands is generally healthy; the interior is well watered, but by streams navigable only for pirogues. The capital, Antananarivo, is situate about the centre of the island, and is the residence of the Sovereign; it is supposed to contain about 80,000 inhabitants. Owing to an idea that the best means of preserving the country from foreign invasion is to have no roads, none have ever been made, and travellers as well as merchandise for the interior have to be conveyed over extensive tracts on men's shoulders. There is an ancient law in force which prohibits people on pain of death from digging up the earth in search of precious metals, but copper, mercury, iron, and coal mines are known to exist, and gold and silver are found in some parts of the island. The soil is very fertile, producing almost without cultivation indigo, tobacco, rice, sugar-cane, manioc, yams, potatoes, and beans. Coffee grows well in some parts, but so little attention has hitherto been paid to its culture that the greater part of that consumed is imported. The Consul reported that experiments made to grow cotton had not as yet proved successful. There is no direct trade between Great Britain and Madagascar. The imports on the west coast of the island consist chiefly of cotton cloths, and articles of hardware, brought in Arab dhows from Zanzibar and Bombay, which take as return cargo partly, hides, ebony, and orchilla weed, as well as bullocks in small numbers for the Comoro Islands. The trade with the east coast is almost exclusively in the hands of a few merchants at the Mauritius and Réunion, and is principally carried on by British vessels belonging to the former colony and one steamer belonging to Réunion. Tamatave, on the east coast of Madagascar, is the chief emporium of trade with the Mauritius; there are about 250 foreign settlers in this town. The Customs' duties are 20 per cent. on exports (except animals, which pay a fixed duty) and 10 per cent. on imports, but the import duty on liquor is one-third. The import duties are levied in kind. The British trade with this vast island is quite in its infancy. Nine-tenths of the imports consist of clothing and liquors, and nine-tenths of the exports of oxen and other animals and rice. The exports from Madagascar into the Mauritius in the year 1863 were of the value of £103,126; in 1859 they amounted only to £56,015. But the imports from the Mauritius into Madagascar in 1863 fell to only £22,654, owing to political causes and the high price of cotton goods, the convulsion of the American continent thus shaking the trade of this distant and retired island. But a larger trade could not fairly be expected considering the previous rigid exclusion of the people from exterior communication under the rule of Queen Ranavaloa.
